Fine Idea, Says Germany.
Important Meetings.
Four That Could Rule.
One $710,000,000 Item.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

ENGLAND, FRANCE, ITALY, etc., decided not to pay the United States.

Germany says: "A good idea," and decides not to pay anybody at least, not for six months. A six months "moratorium," meaning "no money to be paid."

You will hear "moaning at the bar," and a good deal of it, when Europe's professional defaulters find that they are to get from Germany a taste of their own medicine.

FEW NEWSPAPERS yesterday failed to print more pictures, more words, more guesses as to the winner, in connection with last night's heavyweight prize-fight, Carnera-Baer, than were printed on any other subject.

We all love peace, decency. Even pugilistic assault and battery, with gate-receipt accompaniment, is not always approved. But last night's meeting between two heavy, dull prize-fighters interests more Americans than yesterday's meeting between Mussolini and Hitler. Newspapers know it, and act accordingly.

WHAT HITLER and Mussolini said to each other will never be known, unless, as is probable, one or both write their memoirs, and tell about it. If Stalin and Kemal Pasha could have been at the meeting the real power of Europe would have been there, for among them the four could control any situation. Kemal is not the least important, for, holding Istanbul and the Dardanelles, he could open or close the gate of the Mediterranean to Russian power.

THE HITLER-MUSSOLINI meeting may prove to be important overwhelmingly. What do you consider up to now the meeting most important in its effect on the human race, excluding, of course, the meeting of Eve and the snake. That changed everything for all of us?

There have been dramatic meetings, as when Stanley met Livingston in the wilds of Africa; Columbus landed and met his first group of Indians, who little suspected what the white people would do to them; Ulysses crawled up out of the water to meet the beautiful Nausicaa; Satan, approaching the door of hell, met sin and death sitting on either side, etc.

Millions of interesting meetings, not forgetting Orpheus and Eurydice in the lower regions, and the unfortunate Francesca, meeting her lover in hell, and, according to Dante, happy in spite of the heat, because she was going to be with him forever. Also, perhaps, because she knew her jealous husband was suffering, one floor lower down. But, which is the most important of all meetings to us human creatures of circumstances?

THE MEETING of Hitler and Mussolini reminds you that it is still possible, even in "effete Europe," for men to rise from low down to high up.

Mussolini ruling Italy is the son of a blacksmith. Hitler, absolute ruler of Germany, was a house painter who found it hard to make a living.

THE NATIONAL DEBT of the United States had risen to a "new high" for all time, namely, to twenty-seven thousand million dollars, a debt twenty-seven times as big as it was before the big war started.

Wars are expensive, especially when with simple-hearted idiocy you lend money to dear friends in Europe.

Paying interest on that twenty-seven billion debt, at the rate of only three per cent, will cost Uncle Sam or American taxpayers seven hundred and ten million dollars a year, a sum almost equal to the national debt before 1914, forty per cent more than the total cost of running the government for a whole year when Tom Reed said extravagance would ruin us.

NOT CONTENT with mere "inflation," this government is inflating with bonds that bear interest, and at the present moment that "conservative inflation" puts one single item of seven hundred and ten million dollars a year on the taxpayers' backs.

A United States government bond, mind you, no longer payable in gold, has nothing but the government's name and is no better than a greenback with

GIRL'S BODY CREMATED BY VET

Sharon Man Tells of Finding Child Dead From Fumes

SHARON, Pa., June 15.—Homer Sanders, 45, adjutant of the Sharon American Legion Post and former school teacher, was held by police here today in connection with the disappearance of 4-year-old Leah Minerva Dilley, missing since June 3 and thought to have been kidnaped.

Sharon police said Sanders had confessed that he cremated the child's body after he had found Leah dead in the basement of a home he had fumigated.

Sanders was said to have collapsed and confessed to City Detective William Thomas when the policeman sought to question the former teacher about a blanket reported stolen by a neighbor.

HUNT FOR BODY

Immediately after Sanders' arrest, a squad of detectives accompanied by him left for a field near Sharpsville where the police said Sanders confessed he had cremated the child's body.

Sanders, the police reported, confessed that he destroyed the body to remove all traces of it

Steel Workers Congratulating William Green

UNION DELEGATES LEAVING THEIR CONVENTION SEATS TO CONGRATULATE WILLIAM GREEN ON HIS PEACE PLAN

The scene at the downtown Elks' Club today after Mr. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, had outlined to some 200 delegates to the Amalgamated strike convention his four-point plan to avert a strike, maintain peace in steel industry.

4-POINT PEACE PACT URGED ON STEEL UNION HERE

Prospects for an early settlement of the labor controversy in the nation's steel industry went aglimmering today when it was announced that a four-point peace proposal of William Green, American Federation of Labor president, would be sent to a special committee of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers' convention for consideration.

A strike vote of the convention will be deferred, it was revealed by the amalgamated's president, Michael F. Tighe, until after the peace plan has been subjected to a "most rigid study and perusal by all of the delegates."

The plan, in brief, follows:

1—An impartial board of three members to be appointed by the President to adjust all violations of code, mediate and conciliate any dispute; offer services as arbitrators; hear and determine any matter of discrimination or discharge of employe.

2—Insure the right of workers to organize freely, clothing the board with authority to hold elections under the board's supervision.

3—All grievances or complaints to be referred to the board for final decision.

4—If accepted by all parties—the steel workers, the operators and the government—then the strike should be called off."

MANY FAVOR PLAN

A large number of the delegates seemed to regard Green's plan with favor as they left the hall for the noon recess. They had asked Green many questions and the federation president promised to return to the afternoon session to answer any other questions.

Many delegates had formed no opinion and were withholding judgment until they received printed copies of the proposal, but it seemed probable that a motion to postpone the strike, at least for a week, would be made either late today or tomorrow.

One of the delegates was heard to say:

"The plan is all right, but it doesn't go far enough. We must have a 'check-off' on the payroll."

Another delegate said two of the members of the board ought to be members of Roosevelt's cabinet, or else that two men with labor experience should be on it.

The majority apparently viewed it as a step in the right direction.

The plan, according to an announcement by Michael F. Tighe, president of the Amalgamated, would be sent to committee this

IL DUCE, HITLER SIGN NO PACT

VENICE, June 15.—(AP.)—Germany will not return to the Geneva disarmament conference despite conversations between Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini, German correspondents were told at a press conference this afternoon.

The conference, to which only German newspapermen were admitted, took place immediately after Hitler's return from his second meeting with Mussolini.

The correspondents were told no accord would be signed as a result of the meeting, although the premiers found themselves in agreement on many points.

Nothing was decided with reference to disarmament, it was said, although diplomatic conversations between Germany and Italy on this subject will continue.

With reference to a possible Italian-German bloc to offset French and Russian blocs, correspondents were told no such step is being planned.

The German newspapermen were told that the chief value of the meetings was to establish a personal contact which the chiefs of the two nations believe will be valuable in the future.

Anna Dall Reno Bound, Daughter of President Believed After Divorce

'Sistie' and 'Buzzie' Accompany Her to Tahoe Estate

RENO, Nev., June 15.—(AP.)—Mrs. Anna Dall, daughter of President Roosevelt, is establishing residence here and it was assumed divorce proceedings were in prospect.

Mrs. Dall has leased a home at Lake Tahoe.

The daughter of the President has been separated from her husband for more than a year.

Mr. and Mrs. Dall were married in June, 1926.

QUITS CAPITAL

Mrs. Dall was not available here today, but it was understood she was en route to this city. She and her children left Washington yesterday.

Shortly after the Roosevelts entered the White House, Elliott Roosevelt, a son, left for the West Coast, established a residence at Lake Tahoe and was divorced by Elizabeth Donner Roosevelt, of Philadelphia, at Minden, Nev. She won the decree on a cross complaint which he did not contest. A few days later, in Burlington, Ia., he was married to Miss Ruth Googins, of Fort Worth, Tex.

Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, the only daughter of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, was married to Curtis B. Dall at the Roosevelts' Hyde Park home. A three-months' trip to Europe was their wedding trip.

BIRDMEN TO SEE OCEAN PLANE

A Lithuanian airman, who will attempt to cross the Atlantic over the same route which previously cost the lives of two countrymen, will be here Saturday for the Junior Birdmen's Air Pageant at Municipal Airport.

He is Lieut. Felix Vaitkus, of the United States Army. He is bringing the plane in which he will attempt to fly to Kaunus, Lithuania. In a previous attempt by two other Lithuanian fliers, the plane crashed in Germany and both pilots were killed.

Additional features for the pageant continued to roll up today and Lieut. Corley McDarment, commandant of Rodgers Field, who will be master of ceremonies for the air spectacle, declared himself greatly encouraged at the prospects for the show.

He said, with favorable weather, he believed a crowd of from 6,000 to 8,000 could be expected and that one of the finest events ever held for air-minded Pittsburghers would be the result of present plans.

POLICE PROBERS HEAR M'GOVERN

Police corruption, vice and racksteering could be eliminated by centralizing police authority in one head and putting the right man on the job, County Commissioner C. C. McGovern told the Police Research Commission today.

McGovern declared:

"You can catch one man. You can't hide the trail of money."

McGovern denounced members of City Council and other city officials and political leaders for playing politics with the police force.

He declared the enforcement of the law has become a matter of politics. He said:

"Police on the beat used to regulate vice. Then the commissioned officers and finally the superintendent of police did.

"Then it got up to the directors and finally went out of the department altogether.

"It became a matter for political bosses, particularly those who were to collect campaign funds."

Reeves Made Fleet Chief With Pomp

NEW YORK, June 15.—(INS.)—High command of the United States fleet passed from Admiral David Foote Sellers to Admiral Joseph Mason Reeves today in a colorful ceremony on the flagship Pennsylvania, marked by the boom of 17-gun salutes and the glitter of most of this country's admiralty gold braid.

Day After Battle Finds 'Maxie' Reformed; Says He'll Save Money

Champ 'New Man', Only Sweetheart Is Mother

International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Maxie Baer, the new heavyweight boxing champion woke up today—a new man.

He psycho-analyzed himself. Called himself a Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde. Said he was care-free and heart-free. Said he had spent $100,000 on women but that was all over his left shoulder. Said he was going to save his money.

The first playboy of the lights inside and outside the ring declared emphatically the only sweetheart he had was his mother.

About the fight? He grinned:

"Gee, I thought that guy would never stay down."

Max was referring to the Italian man mountain, Primo Carnera, who was rolled down into the valley of ex-champions in the eleventh round last night.

'SHANTY TOWN' BURNS DOWN

Father James R. Cox's "Shantytown," a familiar sight to Pittsburghers during the past four years, went up in smoke today.

The 242 wooden shacks at Seventeenth street and Liberty avenue had housed an average of 150 Shantytown "citizens" during the depression. The shacks were fired by city firemen, following the transfer a week ago of the residents to the old Ralston School building, Fifteenth street and Penn avenue.

When the flames, which sometimes shot 50 feet into the air, threatened to damage electric cables in Liberty avenue and surrounding property, fire engines were called to place them under control.

Hopkins Summons Pinchot on Relief

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(INS.)—Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Relief Administrator, would not comment today on the report that he has insisted upon a special session of the Pennsylvania Legislature. He said:

"I have asked Gov. Pinchot to come in and see me again about the Pennsylvania situation and that is all I can say."

McNair's Wife Along To See He Keeps Quiet

Self-imposed censorship kept Mayor McNair from speaking at today's meeting of the Henry George Club. He explained confidentially to a reporter:

"My wife came along today to see if I said all the things the papers say I do. I promised not to say a word."

So Mrs. McNair was on hand to hear Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnston describe her husband as:

"A western breeze blowing through the city."

Johnston renewed his stand against political patronage and averred that there wouldn't be any in his department as long as he was the director, stating:

"I don't believe jobs should be given to people who worked for McNair just to get jobs."

High Polish Official Victim of Assassins

WARSAW, June 15.—(INS.)—Col. Bronislaw Pieracki, Polish minister of the interior, was assassinated this afternoon by two unidentified men who poured a volley of shots into his head, and escaped in a crowd.

Col. Pieracki was the host of Dr. Joseph Paul Goebbels, German minister of propaganda and right hand man to Chancellor Adolf Hitler, during Goebbels' stay in Warsaw.

M'Clure Rum Case Wiped From Records

PHILADELPHIA, June 15.—(AP.)—Federal Judge George A. Welsh today wrote "discharged" across the court record of the McClure prohibition conspiracy case last fall. State Senator John J. McClure and 58 other persons were convicted of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law and McClure was sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment and $10,000 fine.

The Circuit Court of Appeals later ruled that the case came within the Supreme Court decision that all liquor prosecutions pending on the date of repeal of the prohibition law were outlawed.

MAX 'NEW MAN' DAY AFTER BATTLE

Shuns Girls, Intends To Save Cash, New Champ Says

thespian, George M. Cohan, by shouting:

"Give my regards to Hollywood, boys, and tell all the gals I'll be there."

With the sweat of battle still glistening on his body, with thousands of maniacs drunk with the lust of carnage fighting outside his dressing room, the curly headed champion's first thought was for the ladies and the films. He was even wearing the dressing gown he wore in his last picture.

A great fighter some of the time, but an actor first, last and all the time.

HEADS FOR 'MIKE'

Let's open the door of the dressing room. Here he comes, a squadron of police mauling their way through a howling mob to get him into the room. He comes in smiling and immediately heads instinctively for the microphone awaiting him there.

Jack Dempsey is talking but hands over the "mike" to the cool, smiling and unruffled Californian. In a few well chosen words he reassures his mother in Denver, expresses his satisfaction over bringing the title back to America, compliments Dempsey, pays tribute to Carnera's gameness, advises the fans to listen in to his next broadcast—still the business man, you see—introduces his dad and then—

"For heaven's sake, will somebody bring me a beer. I want a beer."

KISSES HIS DAD

He grabs his dad around the neck and kisses him, then stretches out on the rubbing table. His brother, Bud, reaches over and kisses him. He grabs Dempsey and kisses him, and the sports writers, looking dubious, begin to shy off. Max joshes them:

"Don't worry, boys, no more kisses now until I meet the ladies. Where's that beer? Will somebody bring me a— What's that? Oh, sure, I'll give him another fight. Fight anybody. He was a cinch. I hope my first million is just as easy."

He grins impishly and winks.

"Too bad I wasn't in condition, eh? Ask Commissioner Brown if I didn't look pretty good for a big bum?"

(He was quoting the commissioner on that one.)

"No, Primo never hurt me. I thought I was in one of those Hollywood clinches, though, every time he dragged me to the floor with him. What a sucker he was for a right hand. Also a left. But, boy, can he take it!

LIKE SAND BAG

"Why didn't I finish him the first three rounds? Well, say, you try punching a big sand bag as hard as you can for a minute and see how you're puffing. That's some job, and he's just as big and"—he smiled happily—"just as easy to hit. Say, I hit him with everything but the waterbucket, didn't I? And look at me, not a mark on me. Tell those fellows in the picture business that Mrs. Baer's little boy, Maxie, still looks pretty good for those films."

The California Adonis did not retire until 4:30 o'clock this morning and as "Papa" Baer chased off crashers, the new champion was snoring loudly today while reporters and photographers waited for him to get out of bed.

MERCY PLANES FLY TO RESCUE

COLON, Panama, June 15.—(AP.)—Fourteen United States military planes took off today on two missions of mercy—a search for castaway sailors and a dash with medical supplies to stricken El Salvador.

Three of the planes were units of the Navy. They left Coco Solo at 5:30 a. m. to search along the Nicaraguan coastline for the 17 or 18 sailors reported afloat in a lifeboat following the destruction by fire Sunday of the Norwegian freighter, Knut Hamsun.

The Army asisgned 11 of its big bombers to the other errand and they took off from France Field for San Salvador carrying medicine, relief supplies, and even tents for, with 3,000 reported dead in the Republic of El Salvador, the living are said to be in danger from disease and lack of housing.

A New Kind of 'Muscling In'? By QUIN HALL

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

MADISON SQUARE BOWL, LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y., June 15.—About fifty-five thousand fight watchers are sitting, in a shallow, circular bowl around a brilliantly lighted ring.

The two big ones are making their way through the crowd. Carnera arrives before Baer. Little applause for him, although he is world champion. In New York's population foreign champions are not popular. Baer will be here soon. Perhaps he will be a little "cagey" and let Carnera wait, hoping to irritate his nervous system. Huge creature, Carnera, but he does not look as well as he did at Miami, when he last appeared in public.

Here comes Baer, much warmer greeting for him than for Carnera. He wears a yellow wrapper, with "Steve Morgan" printed on the back. That gown he wore as a sailor in the navy, in moving pictures.

One minute of sparring, a hard blow and down goes Carnera. Much distressed. Round ends. Second round begins "like a barroom fight." Both men go down together. They get up and both go down again. Baer makes it a point to laugh at the big Italian. Baer's friends declare that Carnera pulled him down, when they both went to the floor together. End of the second round.

Baer seems to hit harder, more effectively. Third of the fifteen rounds. Carnera goes down again, up at once. Another round ends, the men in their corners are rubbed, massaged, gargle their throats.

Baer has much the quicker mind, and needs it, for in spite of his six feet two and a half and his two hundred and ten pounds, he is small, compared with Carnera, six feet six and a half, weight two hundred and sixty-three pounds.

Sixth round starts. Baer walks to Carnera's corner and rubs Carnera's resin on his own shoes. Baer varies his sarcastic grinning by making most fearful faces at Carnera, as he rushes in to deliver his blows.

Thus far in the fight, according to the experts, Baer is the winner.

The eighth round has started. Baer seems a little tired, not at all discouraged, even after Carnera landed a heavy blow on the side of Baer's head.

Carnera reaching for Baer slipped and fell, looking much embarrassed. Baer laugned, neglecting an opportunity to do useful work for himself, as Carnera rose.

Baer, good actor, waggles his head, pretending to be dizzy, then laughs. Strange creature, not very serious, considering his present occupation. End of ninth round.

Carnera is groggy, down, up, down again, getting up, down, up, goes to the wrong corner, as the bell rings and saves him for the moment.

Carnera down again, always rises instantly, instead of taking a count of eight or nine to recover.

Carnera seems unable to hurt Baer, who now is ahead on points. Carnera rises from another knockdown and suddenly quits, saying:

"I'm in bad shape."

The referee holds Baer's hands up in the air and yells:

"The new world's champion."

Those that forced the odds to so sudden a change were apparently wise. Commissioner of Boxing Brown, who said Baer was in no condition to fight, was wrong.

The fighting is over. Carnera has left the ring, Baer stays to smile and do a few dance steps.

There will be some more fighting. The broadcasters beside the ring are yelling into their microphones, trying to make the fight more savage than it was, which is not easy.

Baer Tarries to Smile and Dance Few Steps

"Again we ask a-loud," to quote a poet who never saw a fight, "why in the name of glory are they proud?"

Alexander the Great had the same thought, after he had taken the city of Miletus, once Greek, conquered by Persia, reconquered by Alexander. The citizens proudly showed the great conqueror many statues of great athletes of Miletus, winners of prizes in the Olympic games.

Alexander, turning away, asked coldly, "Where were those champions, when you passed under the yoke of the Persians?"

It is eleven, standard time, dark night, nice weather, cool breeze. Your narrator goes home, leaving two young gentlemen fighting a "semi-final." So far as the narrator is concerned, the rest is silence.

Plane Comes Back To Get Fight Fans

Speeding to Pittsburgh from Steubenville, O., to catch the plane for New York, and the Carnera-Baer fight, Dr. C. B. Terwillegar and Hugo Chestosky arrived at the County Airport 10 minutes late. The Central Airlines plane, then flying over Latrobe, was called back to Pittsburgh and Dr. Terwillegar and Chestosky saw the new champion crowned.

Ex-Wife of Baer Silent on Battle

HOLLYWOOD, June 15—(INS.)—Dorothy Dunbar film actress and ex-wife of Max Baer, the new world's champion, today refused to comment on Baer's newest feat.

A few days ago Miss Dunbar declared that she was "not interested" in the fight.

MA SOCKS RADIO AS MAX DOWNS CARNERA

'Whooie! Kill 'Em, Boy! Hit Him in Pantry!' Cries Mrs. Baer

DENVER, June 15.—(AP.)—Two Baers, Ma and Max, fought Primo Carnera last night.

After that wild first round Ma was as dripping wet with perspiration, undoubtedly, as the new champion, her "baby." When the end came in the eleventh round she was too weak to stand and cried, almost hysterically, on the battered radio.

She whispered hoarsely:

"God bless you, Honeyboy. God bless you, Mickey, you said you'd bring home the bacon, and it was a whole hog you trotted in."

About two dozen other Baers stood around and cried with her.

Long before the fight started Ma seated herself at the radio and twiddled the dials. When the first round started she turned it on full blast.

ATTA BOY, MICKEY!

It was a dialogue, like this:

"Atta boy, Mickey. Sock 'em."

"Carnera landed a right on Baer's chest."

"You can take it Max. Sock 'em."

"Baer landed one to the body. Carnera was knocked backward. Carnera claims the blow was low."

"Boo-looney! Boo-looney! It was above the belt."

"Baer is backing away. He's having trouble with his trunks and is pulling at them."

"He's probably got them pants on backward. He did that once before and won the battle. Don't let your panties worry you, Honey."

"Whoole! Whoole! Kill 'em Max. Wade in there."

"That a boy, Honey. Smile. Hit him in the pantry."

"Carnera is down. He was knocked into the ropes."

FISH BOWL TOTTERS

At this point Ma got excited and landed several blows in the region where a solar plexus would be if a radio had one. A gold fish bowl on the radio tottered and would have crashed to the floor if one of the Baers had not rescued it.

Then came the eleventh round. The radio said:

"Carnera is down. Baer is pleading with the referee to end the slaughter."

"That a boy Max. You always did have a big heart."

There was so much cheering in the Baer house the radio was drowned and it was several moments after the fight before the Baers realized they had a new champion in the family.

They all cried.

The radio broke into the din of the Baer home to announce that Max was going to say a word. The voice came:

"Hello, Mom."

But it went out and that was all of Max's voice she heard.

Ma said:

"See, I told you. He is always thinking of his old Mom. It was the first thing he thought of after the scrap. He's a great kid."

Wheelbarrow Trip Won on Fight Bet

Carnera lost. So did Gochnour. The pay-off was that Gochnour was to haul James Steinbauer, of 3001 Cobden street, in a wheelbarrow from the South Side to Brentwood, thence to downtown Pittsburgh, via the Liberty Tubes, and return.

DEATH OF GIRL HUNTED DAYS REVEALED

after he had found the little girl dead in the basement of the home of Mrs. George Bregg, a neighbor whose home had been fumigated.

The police said Sanders told about fumigating the home on Sunday morning, June 3. When he went back that afternoon, the police quoted him as saying, he found the child dead.

Alarmed by his discovery, Sanders, the police related, took the body home to his garage and hid it under a blanket. The next morning, his purported confession said, he took the body to the field and burned it.

Sanders' implication in the mysterious disappearance of the missing girl came as a surprise to the police.

BLURTS OUT STORY

Suddenly, the detective said, Sanders collapsed and blurted out his startling story.

The child had been believed to have been kidnaped or probably slain by a moron.

Her father, George L. Dilley, was released from the Allegheny County Workhouse to join in the search for the missing child shortly after her disappearance.

SENATE SPEEDS HOUSING BILL

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(AP.)—The last of the bills marked for approval before Congress adjourns emerged from committee today when the Senate Banking Committee approved the administration Housing bill designed to provide funds for home construction and repair.

The bill, hailed as the cornerstone of the coming administration drive to revive capital goods and building industries, was approved by the committee without a record vote in substantially the form submitted by President Roosevelt.

Despite signs of Republican opposition on the floor of the Senate, the committee voted 11 to 7 to retain the disputed proposal for creation of $5,000,000 national mortgage associations as a kind of "federal reserve system" for discounting mortgage paper.

There was no record vote on final approval of the bill, which leaders hope to send to the White House in time for adjournment of Congress Saturday.

TUGWELL WINS FINAL TEST

WASHINTON, June 15.—(AP.)—Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, just confirmed as Undersecretary of Agriculture, leaves early next week on a trip to the heart of the farm lands.

Tugwell's promotion from assistant secretary, bitterly fought in a spectacular hearing and debate, received the approval of the Senate late yesterday, 53 to 24.

Supporters of Tugwell rejoiced in what they believed to be an overwhelming victory for policies he championed. He had been assailed as "radical" and defended as a good example of brains in government.

Reports had been current that the former Columbia professor would resign unless confirmed. Now that turbulence stirred by the opposition of Senators Smith (Dem.), of South Carolina, and Byrd (Dem.), of Virginia, had subsided, he prepared for his trip into the West, planned sometime ago.

Plan Shuttle Line For Closed Bridge

The Pittsburgh Railways Company today announced that within 10 days a shuttle service across the Sixty-second Street Bridge will be provided for passengers on No. 94 street car line. Three busses will be used.

County Commissioners a week ago banned street cars and heavy trucks from the bridge when they placed a 10,000-pound limit for the structure. Repairs are now being made on the span which will be completed by September.

Heart Attack Kills East Liberty Man

George Schurer, 55, of 5627 Broad street, collapsed while talking with his stepdaughter, Mrs. Alice Evans, of 6300 Marchand street, in his home last night and was pronounced dead a short time later in Pittsburgh Hospital, police reported. Death was probably due to a heart attack.

Clairton Worker Crushed by Cars

U. S. Vet Seeks German Army's Discharge Papers

ALVIN PAUL LEPPER

Quit Kaiser's Secret Service to Fight For Uncle Sam

A World War veteran who served both Germany and the United States today sought his discharge papers from the German secret service so that he might establish his allegiance to the American cause.

Alvin Paul Lepper, of 3937 Howley avenue, Lawrenceville, entered the German secret service at the outbreak of the war in 1914. He resigned, he said, in January, 1917, and, after the United States joined the Allied cause, he entered the American air service.

Lepper served Germany under the name of George Boettcher. Boettcher was the maiden name of his mother, who was born in Germany. He was assigned to the Pittsburgh district.

PAPER DISAPPEARS

The papers establishing that Lepper was discharged from the German service disappeared at about the time of his mother's death two years ago, he said. He has nothing now to prove, he said, that he was not in the service of the Central Powers at the time he was in the American Army.

Lepper explained that he needs the papers to protect his wife and child in the event of his death, since they could not otherwise prove that he was loyal to the United States while serving in the Army.

The veteran served as a mechanic in the 247th aerial squadron in England and France.

SYMPATHIES FOR U. S.

Lepper said he entered the German secret service at the outbreak of the war, because he wanted to see action, but his sympathies were with the United States when this country became embroiled in the conflict.

He was born in the United States and is of German extraction only on his mother's side of the family.

NAZI DEBT MOVE AIMED AT PACT

BERLIN, June 15.—Competent observers professed to see today in Germany's suspension of payments on all her foreign debts a significant move to end reparations, and, ultimately, the treaty of Versailles.

Doubt was expressed that the payments would be resumed at the expiration of the moratorium's six months' period, reliable sources pointing out that complete abolition of reparations is an essential point in the Nazi program.

Swift reprisals by other nations against the reich appeared likely, dispatches said. Great Britain and France were reported to be considering plans to protect their bondholders, possibly by withholding commercial payments due Germany.

A British note in April warned Berlin any interference with the Dawes and Young loans would be taken most seriously.

HUGE AMOUNT DUE, MITE RECEIVED

Doubt if Collection Will Cover Stamp, Note Paper Bill

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(AP.)—A mountain of war debts labored today and brought forth a mouse in the form of a payment from Finland.

By a scratch of the pen, the National City Bank in New York transferred $166,536 from the account of the little nation to the big one.

That was all the hard cash the United States received of $477,843,644 due today from 13 nations. Hungary put a certificate for $36,971 in pengos in its national bank, crediting it to the United States. But officials could not figure any way to draw against it.

Finland, as always, paid in full. Officials hoped—somewhat facetiously—that the $165,535 would cover the cost of messengers, postage, note paper, cable tolls and diplomats' time expended in an attempt to collect the June installments on the total debt of $11,628,000,000.

PAYLESS PAYDAY

The dawning of this almost payless payday found the war debt score:

Ten defaults, one payment, two to be heard from.

Jugo-Slavia ($825,000) and Lithuania (369,034) planned to deliver notes explaining their expected defaults during the day.

The Italian, Polish, Rumanian and Hungarian envoys called on Secretary Hull yesterday to inform him of the decisions to forego payment. The Latvian and Estonian "so sorry" notes came by mail.

Great Britain, France, Belgium and Czecho-Slovakia had previously announced they would not pay.

ITALY EXPLAINS

The Italian note explained that Italy was collecting no reparations from Germany and hence had no surplus to pay the United States. Italy, it said, would have made another token payment (as it did in December) except for the Johnson Act, declaring that countries which do not meet installments in full are in default.

Italy's total debt is $2,008,103,288, of which $13,687,012 is in arrears, and $14,741,593 additional fell due today.

Rumania said "unprecedented economic and financial difficulties" led her "reluctantly to suspend all further payments pending a rediscussion of the entire problem."

ANTI-WAR PACT RATIFIED

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—An anti-war treaty of non-aggression and conciliation among nations of the Western Hemisphere was ratified by the Senate today.

Under the treaty, signed at Rio de Janeiro on October 10, 1933, by the United States, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Mexico, Paraguay and Uruguay, it is agreed that all territorial questions will be settled without violence. Signatories agree not to recognize any territorial arrangement not obtained through pacific means, or the validity of an occupation or acquisition of territory brought about by armed forces.

Another treaty of friendship, commerce and consular rights with Finland, the only nation which has not defaulted on its war debts, also was ratified.

Protest Russians' Manchukuo Flight

TOKIO, June 15.—(AP.)—A Rengo (Japanese) news agency dispatch from Harbin tonight said Manchukuo was preparing a vigorous protest to Moscow on reports that three Soviet airplanes circled over Misham, in eastern Kirin, Manchukuo, yesterday and returned to Russian territory.

the same government's name on it.

By using greenbacks instead of silly bonds, that "little item" of seven hundred and ten million dollars a year could have been saved.

IN LONDON long ago police and public were horrified when a maniac known in crime's history as "Jack the Ripper" murdered one miserable woman after another, apparently with a maniacal desire for revenge on womankind.

The public and police in Paris are agitated and puzzled concerning some supposed "madman" who has sent twenty dangerous explosive bombs through the mails, each containing a tube of dynamite, to be exploded by a cap when the package was opened.

A number of French postoffice employes have been wounded by these bombs with letters signed "the three judges of hell" denouncing and threatening the French people, regardless of age or sex.

The sender of the bombs appears to be a man of some education, since he signs one of his letters "Minos, Eaque, (Aecus) Rhadamanthe," three judges that according to Greek mythology, "mete out justice in hell."

THE EARTH'S uneasy quaking spread from one continent to another. A few days ago the Argentine was shaken and Genoa, in Northern Italy. Yesterday, Calcutta sent word of earthquake shocks in Afghanistan and Baluchistan, worse than earthquakes that killed thousands in India last January.

"The whole Northwest Himalaya range," part of the earth's greatest pile of mountains, is reported badly shaken. The wind "bloweth where it listeth," and the earthquake is equally uncertain.

Primo in Tears Seeks Seclusion in Defeat

International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Shortly after midnight this morning, with the yells of the crowd that saw him cut down by a man two-thirds his size still ringing in his ears, Primo Carnera stumbled back to his hotel—alone.

The Italian giant, shorn of his heavyweight championship title by Max Baer, broken-hearted in defeat, fled from the scene of disaster by himself.

He wanted to be alone.

For the 263-pound mastodon of the ring, whose gigantic build houses a simple peasant's soul, had to give himself up to tears.

The story of Carnera's sad homecoming was told today by Jack Downey, night manager of his hotel, who said:

"It was a little after midnight when I was surprised to see Carnera come in, all by himself.

"He looked a beaten man, and he limped. He just pointed to his ankle. I could see it was badly swollen. He blames that for his loss of the fight. He says he turned it in the first round."

Girl Saves Two Friends From Death on Rails

Fifteen-year-old Margaret Schmidt's presence of mind today was credited with saving herself and two girl companions from death under a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad passenger train at the Fifteenth street overhead, McKeesport, yesterday.

Margaret, of 16 North Third street, and her chums, Margaret Kosh, 13, of 817 Chestnut street, and Mary Seko, 13 of 413 Second street, all of Duquesne, were returning to their homes after swimming in McKeesport. While the Schmidt girl saved them all from death, the Kosh girl was struck a glancing blow and seriously hurt.

The Kosh girl, suffering a possible skull fracture, was taken to McKeesport Hospital, where she related how the Schmidt girl had grabbed her companion and pulled her from the path of the approaching passenger train, of which they were unaware because they were deafened by the rumble of a freight train passing on another track. After pushing her companion to safety, the Schmidt girl pulled Margaret Kosh's dress, but was unable to pull her from the speeding train.

ALMA GLUCK FLIES HERE TO SEE BABY GRANDDAUGHTER

FIRST AIR TRIP FOR FAMED SINGER

Soprano Just Returned From Russia Comes Here

When personable Alma Gluck, noted singer, stepped off the boat which brought her back from Russia in New York yesterday, an attractive young brunette met her at the dock with a kiss and a hug and:

"I'm going over to Pittsburgh today to see the baby. Will you come along?"

So Alma Gluck and her daughter, Mrs. Marcia Davenport, hurried over to Newark, stepped into a plane and flew to Pittsburgh. They were in the air when Mrs. Davenport turned to her mother and asked whether she had ever flown before. Miss Gluck said she hadn't—just like that.

'SHE'S WONDERFUL'

Then they hurried to Magee Hospital and Grandmother Gluck, who seldom exclaims, forgot herself long enough to utter the usual oh's and ah's, culminating with:

"She's grand. Wonderful."

Miss Gluck was referring to Cornelia Whipple Davenport, aged 55 days, who might, with a stretch of the imagination, be called the airplane baby.

Cornelia Whipple Davenport was born in Pittsburgh because her mother thinks there's no place like Pittsburgh and no place like the Magee Hospital and no doctor quite so talented as her own. Her first child, Patricia, now 10, also was born here.

She and her Pittsburgh physician were in New York last April 20 when the physician decided they had better hurry back to Pittsburgh.

They boarded a plane which landed here at 8:30 p. m. The ambulance met them at the airport. At 58 minutes past midnight Cornelia Whipple Davenport was born.

PROUD OF HEIRESS

And Alma Gluck searches for adjectives which her daughter might have overlooked to describe the heiress.

"Blue eyes . . . blonde . . . seven pounds . . . she's a picture of her father."

But what about the ominous role of grandmother?

UNAFRAID OF YEARS

Miss Gluck waved an airy hand, flipped open her cigaret case, snapped on her lighter and dismissed the thought:

"I'm all over that."

However, the grandmother years rest lightly on the singer who has just returned from Russia, where her husband, Efrem Zimbalist, the violinist, has been entertaining Soviet audiences (Miss Gluck was pleased with Russia).

Mrs. Davenport intends to keep Cornelia Whipple Davenport in Magee Hospital for several months longer. The baby's life is no longer in danger.

As to the father, he is Russell Davenport, writer. Mrs. Davenport, too, is more than a daughter of Alma Gluck. Rather than anything else she would write. She has had published a biography of Mozart and intends to start soon on a second book.

Her first child she named Patricia because the baby was born on St. Patrick's Day. She likes that name. She likes, too, the name Patrick which was the alternate.

Cornelia Whipple Davenport received her first name from her grandmother, on her father's side. The Whipple comes from her great grandfather — the late Bishop Whipple, of Minnesota.

DALL MUM IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP.)—Curtis B. Dall today said he had no comment to make on the establishment of a residence in Reno, Nev., by his wife, Mrs. Anna Curtis Dall, daughter of President Roosevelt.

Dall was seen as he was going down in an elevator from his fourteenth floor offices in a building at Broad and Beaver streets.

Informed of Reno dispatches, Dall said he had "no comment." Then he asked:

"Did you see the prize fight last night?"

FIRST LADY'S COMMENT

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(AP.)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, questioned at a press conference today concerning reported plans of Mrs. Anna Curtis Dall to obtain a divorce, said she had no comment other than her daughter had gone to Nevada with her two children.

TRIO RELEASED, TRAPS BANDIT KIDNAPER

Killer Suspect Quits Car of Victims After 18-Hour Flight

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 15.—(AP.)—Held prisoners for nearly 18 hours by an escaped Texas convict, three Iowa men were released here early today and 15 minutes later the abductor was captured.

Release of the three men, Elmer Schleuter, Davenport (Ia.) policeman; Al Schultze, secretary treasurer of the Davenport baseball club, and Dr. W. H. Fitch, Walcott (Ia.) veterinarian, ended a night of anxiety for their safety and terminated a widespread search for them by federal agents and posses.

The abductor was identified by police as Joe Palmer, 32, who with four other men escaped from the Eastman (Tex.) prison farm last February 16, after killing a guard.

SOUGHT TO ESCAPE

Schultze said he believed Palmer's motive in kidnaping the men was to escape identification. He quoted the abductor as saying he wished to get to St. Joseph for he had "connections" there.

The kidnaping of Schultze and Schleuter took place in front of the Western League baseball park at Davenport.

The patrolman approached Palmer to question him. But Palmer drew a pistol from his pocket and forced the officer to stop. When Schultze approached in his motor car, Palmer forced the policeman into it and ordered Schultze to drive.

Palmer complained about the condition of the machine and near Walcott stopped Dr. Fitch and commandeered his coupe. He forced the officer into the rear compartment of the coupe and ordered Dr. Fitch and Schultze to take turns at driving.

GO WITHOUT FOOD

Schultze said:

"We zig-zagged here and there. We traveled all the time. We must have gone at least 700 miles. Once, Palmer stopped to buy himself a candy bar, but bought no food for us.

"Palmer never really got rough with us, in fact, we gave him no reason to.

"The doctor made a hit with him. But he didn't like me because I was a friend of the policeman—and he said he hated cops.

"He and the doctor talked about the medical profession and got real chummy on the subject."

When the kidnaper and his victims arrived here, Palmer said he would let the three men have the motor car, if they would promise to go back to Davenport. When Palmer started off walking, the men reported the kidnaping to police.

About 15 minutes later the convict was taken prisoner.

HEX JURY TOLD OF GHOST TRIP

EBENSBURG, Pa., June 15.—(AP.)—Many of the mysteries of hexerei—including weird rituals, cemetery visits and preparation of strange potions — are being unfolded before a Cambria County jury.

As a result, court attaches are turning away scores of persons for whom there is no room left at the trial of Mrs. Jennie Viscount charged with fortune-telling.

Mrs. Viscount is a resident of Westmont's exclusive residential colony.

Nearly a dozen Johnstown district residents were witnesses yesterday against Mrs. Viscount, telling of forebodings of deaths and murders, ghostly trips to graveyards where cocks crowed and gruesome discoveries were made, and secret rituals in heavily-draped fortune telling parlors in the Westmont district.

Some told of human bones being ground into dust for removing "spells" from clients who paid as high as $100 to regain their health and lost loves.

PLASTER FALL PERILS BABY

Ten-weeks-old Billy Smith lay in his crib and cooed today entirely unconcerned about his narrow escape yesterday when a ceiling, in his home at 5905 Rippey street, collapsed and fell on his bed yesterday.

Billy was sleeping quietly when his family was aroused by the crashing of plaster and lathes. His father, William R. Smith, now unemployed, rushed in, dug Billy out from under the debris and rushed him to Belvedere Hospital, fearing his baby was dead.

But an examination by doctors revealed nothing worse than a scratch on the forehead, so Billy was back home today.

VET MISSIONARY DIES DEFENDING FAMILY

Protest Made to China By U. S. Over Bandit Outrage

PEIPING, China, June 15.—(AP.)—The United States Legation made swift representations to Chinese authorities for the slaying early today of Dr. J. H. Ingram, 73-year-old American missionary, as he attempted to shield his wife and grandchildren from bandits.

Dr. Ingram was shot to death in his summer bungalow on the outskirts of Peiping, before the eyes of his horror-stricken family. A veteran of the Boxer Siege, he had been in China for 50 years. Dr. Ingram was a native of Richland County, O., and was often called one of China's best "foreign friends."

MISSIONARY SHOT

Chinese officials promised immediate steps to capture the outlaws and to protect other foreigners living for the summer in hills near Peiping.

Shortly after midnight a band of robbers, carrying pistols and flashlights, entered the house and went into the room where the missionary and his wife were sleeping.

As the thieves stood over the Ingrams with pistols pointed the frightened grandchildren crawled into Mrs. Ingram's bed seeking protection. Dr. Ingram then jumped from his bed and grappled with one robber, pinning him against the wall. The intruder wrested free and shot the missionary in the arm and then in the head.

RANSACK HOME

The robbers then ransacked the house, making repeated demands for money. They succeeded in getting only a small amount of personal property and $5 cash.

The Ingram killing was a climax to periodical banditry. Two American Army officers were shot at recently by bandits in the west hills area, where the Ingram cottage is located, but escaped unharmed.

One servant employed by a foreign family has been kidnaped and held for ransom. Six other natives were slain recently in a bandit raid upon a nearby village.

AUTO MAGNATE BOMB TARGET

PARIS, June 15.—(AP.)—A bomb exploded in the office of Andre Citroen, the "Henry Ford of France," today in the campaign of terror by the "Three Judges of Hell," which has frightened all Paris.

The bomb was addressed to Citroen personally, but was opened by the librarian of the motor plant. His hands were badly torn and the office was slightly damaged.

Three other infernal machines, which failed to explode, were received in the morning mail today, bringing to nine the total mailed by the terrorists in the last three days.

Police said the campaign evidently was inspired by cranks as an outgrowth of the Stavisky scandal. The senders, identifying themselves only as "The Three Judges," have threatened the lives of President Lebrun, Premier Doumergue and other officials.

GREEN PLEADS WITH UNION TO DROP STRIKE

afternoon. Tighe made his announcement at the conclusion of the morning session—one of the most dramatic scenes in labor history when Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, climaxed his appearance with an impassioned plea to the delegates to call off the strike.

GREEN FOR STRATEGY

Green urged the men to accept the proposal in "good faith" and assured them it would have the full support of the American Federation of Labor.

The plan, he declared, was presented as a strategic move. He said if he would allow himself to be guided by his feelings, he would urge a strike, but added that his better judgment "told him now is not the time."

He said:

"In order to win your fight for freedom, you must use strategy."

News of Green's proposal and the ovation with which it was received here flashed over the stock ticker tape and the market showed immediate reaction.

Stock of the United States Steel Corporation jumped from one-half to one full point and at noon was quoted at 42¼.

PLEDGES LOYALTY

Beginning his address with a pledge "that he would carry on the fight until every worker was made free," Green stated that the steel workers had been subjected to the "most reprehensible persecution during the past few months."

He continued:

"You have matched perhaps the most powerful foe in America. The steel corporations are the most autocratic, domineering, dictatorial, unreasonable group of employers in America.

"The records show they have little regard for Section 7A of the National Recovery Act—for public opinion—for the public welfare.

"Workers have suffered because they accepted Section 7A literally. Is it a crime for a working man to place a literal interpretation on a law? Since when must a man be subjected to persecution because he takes the letter of the law and depends upon it?

"Meeting in their luxurious council chambers in New York, the steel manufacturers have said to the workers, according to my interpretation, 'We do not care what 7A says. We won't permit steel workers to organize into unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.'"

APPEAL TO MEN

With the applause of the men stilled into a deep silence and attentiveness, Green urged the men not to allow their feelings to get the upper hand of their judgment. He said:

"We can't permit them to choose our battlefield. We must use strategy.

"I am apprehensive over the situation as it exists in the Amalgamated. If I followed my feelings, I would take one course. But my judgment urges me to follow another. I do not believe the time to strike is at this moment."

As Green prepared to submit his plan, his hand shook as he picked up the paper on which it was written. Some of the delegates stirred restlessly in their chairs, and the silence was tense. The delegates seemed a little less cordial at the moment.

After submitting his proposal, Green said that in his judgment, if the steel workers follow his plan:

"Your cause is won and your purpose is achieved.

"I have talked earnestly and from my heart. I have been insulted by these same forces—probably more than anyone in this room—but I wouldn't be fit to have the responsibility resting on me if I did not use my judgment.

"I insist and urge that you act favorably on this proposal."

Green came here specifically to present his plan to the 200 or more delegates to the Amalgamated convention in session in Elks' Hall, Seventh street and Duquesne way.

He had previously conferred with state and federal Labor Department officials. Explaining, he said:

"Just comparing notes."

SHOWDOWN ON NRA

The meeting reconvened from the April meeting at which an ultimatum was issued to the nation's steel industry for "full and complete" recognition of the union, was looked upon here as a showdown on the labor provisions of the National Recovery Act. The convention opened yesterday.

Apparently in the hope that the temper of the strike delegates would be cooled by the passage of the President's bill, these conservatives, headed by President Michael F. Tighe, were holding their own against overwhelming odds. However, by the vote of 96 to 49 the delegates overrode President Tighe's proposal to bar delegates from new lodges whose credentials had not been formally drawn.

Yesterday's sessions were taken up with a roll call of delegates and receiving reports from the various lodges on their individual demands for recognition by the steel companies. More than 150 lodges, according to President Tighe, remain to be heard from today.

STAND OF COMPANIES

None of the steel companies has agreed to give the union the recognition it demanded by June 10, with the threat of a nation-wide holiday slated if the recognition was not given.

Tighe declared one committee, of union delegates walked into one of the steel mills in the Pittsburgh district and was told to:

"Get the hell out of here."

Promising a test case would be made of the treatment of the men, Tighe said the facts had already been turned over to an attorney for the Amalgamated.

Addressing the delegates yesterday, Father Casmir Orlemanski, of the Roman Catholic Church of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, Natrona Heights, urged the workers to formulate their plans, delay action for 30 days and present them in full to the public.

FEAR OF STRIKE

Father Orlemanski told newspaper men outside the closed convention doors that he was not in favor of having the men strike unless it was absolutely necessary. He said:

"There's an awful fear in the hearts of the people that a strike might ruin the entire program of recovery which has been going on for the past 13 months.

"If the United States Steel isn't afraid of an outside union, why not let the men vote? Not one strike has been settled since the NRA came into being—they have merely been prolonged."

Declaring he made his appearance at the convention on his own initiative, he priest urged:

"The Amalgamated and the United States Steel Corporation and other steel companies ought to agree to have an election under the existing Labor Board—not a special board—and give the men a free and fair chance to show what they want.

"Then the public would have the true picture and wouldn't be bamboozled by reports from either side."

He urged a proportionate representation from each union, with a "check-off" for both on the payroll, so that neither union would have an advantage. He added:

"Then the men could find out for themselves which was doing the most for them."

RANK AND FILE MEN

In contrast to 72-year-old President Tighe and his conservative policies are the two younger leaders of the "rank and file" movement—Earl J. Forbeck, of McKeesport, and William J. Long, of Weirton.

Tighe, belying his years by his forcefulness and unusually energetic leadership, is fighting for sound, commonsense consideration of the strike issue. He says:

"We must have recognition, but we must not be too hasty in calling a strike."

Forbeck declares:

"We will have recognition—even if we have to call out every union organization in the nation to do it."

Long, a silent man, says:

"Delay will get us nowhere."

Meanwhile several of the steel companies in this district were reported preparing themselves for trouble.

One company was said to have commissioned a boat to patrol its waterfronts. Another was reported stocking up on provisions for men inside the plants and still another was reported to have set up a full provisioned dormitory inside the gates.

Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar declared he was prepared to handle any situation which might develop and reiterated his assertion that he would not ask for state police aid unless matters got beyond his control.

City police will keep streets open leading to the mills, declared Director of Public Safety A. Marshall Bell and Gov. Gifford Pinchot, from his home in Milford, denied any intention of sending troops into the strike area as reported by one of the strike movement leaders.

Green's Four-Point Plan To Avert Strike

Following is the plan proposed by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers for the settlement of the steel labor controversy:

1—I recommend that an impartial board of three members be appointed by the President of the United States, clothed with authority to act as follows:

(a) To receive complaints and to investigate and adjust on the basis of such complaints any violation of the labor provisions of the code for the iron and steel industry.

(b) To mediate and conciliate in any dispute arising between employers and employes under said code and to undertake to arrange for a conference for collective bargaining with any employer when so requested by representatives of employes selected under Section 7-A of the National Recovery Act.

(c) To offer their services as arbitrators in any labor dispute between employes and employers under said code, provided such dispute is voluntarily submitted for arbitration by both such parties.

(d) To hear and determine any matter of discrimination against or discharge of any employe in violation of Section 7-A of the National Industrial Recovery Act.

2—In order that the workers employed in the steel mills may exercise the right of organization free from intimidation and coercion on the part of employers and to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, the impartial board appointed by the President shall be clothed with authority to order and hold elections under the board's direction and supervision, and the representatives selected by a majority of the employes to be recognized as the representatives of the workers for the purpose of collective bargaining.

3—All grievances and complaints regarding wages, hours and conditions of employment to be settled through negotiations between the management and the representatives of the workers selected by the workers in the manner herein prescribed for collective bargaining purposes. Any questions in controversy which cannot be settled through collective bargaining to be referred by mutual agreement to the impartial board herein provided for, for final determination.

4—In the event the recommendations herein submitted are accepted by all parties at interest, the threatened strike be declared off with the understanding that all questions in controversy will be handled and adjusted in the manned and mothed prescribed herein.

'REDS' RENEW 'UNITED FRONT' APPEAL

The Communist-inclined Steel and Metal Workers Industrial Union had today renewed its attempts to get the members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers to form an alliance with them.

Leaflets urging that a "united front" be formed between the two organizations were being secretly passed out to Amalgamated delegates.

The printed forms urged:

"United action between the S. M. W. I. U. and the A. A. The steel workers have everything to gain through trade union unity and everything to lose if the ranks of the steel workers are divided.

"The greatest enemy of the steel workers are those who fight against the unity of the steel workers, President Roosevelt, the NRA and the Iron and Steel Institute Board, are in complete unity of purpose. 'Labor's New Magna Charta in Steel' is a smashing attack against the trade unions, and in full support of the company unions and the wage cutting, starvation program of Wall street.

"Reject the splitting tactics of Tighe and Company. Place your convention and local union on record for united strike action."

ANOTHER PEACE WORKER HERE

One more conciliator joined the corps of state and federal labor department officials in Pittsburgh today to "keep their eyes" on the steel situation.

The newcomer is Charles J. Wyzanski, former judge and solicitor for the Federal Department of Labor. He joined the department's ace of conciliators, James F. Dewey, who has been in close touch with conditions since April.

State Secretary of Labor Charlotte E. Carr, Clarence Moser, chief of the State Labor Department's bureau of conciliation, and Clinton Golden, conciliator, of Greensburg, also are in the city.

Several times yesterday the state and federal labor officials conferred, but only for the purpose of "comparing notes," according to Secretary Carr, who said she wanted to keep personally informed of developments at the steel workers' convention.

NEW LABOR LAW OPPOSED

President Roosevelt was to be advised by telegraph today that the Allegheny Steel Company Employes' Union, representing 2,800 workers in the Brackenridge district, oppose further legislation to meet the labor emergency. The telegram said in part:

"We want to assure you that the great majority of steelworkers have not gone crazy and are keeping both feet on the ground, mindful of their duty to you and the nation."

Plainview Avenue Woman Hit by Auto

Ella Zitzman, 54, of 2088 Plainview avenue, was in South Side Hospital today with a possible fractured leg received when she was struck by an auto in West Liberty avenue last night, police reported.

Roosevelt in Parley On Labor Legislation

Republicans Agree On Changes in Measure

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt conferred today with Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, and Secretary Perkins on the proposed emergency labor legislation.

Meanwhile, Senate Republicans agreed upon three changes in the new administration labor disputes bill and planned to submit them to Democratic leaders later in the day.

If found acceptable, Senator Robinson, the majority chieftain, will introduce the bill immediately.

Senator McNary, the Republican leader, described the amendments as "not material," and said the most important one would limit the authority for the proposed labor boards to provisions of Section 7A of the Recovery Act and the official interpretations that have been placed upon it.

The section pertaining to collective bargaining has been interpreted by officials as containing nothing to assure a closed shop.

McNary said the bill, if introduced today, would be taken up tomorrow. It would not be necessary to send it to committee first, he said.

While Democratic leaders have been hoping for a quick agreement on the labor bill in view of the threatened steel strike and the desire to adjourn Congress by tomorrow night, McNary indicated a "rough and tumble" fight was in prospect over the legislation.

Several Republican independents are dissatisfied with the new measure and have demanded that Congress remain in session to pass the original Wagner bill.

Meanwhile, the substitute for the Wagner labor bill was criticized by the American Civil Liberties Union as "the severest blow to organized labor yet proposed."

In a statement the union asserted the proposal would be "a weapon in the hands of employers to crush" labor.

Remington Rand Strike Settled

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP.)—Officials of Remington Rand, Inc., and representatives of their striking employes reached an agreement last night whereby the company recognized the unions and the latter agreed to a continuation of the open shop policy.

STEEL DEPUTY PROTEST SET

The League for Peace and Social Action has named Dr. B. F. Crawford, pastor of the Perrysville Avenue Methodist Church, chairman of a committee to protest the hiring of special deputies by steel companies if a strike occurs.

The group will urge Mayor McNair, Sheriff Frank Gollmar and Gov. Pinchot to oppose such a move. Meeting in the Chatham street Y. W. C. A. yesterday, league members heard the Rev. E. L. Kautz, Homestead minister, charge that "fraud and intimidation" had prevented steel workers from expressing their true opinions in recent company elections.

Men Oppose Strike In Alabama Mills

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 15.—(AP.)—Alabama steel workers went on record overwhelmingly yesterday against a strike. Employes of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, and the Connors Steel voted against a walkout.

Employes of the Gulf States Steel Company, at Gadsden, did not take a vote, but 2,500 of the 3,000 workers signed a petition asking the company to continue operations regardless of action taken elsewhere in the country.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

Steagall Imitates 'Stonewall' on Housing Bill

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, June 15.—There was more fancy soft-shoe footwork backstage on the housing bill than on any other legislation this session. Not even the stock market bill stirred up so much phenagling. It all centered around the stalwart figure of Stonewall Steagall.

Mr. Steagall is supposed to be the Democratic chairman of the House Banking Committee. There is no question about his being chairman, but there is some argument about his being Democratic, as far as this administration is concerned.

This leader of financial legislation in the House earned his Stonewall title the same way Jackson did. While all the rest have been fleeing before the advance of the administrtion, Mr. Steagall has stood there like a stone wall impentrable.

At least that is what he did for some weeks after President Roosevelt sent the housing bill to Congress. The White House prodders got busy on the inside and prodded Mr Steagall into promising to report the bill.

At the appointed time, Mr. Steagall did. But, lo and behold, the bill Mr. Steagall reported happened to be an entirely different bill.

CHARGES

Mr. Roosevelt's prodders were so angry that one of them (an official in Frank Walker's division) called news men of Washington into a press conference.

This official spoke very disparagingly of Mr. Steagall's committee. He charged that it had sold out to the building and loan associations, that it had betrayed the administration, etc., etc., etc.

Some one present suggested that such remarks were very libelous, unless proved, and would cause an uproar. The official thereupon wisely decided to make his remarks "off-the-record," meaning confidential.

That kept them from getting into the newspapers, but they reached the ears of the banking committee members and the Building and Loan League. As a result, everyone lost his temper, that is everyone except Mr. Steagall. He still was giving a good imitation of a stone wall.

DOUBTS

The votes taken in Mr. Steagall's committee were not made public. If they had been, they would have proved Mr. Steagall's rigidity.

In every vote taken, Mr. Steagall—believe it or not—stood by the White House. He voted against changes which would give a half billion dollars in loans to building and loan associations. He voted for the administration bill. Only two or three members of his committee did likewise.

Mr. Roosevelt's prodders know that, but they refuse to give Mr. Steagall full credit. They noted that his pals on the committee were all on the other side, particularly his bosom companion and alter ego, Mr. Goldsborough, a Democrat from Maryland.

Also they complain that Mr. Steagall has never before been overthrown by his committee, at least never by such an overwhelming margin as 16 to 3 and 15 to 4, which were the anti-administration margins on the committee roll calls.

Furthermore, no ill feeling seems to exist between Mr. Steagall and his own committee members, who went against him and the administration.

PRESSURE

The upshot of the thing is that the administration had to exert extreme inside pressure to get its bill out of the discards. It is supposed to have everything fixed now so that it will get exactly what it wants, finally, after both Senate and House have passed the bill, and it goes into the hands of a conference committee.

Mr. Steagall's friends are very proud of him. They say the administration is displeased only because he has the courage of his convictions, which have not happened to coincide with Mr. Roosevelt's convictions on inflation and guaranteeing bank deposits. They excuse his faithfulness to the administration on the housing bill on the ground that he was not interested in the subject much, one way or another. Also, they expect him to get some patronage.

To them, Mr. Steagall is just a big misunderstood man who does not care as long as he can continue to have his way generally on the subjects in which he is interested.

At any rate, all will concede that his unfathomable activities have made him the most colorful figure in a drab house.

HEROIC SLEUTH FAILS TO WIN NEW JOB

No move has yet been made by Safety Director A. Marshall Bell to reinstate Detective Edward Pritchard, hero of the homicide division, who resigned, because of defective hearing due to wounds received in line of duty six years ago.

Mr. Pritchard

Pritchard late yesterday told of how his hearing recently became so poor that he could no longer perform his duties as he thought he should.

Believing that he would be transferred to other duties, Pritchard said he went to Director Bell Tuesday, handed him his resignation and told him of his 15-year record, studded with pieces of detection and bravery in the department's history, he praised the detective—and accepted his resignation, says Pritchard.

Pritchard says Director Bell listened politely to his suggestion that he could serve the city with ability in some other work in the Detective Bureau, but offered no encouragement.

The wounds that cost him his hearing and job, without pension, were received when he arrested a Negro in Woods Run six years ago. The Negro had attempted to attack a woman. The detective was stabbed six times. Once the knife cut into his ear.

The prisoner was sent to the workhouse, where he died. Pritchard was praised by Judge George V. Moore, the District Attorney and his superior officers.

Today few remember the praise and Pritchard is looking for work.

Louis Crowder, newly returned from his European concert tour, played an intriguing program last night in the College Club. This young Pittsburgh pianist, from all indications, will occupy a prominent place among our several good players, and is sure to become one of our popular musicians.

Mr. Lissfelt

The rather unusual juxtaposition of two Brahms works between Bach and Scarlatti was a happy thought in making the program, and the newer Spanish music was a relief from the trite finales we are accustomed to hear. The Spanish music is good summer-night music.

Since Crowder's studies abroad there is a marked difference in his tone, remarkably mellow and rich now with considerable variety, though never quite brilliant. His style is contemplative rather than of virtuoso largeness, and proves what a fine intelligence prompts his playing.

His Bach was beautifully balanced, but I felt it leaned slightly toward the romantic, and personally I prefer its tone more as he made the Scarlatti, with sparkle and cold clarity. The "Edward Ballade" of Brahms I have never heard play with more subtle coloring, and he kept the dramatic element well in hand.

The Chopin B minor Sonata had moments when I thought the metronome was ticking rather accurately and Crowder did not allow his emotion to take charge of affairs. Albeit an exquisitely played scherzo brightened the whole work.

During the entire program the audience must have felt itself in the presence of a modest and sincere musician, in whose playing music counts for much more than any display. As encores he played Albeniz' "Malaguena" and a Schubert Impromptu.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

INDICT YOUTHS IN CONSTABLE SLAYING

John Arendas, 23, and Paul Hardin, 23, of Wall, were indicted in the shooting of Martin Fluter, Wall Borough constable, found dead near his home April 16.

The former is the son of George W. Arendas, succeeded by Fluter when he resigned as constable to serve a workhouse term for extortion in an alleged abandonment case. According to detectives, young Arendas and Hardin were in a group that had trouble with Fluter the night he was shot.

Murder indictments were returned against Carlos Rosello and Donato Perriero, held in the killing of Daniel Farbastro, 32, shot down in South Wheeler street April 28. Perriero, whose home is at 1825 Blackadore street, was seized when it was learned he had had an argument with the victim prior to his death.

Rosello, detectives said, admitted being on the scene at the time of the murder, but denied complicity. He surrendered when he learned police were seeking him.

John Harris, who was indicted in the murder of Andrew Gross, 32, of 2130 Forbes street, has not been apprehended. Gross, a Negro, died in Mercy Hospital May 7 from a bullet wound received in a fight over a dice game.

BARNUM RELICS TO BE SOLD

C. Lawrence Cook, Pittsburgh auctioneer, announced today he has been commissioned by executors of the Commodore Wilson Marshall estate in Bridgeport, Conn., to dispose of the rare bric-a-brac in the home of the late P. T. Barnum at an auction there Wednesday.

Cook declared the Oriental rugs, period furniture, antiques and oddities the "world's greatest showman" collected from many corners of the earth and left to his niece, Mrs. Wilson Marshall, at the time of his death 43 years ago, would go under the hammer next week on the grounds of the extensive villa Barnum erected at Mariana Park, Conn., in 1848.

The sale has been ordered since the recent death of Commander Marshall, New York yachtsman. Marshall occupied the Marina Park residence until his death, adding his possessions to those of the showman.

Mrs. Marshall died about 35 years ago. Cook placed the value of the estate at nearly a million dollars.

Pittsburgher Gets Degree at Cornell

Charles M. Reppert, Jr., of 5653 Stanton avenue, Cornell University student, will receive a degree in civil engineering at the university's commencement exercises in Ithaca, N. Y., Monday. He is the son of Charles M. Reppert, chief engineer of the Department of Public Works.

Mr. Reppert

Reppert is a member of Book and Bowl, Cornell literary club, and served on the board of The Cornell Daily Sun during his four years at the university. Two other Pittsburgh candidates for Cornell degrees are David Blumberg, of the Roskin Apartments, and William E. Chisler, of 128 Elysian street.

Two Slayers Die In Electric Chair

OSSINING, N. Y., June 15.—(AP.)—Two men died last night in the electric chair, one of them a condemned prisoner who refused to permit an emergency appendicitis operation because:

"I might die."

Rose Caccamise, 24, of Rochester, N. Y., who survived the appendicitis attack only to face certain death, was led into the execution chamber at 10 p. m. A few minutes before William Vogel, 26, of New York City, had been led to the chair by the Rev. Anthony N. Petersen, Protestant chaplain.

Hold Registration For Summer School

Registration for the University of Pittsburgh's downtown summer school will be held in the Chamber of Commerce Building today and tomorrow. Courses will be offered to students of the downtown division at night classes for six weeks.

Boom Found in British Coal Industry, but Jobs Decline

(Editor's Note—Revived British industry is bringing renewed activity in the British coal mines—a sure sign of recovery, H. R. Knickerbocker writes in the fifth chapter of his series on British recovery. "But the irony of the British coal industry," Knickerbocker writes, "is that the healthier it becomes the fewer men it employs." This, he explains, is due to the increasing use of machines in the mines.)

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, June 15.—Six hundred years ago they mined coal in Newcastle. They mined it in little holes like primitive water wells, and when one hole became too deep they started another one. Today Newcastle miners go down underground a quarter of a mile, then turn seawards and burrow along two miles out under the ocean, producing the stuff that runs England's factories. The fuel for British recovery.

Soon they will have burrowed out beyond the three-mile limit and then they will not have to pay royalties to the crown. Modern mining in this district today is a far cry from the days when Elizabethans coined the phrase about carrying coals to Newcastle.

Oil may come, and waterpower may come, but coal remains the principal fuel of Britain. Coal is nevertheless the stepchild of British industry. It has only one rival for its miserable condition. The other stepchild is cotton textiles.

INDUSTRY RECOVERING

But coal still employs more men in Britain than any other industry. It still has the largest number of unempoyed men. It has been in such bad shape that prophets said coal would never recover. Today British coal is recovering, slowly, painfully, but recovering.

People may spend more money in Britain, on peaches, cigars and limousines. Stock market prices may go up and brokers may wear the smiles of contented cats. All that could conceivably accompany a fake recovery.

But the fact that British coal, this apparently permanent industrial invalid, has begun to totter about is one of the best proofs of the robust character of the British comeback. For any inquirer into this recovery, a visit to Newcastle, certainly the most famous if not really the most ancient coal center in all the world, is most valuable.

"Out of date," "hopelessly behind the times," "disorganized" and "unrational" are only a few of the epithets that have been hurled at the British coal industry by foreign as well as domestic observers. But none of these epithets could apply to the collieries which dominate the gray and melancholy landscape north of modern Newcastle.

They center about Ashington. On the road out of Newcastle new buildings extend for miles. England is building more this year than ever in its history.

SLACK DUMPS MOUNT

Far away from the coal mines the dumps of slack rise like alps on the dingy horizon. Perfect cones, they look like modern volcanoes. The higher they rise the more coal has been dug and the miners in the villages can watch the growth of this man-made mountain range as a guage of their own work.

But the irony of the British coal industry is that the healthier it becomes, the fewer men it employs. The Ashington collieries tell this story best. They are producing more coal today than ever, and using fewer men. They are mining coal at the rate of 3,400,000 tons a year, or one-fifth of the total coal production of all Northumberland.

In their screening and cleaning plant at Ashington, largest and most modern in England, the effects of mechanization can best be studied. Down below this and adjacent collieries there are 68 miles of roads in the mines.

In the galleries running off these roads men are cutting out coal at the rate of 10,000 tons a day. Where their fathers did it with hand picks, they are doing it with electric cutters and drills.

ONLY ABLE GET JOBS

There are 9,000 men employed, and each turns out half again more coal than his father did, and so despite increased production there are 1,000 unemployed coal miners in the district.

This company is opening up a new colliery. New men will be needed. But, strangely enough, according to one authority, there will not be enough qualified coal miners to go around.

For the inexorable law of the survival of the fittest has worked ruthlessly and while the best workers, most capable of handling the modern machinery, are kept at work, the unemployed, least capable, may never be employed again.

This result of mechanization shows most plainly in the screening and cleaning operations. In all the old-fashioned treatises on coal mining, in all the old photographs of coal mines the most prominent human feature was the breaker boys, and often girls.

Little chaps stood there, with blackened faces, bending all the day long over rivers of coal, sorting out the slack and earning a pittance. It helped make Bolsheviks.

FEW EARS HEAR NOISE

All that is gone today. The absence of human labor in a modern screening and cleaning plant is startling. Out of the bowels of the earth come plunging upward the elevators carrying tubs of coal. They come to a clanging halt, and the noise is worse than a boiler shop. But there are few ears to hear it.

Automatically the tubs roll off past a checker, and then by gravity down to an intelligent machine that grasps them firmly, turns them upside down, empties them, rights them again and pushes them on their way back into the coal mines. Meanwhile the coal has taken its first plunge, through vast cracking machines that chew it up into smaller and smaller boulders.

Marvelously efficient cleansing chutes dry-clean or wash every impurity out of the coal. Endless rivers of water carry away tons of slack.

Down spiral chutes other tons of coal go hurtling earthward and the centrifugal force of the spiral descent separates the smaller coal particles from the slack more neatly than any human hand could do. In whole sections of the plant not a worker is to be seen.

Standing at the head of one of these cleansing machines, our thoughts went back to two other coal mines. In one of them, in the Don basin of the Soviet Union, a proud young Soviet engineer had shown us a screening plant where scores of grimy-faced girls bent over the immemorial task of handpicking the slack. The young engineer was convinced his plant was the last word in efficiency.

The other memory went back to Germany's Upper Silesian coal fields, where in a mine owned by the Prussian government at the town of Hindenburg scores of grimy-faced boys bent over the picking boards.

BRITISH MOST MODERN

Here in "backward" England, at least in this coal plant, and probably in many others, the lesson of modernization has been learned. All about us were machines which our engineer guides explained were either American-made or modeled after American types.

"Americanization" used to be a word anathema in England. America has had its own industrial troubles, and many have blamed the machine for our economic plight, but the fact is that industry throughout the world is becoming Americanized.

No doubt the Ashington collieries are an exception in the British coal industry. But they are an exception that is finding imitators, for, very gradually, the output per man in British coal mining is increasing. It went from 2,178 pounds of coal per man-shift in 1931 to more than 2,000 pounds per man-shift in 1934, for the whole industry.

And gradually, very gradually, coal production is climbing. In 1933 total production was still lower than 1932. Nearly every other branch of British industry showed a gain in 1933.

But coal, obdurate, eldest of British industries, proudest and slowest to learn, hung back and hit a new record low of 207,000,000 tons last year, worse than anything on record since 1913, except for the two strike years of '21 and '26.

But coal turned the corner in the latter part of 1933. This year, persistently, it has climbed. January was 300,000 tons better than a year previous. February was 200,000 tons better. March was 100,000 better, April 50,000 better.

MOST FOR INDUSTRY

The bulk of production is going to heat the boilers, drive the turbines and smelt the iron of home industry.

The world depression plus the industry's slow progress toward rationalization reduced Britain's coal exports, which were 98 million tons in 1913 and 76 million in 1929, to 52 million in 1933, another record low. It is doubtful if this export trade will ever be fully recovered. It is doubtful if old top records of production will be reached again.

But British industry is giving the modern coal mines of Britain all they can do to keep orders filled. Old collieries will die natural deaths. Unemployed coal miners are being absorbed into other trades. Meanwhile the British coal industry is creeping back to life.

Beneath us as we stood on the gallery of the plant an endless chain of railroad freight cars loaded with coal clattered out of the yards. They were clattering toward British steel plants, power houses, factories of every description. They were clattering toward recovery. But how does British recovery look in the material that really tells the story of industry? Steel holds the answer.

YOUTH TO FILM OWN PLAYS

HOLLYWOOD, June 15.—(AP.)—As far as George Dallas Streeter, 28-year-old oil magnate, poet, playwright, novelist, actor and theater owner of Waco, Tex., is concerned, Hollywood just can't give him a cold shoulder.

Streeter, graduate of the University of Texas, arrived in the film colony two weeks ago. He brought with him nine original plays, a flock of short stories, carbon copy of a novel—soon to be published—and a number of volumes of his own poems.

The film producers turned thumbs down on the plays and stories and declined to read the poetry. Then Streeter said:

"So I decided to film the plays myself. I will co-direct the plays and take the leading roles. I think I can make Hollywood sorry."

U.S. PROSPERITY SEEN BY BRITON

LONDON, June 15.—(AP.)—Sir Josiah Stamp, speaking at the Aldwych Luncheon Club yesterday, expressed confidence that prosperity is returning to the United States. He said:

"Nothing can stop the underlying resources of the country from asserting themselves."

There is some division of opinion, Sir Josiah asserted, on whether President Roosevelt's policy is really a great social uplift, or an economic convenience cloaked under that name. The administration at Washington, however, is trying to afford absolute protection to the public, he said.

Postmasters Hold Annual Election

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 14.—(AP.)—The Pennsylvania Branch of the National League of District Postmasters today re-elected O. K. Beach, of Waterside, as president.

Other officers named: H. E. Harsh, Bareville, first vice president; W. J. Woodring, Port Matilda, second vice president; N. F. Lambour, Nicktown, third vice president; Charles H. Benner, Farrandsville, secretary.

FATHER'S DAY . . . JUNE 17

HUMANS MADE TALLER BY SCIENCE

By GOBIND BEHARI LAL
Universal Service Science Editor.

CLEVELAND, June 15.—Dwarfed children were made taller by pituitary hormone injections, it was reported here by Dr. Robert L. Schaefer, of Detroit, at the meeting of the American Medical Association.

Keenest interest was shown by thousands of doctors attending the convention in many novel contributions of medical science, among which were these: Latest treatment for arthritis, leukemia, high blood pressure, allergy, tubercular kidneys, common colds and means of inducing fortgetfullness in women during child bearing.

DESCRIBES METHOD

Dr. Schaefer, following Dr. William Engelbach's method, increased an inch or two the heights of several boys and girls in seven cases. These children would have remained dwarfed. Their growth had ceased very early. Injection of pituitary growth hormone resulted in resumption of height growth. The earlier the child's dwarfism is diagnosed and treatment started, the surer will be the growth results, Dr. Schaefer said.

Chronic arthritis, rheumatism of the joints, was pictured as a disease of the body as a whole, rather than of the joints where its painful signs become manifest.

CITE TREATMENTS

Dr. Russell L. Cecil, New York specialist, summing up the best known present day medical technic for treating arthritis said:

"We have no standard therapy. But such measures as rest, elimination of focal infections, physical therapy, regulation of diet, streptococcus vaccines, use of iron, arsenic are widely favored."

High vitamin containing balanced diet, tending to keep body weight down, was an important help in treatment.

The ideal drug for twilight sleep or inducing amnesia forgetfulness in women during labor, is paraldehyde combined with sodium amytal or pentobarbitol, it was reported by Drs. E. D. Colvin and R. A. Bartholomew, of Atlanta, Georgia.

FAIR MONT MAN GAS LEADER

G. W. Harr, of Fairmont, W. Va., succeeds F. F. Schauer, of Pittsburgh, as president of the Pennsylvania Natural Gas Men's Association, it was announced today following a meeting of directors. Harr is manager of the gas department of the Monongahela-West Penn Public Service Company and Schauer is vice president of the Equitable Gas Company.

G. W. Harr

H. H. Phillips, secretary of the T. W. Phillips Gas and Oil Company, Butler, was elected vice president, and B. H. Smyers, Jr., attorney for the Equitable Gas Company, was re-elected secretary and treasurer.

RALLY IN FIGHT ON TOLL RAMP

Girding for a concerted drive against the proposed toll ramp at the south end of the Liberty tubes, officers of the South Hills organization opposing the project will meet at 2 p. m. tomorrow in the Dormont Municipal Building.

All officers and one authorized representative of each constituent organization will be present.

A mass meeting to which the County Commissioners will be invited will be held next Friday at 8 p. m. in the Hillsdale Avenue School, Dormont.

The ramp is one of the self-liquidating projects under the proposed $30,000,000 Public Works Administration loan to Allegheny County.

Four Seek Divorce, Decrees Granted Five

Divorce suits were filed yesterday by James F. McAlister against Melda B. McAlister, Orpha Amaker against Adrian A. Amaker, Albert Brockway against Edna Brockway and by John Harmening against Myrtle J. I. Harmening.

Divorces were granted to Leona K. Woods from Eugene O. Woods, George F. Gilmore from Marie Gilmore, Dorothy O. Handley from Cyril F. Handley, Marcella Sheppard from Franklin Sheppard and to Russell Bruckner from Edna Bruckner.

Retailers to Talk State's Finances

CHECKUP BALKS FOOD RELIEF CHEATING

It's "next to impossible" for Pittsburgh and Allegheny County beneficiaries to "chisel" on federal emergency relief, George P. Mills, executive director of the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Association, declared today.

Under a newly inaugurated plan, "double timers" are being eliminated by a check of relief rolls with payrolls of large industries in the district, Mills announced.

A slight decrease in this month's "case load" under May was reported by Mills, with approximately 62,000 families still on the rolls.

There are now 302 RWD projects under way in the county, employing 11,850 men, according to a report by the local RWD office.

LINK GEM GANG IN ZUKOR THEFT

CHICAGO, June 15.—(AP.)—A clever band of international jewel thieves stole jewels valued at $87,175 from Mrs. Adolph Zukor, wife of the movie magnate, police reported today.

In addition to the Zukor robbery, police learned, members of the band ransacked the quarters of Mrs. Fitzhugh Scott, Milwaukee society woman, in the same hotel where Mrs. Zukor occupied a suite, but obtained only a few dollars in cash.

In another hotel J. G. Livengood, of St. Louis, comptroller of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railroad, has been victimized for $3,265 in cash and jewels by marauders.

Spurred by the robberies a picked detective squad was detailed to smash the ring.

This squad is familiar with the faces and characteristics of many notorious jewel thieves and its duties are to search for such faces in lobbies and at train and plane arrivals.

A constant watch on Mrs. Edward B. McLean, of Washington, who dazzled World's Fair crowds with the $300,000 Hope diamond, has been ordered.

DANCER'S TAXI ROMANCE TOLD

International News Service.

LONDON, June 15.—Two New York detectives and a Brooklyn taxi driver told on Tilly Losch and Prince Serge Obolensky in a London court yesterday.

Their depositions, describing fervent love-making between Tilly and the Prince during a taxi ride up Fifth avenue, New York, were read at the trial of Edward F. J. James' suit for divorce from the beautiful Hungarian dancer. Prince Obolensky is named corespondent.

Tilly sat with head bowed and eyes that showed traces of tears shielded by her hand as the depositions were read. The detectives who made the depositions were named Williams and Connolly. The taxi driver was Saul Posner.

They described how Tilly and Prince Obolensky, after a visit to the Empire State Building with Lady Cavendish, the former Adele Astaire, American dancer, had ridden in a taxi to an address in East Fifty-seventh street. The detectives trailed the cab and did not interpret what they saw in the cab as a mere demonstration of platonic affection.

Cody Gone, Keaton Sells 'Land Yacht'

HOLLYWOOD, June 15.—(Universal.)—Buster Keaton has disposed of his famous "land yacht," the craft-vehicle or vehicle-craft in which he and Lew Cody aroused storms of laughter when they drove through the country, the sad comedian of the screen revealed today.

Buster, off for France, where he will make a new picture, said he had sold the "land yacht" because Cody no longer is alive to share its joys with him.

Woman Offers Hair In Fight on Huey

NEW ORLEANS, June 15.—(AP.)—The women's committee of Louisiana, seeking the ouster of Senators Huey P. Long and John H. Overton, has announced that one woman had cut off her hair and offered it for sale to raise funds for the committee's cause.

The woman's committee is now conducting a sale of articles donated by its membership.

NEW SHOW BOWS :-: Chinatown Speaks :-: ON RADIO TONIGHT

All-Star Bill Scheduled On WJAS

A new talent set-up slides into the Friday night radio picture tonight via WJAS, replacing in behalf of the same sponsor the CBS "Program of the Week."

Occupying the same 45-minute spot—10 to 10:45—the show will combine Col. Stoopnagle and Budd, Everett Marshall, Parker Fennelly, Vivien Ruth, the eight singing "Gentlemen from Milwaukee" and Vic Young's Orchestra, with Frank Crumit as master of ceremonies.

Fennelly, cast as Uncle Abner, will be teamed with Crumit, whose appearance tonight will be his first on the air without Julia Sanderson. Comedy skits, "Stooperettas" and such will comprise the Stoopnagle-Budd contributions.

Radio's never-ending quest for novelty results tonight in a 15-minute eavesdrop on the Chinatown telephone exchange in San Francisco. While the operators' routine query is "Dar Huey Bin She Ah?" (or something like that), the almond-eyed babes at the switchboard are likely to hear everything from perfect English to a vague and numberless request in one of seven dialects, it is pointed out.

The broadcast, to include an explanation of the complex business by Loo Kern, exchange manager, is booked for WJAS at 10:45.

The stories behind the news reports—those bits of human interest garnered by every reporter which never strike print—comprise the basis of a new NBC-KDKA series of yarns, to begin tonight at 7:45 on a weekly schedule.

Entitled "Sports Stories Off the Record," the waftings will feature Thornton Fisher, sports writer-cartoonist, and one of radio's pioneer commentators.

Scientific objectives of the stratosphere flight to be made next month by Maj. William E. Kepner and Capt. Albert W. Stevens under the auspices of the National Geographic Society and the Army Air Corps will be discussed over KDKA at 11:15 tonight by Dr. Lyman J. Briggs, U. S. Bureau of Standards director.

Pickup for national broadcast, by the way, of the balloonists' short-wave conversations with ground headquarters during the flight is plotted by NBC. . . .

Bernard Macfadden, nationally-known publisher, speaks over the NBC-blue net at 10 p. m., his topic being business management for government. KDKA is the local outlet. . . .

"The Pink Pussy Cat," three-act radioplay having to do with backstage life, is tonight's First Nighter bill, WCAE at 10. . . .

Also for the dramatic-minded: "The Home-Breaker," story of a mother "who loved her daughter too much," WJAS at 8:30. . . .

Phil Harris, back from a vaude tour, reports from Radio City tonight. . . .

Bestor Songstress

Joy Lynne, who was selected from among 53 contestants to sing with Don Bestor on the Jack Benny Friday night programs. She's from Columbus, boasts Turkish ancestry.

Local Highlights On WJAS

Fran Eichler's band returns to the air waves after a brief absence with a quarter-hour of music at 6:15.

Don't miss Paul Gannon's songs at 6:45 and Lewis Munnell's recital with Gertrude Dodds at 9:15.

By special request, Eddie Peyton does another repeat on "Little Grass Shack" as a highspot of the 11:30 Frivolities.

WCAE Features Tonight

An hour of continuous entertainment from WCAE, starting at 6:40, brings a variety of popular and semi-classical melodies.

Twilight tunes will be heard until 7, when Jeanne Claskey, soprano, takes the air accompanied by the WCAE String Trio. At 7:30 Raymond Griffin, basso, offers several selections of the more serious type.

James J. Long gives his weekly sports review and preview at 6, and the Sun-Telegraph Family is scheduled at 4:45 p. m.

[C]ompetition Robs Fans, Sponsors

By AIRCASTER

A British radio critic who visited [th]ese parts recently, marveled at [th]e extremes characterizing Amer[ic]an broadcasts.

He checked on certain nights [w]hich were thoroughly dull, and [o]n others which seemed to him [ri]ch with color and talent, and [th]en went home and wrote that in [th]e United States, according to the [ni]ght, listeners were either sur[fe]ited at a feast, or starved in a [f]amine of entertainment.

Certainly the Sunday night setup in these regions bears out his description of a feast. But it might as well be a famine so far as the auditors are concerned because the highlights of the night are three—and simultaneous.

While Jimmy Durante's credi[t]able hour is under way, Georgie [J]essel is proceeding at CBS, [a]vowedly, to lure customers from [D]urante. At the same time NBC, [w]hich evidently wishes to refute [t]he charge that radio executives [a]re afraid to put on sustaining [s]hows that equal, if they don't [s]urpass, commercial ones, stages [i]ts weekly KDKA revel, "Going to [T]own." This event features Newell [C]hase and Grace Hayes, the hi[l]arious wit of Ed Lowry, and the [m]ellifluous stints by Leopold Spit[a]lny's band.

The Durante hour is fixed by contract, and the Jessel show must stay put for competition's sake. This static situation makes it necessary for the audience to miss two-thirds of the evening's divertissement. "The Going to Town" broadcast, therefore, would be assured of a bigger and better audience, if it were switched to a spot where competition is less acute.

Under the present lineup, everybody loses listeners and the listeners lose two out of three shows, and "Going to Town" is a show that shouldn't be lost.

Plenty of attention, by the way, is being given Grace Hayes, an old timer of the stage, who, in my opinion, is outstripping most of the younger blues larks of radio, and accomplishing, via radio, a comeback comparable to that achieved by Marie Dressler in the films.

There is pending a mighty scramble of radio programs to get off the air for the summer.

The most interesting of the fadeouts will be that of the three-a-week series at WJAS, which has been featuring Rosa Ponselle, Nino Martini and Grete Stueckgold with the Kostelanetz Orchestra and choir. The event says au revoir July 14.

Equally of note is the decision of Fred Waring's sponsor to take off one of the Waring broadcasts—the Thursday night presentation—for the summer. Waring will close shop on Thursdays beginning June 24. The Sunday show will remain as is.

Globe Trotter

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Last week when the Junior Birdmen's air pageant at the Municipal Airport was postponed because of rain, several hundred youngsters, not hearing the 12:15 broadcast announcing the postponement, went to the flying field and were disappointed in not seeing the scheduled exercises. The airport management showed them a wonderful time, anyway.

Tomorrow a nice day is promised, and a greater pageant is predicted. Sometimes, even though fair weather is forecast, unforeseen winds bring storm clouds at the last moment.

Please make sure, in case you are in any doubt at all, because of threatening weather conditions, to listen in for an announcement Saturday at 12:15.

I have had another letter today from a recent visitor in Schenley Park. She reported that several young fellows were tearing limbs from trees and destroying shrubbery.

Ralph Griswold, superintendent of parks, in a recent radio talk mentioned that the damage done to parks and equipment through vandalism mounted into thousands of dollars.

The Globe Trotters, especially the younger ones, can be of great service to the citizens of Pittsburgh who enjoy the public parks if they exert what influence they can on young boys with destructive tendencies to refrain from damaging trees and park equipment.

You can Live and Thrive on Shredded Wheat, Milk and Fruit . . and Nothing Else

We don't expect you to, of course. Everybody likes to eat various kinds of food.

The fact of the matter is, however, that if you needed to economize, and if you wanted to be sure you were getting an adequate food supply—whether for a growing child or a working grown-up—Shredded Wheat, milk, and fruit would be all you would need.

That's why wise housewives give their families at least one meal a day of Shredded Wheat, milk, and fruit.

This remarkable food contains the carbohydrates you need for energy, the proteins for tissue building, the mineral salts for bone structure, the vitamins for resistance to disease, and bran to keep you regular. It is just whole wheat boiled and baked—nothing added, nothing taken away.

Shredded Wheat for breakfast keeps you going till lunch. Shredded Wheat for lunch means a clear head, good judgment, plenty of pep all afternoon. Eat plenty of it this summer. It will pay you big dividends in happiness and health.

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Happenings

Popular young Barbara Warmcastle is to become Mrs. Clarke Johnston this afternoon at an attractive, small wedding, to be attended by the families and a few friends.

The ceremony is to take place at 4:30 o'clock in the Twentieth Century Club, to be decorated with early summer flowers and ferns and other foliage.

Barbara is the daughter of the Karl W. Warmcastles, and the bridegroom is the son of the Frank Johnstons, of the Royal Yorke apartments. Officiating at the ceremony is the Rev. Dr. J. Alvin Orr.

The bride is to wear a gown of palest pink chiffon having a brief train and a deep Elizabethan ruff of the material at the back of the neck with the ruff falling over the shoulders to suggest sleeves. Her cap is to be of rose point lace from her mother's wedding gown.

Bride's Only Attendant Will Be Her Sister

Instead of the traditional all-white bridal bouquet, she has chosen an old-fashioned bouquet of pink and blue and white flowers.

Her only attendant is to be her sister Gretchen, who is to appear in a turquoise blue mousseline de soie gown, distinguished by ruching around the bottom of the skirt and the slight train and around the brief sleeves. Her picture hat is to be of turquoise blue horsehair braid, with a band of yellow ribbon, and her flowers are to be blue and yellow spring blooms.

The mother of the bride is to wear rose beige lace, fashioned with long sleeves and a train, a large brown silky straw hat and a corsage of gardenias. The bridegroom's mother has chosen a brown net dress, molded to the figure to below the knees, and then fashioned with rows of narrow ruffles. Her hat is to be of brown straw and she is to have a corsage of yellow roses.

To Live in East End Following Wedding Trip

George Beckwith is to be best man, and there are to be no ushers. A reception in the Twentieth Century Club is to follow. After June 25, following a wedding trip, Mr. Johnston and his young bride will be at home in the Gabel apartments, East End.

Barbara, who is ever so modest about her golf record—she's woman golf champion at the Pittsburgh Field Club—is a graduate of Briarcliff, and attended Vassar. Young Mr. Johnston is a Princeton man, class of 1933.

Mrs. Becker Advocates Defense

MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Adequate national defense is America's insurance against war and her insurance for prosperity, Mrs. William A. Becker, of Belvedere, N. J., defense chairman for the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, said in her address at the Pittsburgh Chapter's Flag Day celebration yesterday in the Pittsburgh Golf Club. The Daughters want peace and believe in peace, she stated, emphasizing that the best way to secure this is by "keeping our swords sharp and our powder dry."

Mrs. Becker stressed the need of individual initiative and responsibility and said what America needs for inspiration to further achievement is character, culture and citizenships: not nationalism but spirituality, not knowledge but culture, not law but religion.

Yesterday's ceremonies started with the entrance of the retiring regent, Mrs. William Jackson Crittenden, and her successor, Mrs. John E. Nelson, who were preceded by their daughters, Mrs. William W. Goldsborough, Jr., and Miss Peggy Nelson, carrying both the Stars and Stripes and the golden banner of the chapter.

The Rev. Dr. H. Boyd Edwards offered the invocation and there was music by a trio during both the meeting and the reception which followed, the trio including Louise Wingold, cello; Earl Wild, piano, and William Stone, violin.

The decorations were exceptionally lovely. All the tea tables had large centerpieces of syringa and white gladioli, flanked by red tapers in silver candlesticks and standing in loops and long ends of blue and white ribbon. Delphinium and red and white gladioli were combined in large clusters in the ballroom.

Mrs. Edward Grant Caughey, whose guest Mrs. Becker was during her stay here, entertained with a small dinner at the Twentieth Century Club last night.

NAUTICAL FASHIONS FOR LAND LUBBERS

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THE SEA-GOING touch to feminine clothes is something to see this summer. Shades of the "Peter Thompson" suits of two decades ago are stalking the land in smart, practical clothes for growing girls. Older sisters are wearing other models not so authentically nautical, but very rollicking at that, and sedate matrons are indulging in berets of the salty, pancake shape banded with bo'sun's cords and clipped with silver anchors. Fabrics of cotton and silk show printed motifs that are borrowed from ship gadgets, such as knots, flat hats, anchors, chevrons and lanterns, and as extra devices, sympathetically allied, there are plenty of seashells used for necklaces, buttons, print patterns and hat trimmings.

THE QUARTET of lady-sailors sketched is wearing frankly sports sailor suits which are just as practical as they are jaunty for the good times of summer. They will not spend the summer pulling on a rope; the golf course, the tennis court and even garden croquet will be just as good a pastime for 1934's yeomanettes, a trifle dizzy though it may sound.

Flannel in white, light blue or navy; linen in the same shades; red and white striped cotton, natural linen collared in turkey red; and even silk of the washable, striped variety are all used for outfits of this active sports type.

THE NAUTICAL influence in street clothes is not so wholesouled. We have had the sailor collar on our dress up models for some time. Hawes astonished her public with a black satin dinner gown two years ago which was topped by a very long, wickedly molded sailor blouse with a conventional seagoing collar in front and a daring V decolletage in back, sliced right through the collar. Gold braid edged the collar and cuffs—and the skirt had a mermaidish train! Whether or not that suit started something, from that time on we have had sailor collars on all sorts of dresses and coats, sailor pants have been a uniform for beach and cabana wear, and plenty of deep water hats have been designed and promoted.

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Synd., Inc.)

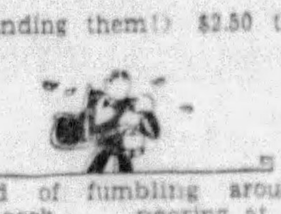
A polkadotted assortment for you today! Harken to the pitter-patter of this rain of dibs and dabs of differentials, beginning with . . .

The new "dides" that mammas everywhere will welcome for baby now that hot weather is here and "the easiest way" is a joy (as well as being more comfortable for baby himself).

For these have been thought up by some brainy soul who realized how nice a fitted dide would be! And these ARE fitted . . . of cotton birdseye . . . cut to fasten at the sides . . . the front . . . or the back whichever you prefer! Three thicknesses in the middle do the most good where it is needed and do not make the baby unduly warm elsewhere 'round his little minddle! No lumps . . . humps . . . bumps—and but one pin needed (unless pinning at the side, when you use two). Every dide well bound and durable over repeated washings. Sizes small, medium, large. (One doctor has already written the store which has these recommending them!) $2.50 the dozen.



Instead of fumbling around for the cork . . . peering at illegible script on a label . . . why not use one of the new chrome bottle tops? They're like silver balls . . . with a cork up inside so that they pop onto your bottle in a jiffy. Three labels—Scotch, Rye, Gin . . . at $1.00 the set.

No more cold and gelatinous foods to cause post-picnic pains! All this business of mayonnaise . . . and pickles . . . and slithery slices of sausage, is what brings on "goblins with green glass eyes" later! So thinks one of the stores.

Hence they're providing a wonderful new picnic grill for $1.95 . . . a nice lightweight little fellow who obligingly goes along and grills a steak . . . or potatoes . . . or a slice of fresh ham . . . or even fries a chickie for that matter. Made of cast aluminum . . . with four legs to stand it up over the fire . . . and a nice capacious gravy pan effect in which to grill.

Our soul was filled with awe! Our eyes with amazement! There in our hand lay the answer to one of life's major problems . . . the cherry seeder! An efficient little gadget that gets rid of the seeds as you squeeze it in your fist! With one hand you de-pit them . . . with the other you eat them . . . even the laziest of you will get by this way! 15c.

SAINT-GAUDENS SEES PARIS ON WANE IN ART

Homer Saint-Gaudens, director of fine arts of Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh, returned today from a four-months' trip to Europe with the thought that Paris is no longer the artistic center of Western civilization.

Landing in New York, he told newspapermen:

"European art is rapidly being decentralized.

"Art is coming up for air and a little horse sense; and the soil is prepared from which the new group of exceptional painters from many lands is to spring."

Saint-Gaudens went abroad in March to select 250 paintings for the 1934 Carnegie International which will open in Pittsburgh next October. He visited artists in 10 European countries, Austria, France, Great Britain, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Italy, Spain, Norway and Sweden.

Speaking of his trip to France, he said:

"Paris is pathetic, especially in the spots where one usually found American tourists. Until the dollar and the franc adjust themselves to some more possible relation, the tourist trade abroad is out.

"French art is neither so much to the right nor to the left, but more in the middle of the track, a track which the French regard as they have even come to regard their traffic—with assurance but with caution.

"As I see it, the French artists have come to realize the soundness of a greater insistence on matter and of less exploitation of matter as a thing apart."

Saint-Gaudens promised that the art exhibit will have its share of new names this year. In particular he named Alix, Bouneau and Oudot, of France; Frau and Giner, of Spain; Monti, Palazzi and Mori, of Italy, and Ende and Rauh, of Germany.

In addition to the European paintings selected, there will be 100 paintings from the United States in the Carnegie International, Mr. Saint-Gaudens revealed.

MAN FREED TO GET VOTES, BEAVER WARDEN FACES OUSTER

U. S. WITNESSES LINK PAIR IN MAIL THEFT

Not Sure of Identity They Admit Under Cross-Examination

Three government witnesses at a hearing before the United States commissioner testified that Mike Svdek and Dan Walker, of Cheswick, "greatly resembled" the two men who at the point of revolvers stole a registered mail package containing $1,500 March 9, 1932, from a bus carrying mail between Cheswick and Russellton.

They were arraigned on a complaint filed by Postoffice Inspector L. C. Kennedy charging them with theft of the pouch containing the package of money and placing in jeopardy the life of James W. Norris, who has a government contract for carrying mail between the two towns.

NOT POSITIVE

After the arrest of Svdek and Walker last March in Oakmont on a charge of carrying concealed weapons they were partially identified in the county jail as the two mail robbers. They were subsequently convicted in the county court and given jail sentences, and yesterday were brought from jail for the commissioner's hearing.

Mrs. Margaret Shipley, former school teacher, and Mrs. Victor Gobert, a postal clerk, who were passengers on the bus, and Norris, each testified to the resemblance between the defendants and the robbers, but under cross-examination by counsel for the suspects said they are not positive. The hearing was continued to hear testimony from other passengers.

KEEP YOUR HEADS DOWN

Each of the three witnesses told of two men boarding the bus at Acmeton, and after going a short distance of one of the men drawing a revolver and taking the package containing the money. The other man, they said, who had taken a seat in the rear of the bus and as his accomplice picked up the pouch, he drew a revolver and warned them:

"Keep your heads down. Don't be alarmed and you won't get hurt."

Both robbers, they testified, had their features covered partly by caps and overcoats with collars turned up. The robbers after leaving with the loot ran to a nearby automobile, in which two other men were seated, and made their getaway. The money was being sent to the First National Bank at Russellton by the Pittsburgh branch, Federal Reserve Bank.

URGE OPERA FOR SCHENLEY PARK

Plans for outdoor light opera presentations in Schenley Park this summer were under way today following a meeting of leaders of the movement in the Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

The group is attempting to have an amphitheater constructed with Relief Work Division labor, and hopes to have state legislation passed permitting the charging of an admission fee. It was announced that sufficient seats will be sold to defray production costs, and that all others will be free, according to present plans.

COLEMAN SURE OF RE-ELECTION BY G. O. P.

Opposition to Leader Fades on Eve of County Meet

The only uncertainty surrounding tomorrow afternoon's meeting of the Republican County Committee at North Side Carnegie Hall is the selection of a vice chairman, opposition to the re-election of William H. Coleman as chairman virtually disappearing in the face of his insistence that he will be a candidate.

Mrs. A. G. H. Frazier is under consideration for the vice chairmanship, and of some one else is elected she probably will become vice chairman of the City Committee, which holds its election at the same time.

City Chairman William J. Soost will probably be a candidate for re-election, in which event he will have little difficulty winning.

A group of independent Republican women, which some time ago demanded that Coleman withdraw, has declined to suggest a candidate for vice chairman. Coleman and his associates, through former Mayor John S. Herron, informed the women whoever they named would be acceptable, but that protests over the chairmanship would not be heeded.

While Senator David A. Reed and Attorney General William A. Schnader are both understood to prefer some one other than Coleman as chairman, neither has personally intervened, and their representatives got nowhere.

ARRANGE FETE FOR PRINCIPAL

Pittsburgh educational leaders and teachers and former teachers of Bedford and Knox schools, South Side, will honor Prof. P. J. O'Connor, principal of the two schools, at a farewell dinner at Haddon Hall tomorrow night.

Prof. O'Connor retires after 46 years of teaching. After receiving his education at Indiana State Normal School and St. Vincent College, he began teaching in Somerset and Cambria counties, and later came to Pittsburgh as principal of the Monongahela School. From 1907 to 1914 he was Esplen school principal, and was then transferred to the Bedford school.

Although he retires at 70, Prof. O'Connor plans to study Pennsylvania rural schools.

The dinner also will honor Miss Martha J. Orr, who retires after many years teaching at Bedford School.

RIVER HIGHWAY OPENED EARLY

The new Allegheny River boulevard, completed at a cost of $3,535,000, was opened for use today, 15 days ahead of schedule.

The highway, which runs from Highland Park to Verona and Oakmont, passes through the celebrated Nadine "bottleneck," where construction had been delayed for three years because former county officials had failed to obtain a right of way from the Pennsylvania Water Company.

Taxicab Rider Short 15 Cents Draws Gun

A cab "fare" handed Daniel Mass, cab driver, 50 cents in payment for a 65-cent bill last night and Mass objected to the shortage.

The "fare" drew a gun at the entrance to the William Penn Hotel and told Mass to drive on as he stepped into a waiting automobile. Mass is out 15 cents.

Janitor Stricken, Found Dead in Plant

Shortly after he had complained of feeling ill, James Forman, 50, of 717 Jumilla street, janitor for the W. G. Johnston Co., printers, 1130 Ridge avenue, was found dead in his room in the plant, the Coroner was notified. Heart disease was given as the cause.

VOTE CHEATING TIPS OFFERED

Vote cheat tipsters are giving Assistant United States Attorney James I. Marsh a lot of "inside information" since the Coyne trial wound up in a deadlock, the prosecutor revealed today.

Marsh has received numerous letters, some laudatory, others purporting to disclose information on illegal voting. Not one of the writers who gave information disclosed his identity.

The prosecutor said:

"Reliable information available for evidence at the retrial of the Coyne case and other cases pending will be welcomed by the government, but instead of receiving anonymous letters we would prefer to meet the writers personally. All persons giving information will be assured full protection by the government and their identity will not be disclosed."

CARELLI PAROLE HEARING SET

Albert Carelli, Allegheny County "blue bandanna" gangster, once pardoned after being convicted of murder, will be given a hearing next Wednesday on his application for a parole from a 28 to 59-year sentence for robbery.

In his plea for parole before the Pardon Board, in Harrisburg, Carelli claims confinement has broken his health, but being an accomplished musician he can earn an honest living. He denies connection with the "blue bandanna" gang and holds the robbery charge against him as false.

He was arrested in 1926, three years after he had gained his freedom from a sentence for slaying a bartender during a robbery in Homestead.

Debts, Recovery Run Second to The Big Battle

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

The world skips a beat when two naked giants step into the ring and start a riot in a nudist colony.

Debts, recovery and war run second to a fist-by-fist description of a championship thumping tournament.

Civilization skids back to cave day, when bearded gentlemen shaved one another with hickory clubs.

But brute strength faded out when the man who could knock a horse down with one punch gave way to the lad who could crank a car with two fingers.

Nobody was worried over the outcome of the fight.

No matter who won, we were sure of a champion who can skip rope a thousand times, kill a man with his fist, and accomplish the super-human feat of getting a seat in the subway during the rush hour.

Tom Dolan Mushball Star, Pal Goslin Drops Fly

By WILLIAM PFARR

The Home and Fireside Boys of the Allegheny County Jail today, over a breakfast of cantaloupe and Canadian bacon and scrambled eggs and buttered toast and coffee with lots of cream, were all a-twitter.

For last night, in the jail yard, the Home and Fireside Boys, mushballers all, defeated Them Guys from the Sheriff's Office by the disgraceful score of 18 to 1.

This, so far as the Home and Fireside Boys were concerned, was vindication of everything.

The hero of the battle was none other than Tom Dolan, late of the Monaca Club's Three Toms.

Mr. Dolan, who is visiting in Warden McNeil's little place for six months, decided the game in the fourth inning, when, with the bases loaded, he smacked a triple that all but sailed over the jail walls and into Ross street. Later he cracked out a double and two singles, and lived up to advance reports of his mushball prowess.

In fact, when the mushball boys at Lewisburg hear about Dolan's slugging they will send up a prayer that he fails to beat that rap in Federal Court.

Dolan's pal, Tom (Goose) Goslin, who was also one-third of the Three Toms, acquitted himself nobly for a gent who has lost 28 pounds of a beerish bay window and can still lose another 28. True enough, the Goose dropped an easy fly that allowed the deputies to score their only run, but he evened things by pushing out a two-base hit and twaddling around to second.

As for Them Guys from the Sheriff's Office, the evening was a sad one. Their star hurler, Walter Smith, who once played in the Federal League, was knocked from the box, although his teammates gave him ragged support—such support, indeed, that there was hardly justification for the sarcastic suggestions of the sidelinersː

"Take him out! Evict him! Take him out!"

RACKET KILLING UNSOLVED

Another mystery was added to Pittsburgh's history of unsolved racket killings today when the Coroner ended his inquest into the slaying of Morris Kaufman, Philadelphia hi-jacker found shot to death here last May 22.

The verdict said Kaufman had been slain by "persons or person unknown," and the police admitted the underworld trigger-man who perpetrated the killing remains a stranger to them.

Kaufman, said to have been a member of a hi-jacking gang which preyed on cigaret and tire trucks between Baltimore, Philadelphia and Washington, was found dead behind a block of cement behind the Wendover apartments, 5341 Coyode street. He had been shot twice in the back of the head. His body had apparently been dumped from an automobile.

Deputy Coroner John S. Aldisert conducted the inquest.

MACHINES COST 48 COUNTY JOBS

Dismissal of 48 more transcribing clerks employed by the Board of Assessment and Revision of Taxes was ordered today in the board's plan to reduce costs and speed work with new automatic machinery.

Thirty-eight temporary clerks were let out May 1 and 17 additional clerks will be laid off later, it was announced.

On July 1, 40 clerks will be rehired on a seniority basis and their ability to operate the new machines, which will do work formerly done by hand. The board hopes to save $100,000 a year by its new system.

Gas Men Await Federal Mediator

Representatives of gasoline companies and leaders of workers in gasoline stations today awaited the arrival of Fred Keightly, of the United States Labor Department, asked to act as a mediator and election supervisor in the controversy between employers and men. Keightly was to have arrived yesterday, but it was learned that he will be detained in Chicago until Monday.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 15.

To the Editor Sun-Telegraph:

Well, there ain't much news till we get the dictaphone records of what Mussolini and Hitler really talked about.

They may have never said a word about France, but you will never make France believe it. They was supposed to travel and meet on neutral ground, but it was Mussolini's. To get even with 'em now we will have President Roosevelt meet Mr. Plutarco Calles, of Mexico, and show those Europeans a couple of boys that really run their countries.

YOURS, WILL.

JUDGE INVOKES 144-YEAR-OLD STATUTE

Prisoner Serving Long Term for Arson Given 3-Day 'Vacation'

By SAM KENNEDY

Staff Correspondent

BEAVER, Pa., June 15.—Invoking a 144-year-old law, Judge Frank E. Reader today took steps to oust Warden Hamilton M. Brown, of the Beaver County Jail, accused of releasing a prisoner to do political work at the May primaries.

Basing his action on a report made by a special investigating commission, which then court made public, Judge Reader not only handed down two rules on Warden Brown, one to show cause why he should not be dismissed from office, the other to show cause why he should not be held in contempt.

QUOTES OLD ACT

Under an act of 1790, never heretofore used but held by the court to still be in force, Judge Reader held that a judge of a Quarter Sessions Court can remove a jail warden for "cruelty or partiality."

Warden Brown has 10 days to file an answer to both rules.

The commission named by Judge Reader consisting of former Judge George A. Baldwin and Attorney Leonard L. Irwin, found that John Oriol, of Ambridge, serving from ten to 10 years on an arson charge, had been released from jail May 12 to May 15, to work among his fellow countrymen for the organization headed by former State Senator W. D. Craig.

FREE THREE DAYS

The probe also revealed, according to the commission's report that Oriol had written a letter in Polish urging other citizens of Polish extraction to vote for organization candidates and that he had signed 100 copies of this letter while in jail, prior to his release.

Oriol returned to jail the day of the primary election May 15, the investigation disclosed, after spending three days in Ambridge, visiting lodges and talking to various persons on the streets.

Testimony of Warden Brown and Oriol before the commission was that Oriol, a former dyer and cleaner, had been released after several requests to collect outstanding bills for the benefit of his needy family. He actually collected $8, the report stated.

POOL OPENED IN SOUTH PARK

With scores of youngsters on hand for the occasion, the South Park swimming pool was opened for the summer season today.

Newly painted and decorated, the pool is expected to be an attractive lure to the South Parks this season.

And among the 10 life guards is Mrs. Hazel Fitzgerald, of 1429 Beechview avenue, the first woman life guard in the county.

Fifteen new river life guards were sworn in by A. Marshall Bell, public safety director, today to take over their duties tomorrow when the 15 river swimming pools will be opened by the city.

The new guards were sworn in as special police under the supervision of Charles Snyder, head of the river police detail, to whom they will report at 11 a. m. tomorrow at headquarters on the Point.

QUITS POLE TOP, TIRED, 'BROKE'

"No food! No money and tired!"

This epitomizes the end of John Danko's brief career as a flag-pole sitter atop a pole on the lawn of the Eagles' Home at 325 Eighth avenue, Homestead.

Danko, 22-year-old aspirant to the flag-pole sitting crown worn by Shipwreck Kelly, climbed down from his perch today after 63 hours and 3 minutes, about 7½ days short of Kelly's record of 10 days.

Danko explained he was too tired to "sit up there" with nothing to wonder about but where the next meal was coming from.

$20,000 Awarded Wife Sold Poison in Error

Mrs. Myrtle L. King, of Norgrave street, and her husband today had won a $20,000 verdict on her claim that a drug store had sold the woman poison instead of a harmless medicine that she had ordered.

Mrs. King testified that she became seriously ill after taking a teaspoonful from a bottle which she said was labeled as "essence of peppermint," but which she claimed was really powerful acid.

During the trial an unusual scene was enacted in court. A teaspoonful of essence of peppermint was placed in a glass of water and the same quantity of acid placed in another glass and passed among the jurors so that they could note the difference.

In her suit Mrs. King had asked for $50,000 damages from the Royal Manufacturing Company. The defense admitted delivery of certain drugs to the pharmacy from which Mrs. King bought the preparation, but denied delivering the powerful acid labeled as "essence of peppermint." Attorney H. Fred Mercer represented the Kings.

Beer Sale Order Given Secretly, Says Slater

John F. (Hap) Slater, County Airport grill concessionaire, testified today at the injunction hearing to prevent the County Commissioners' ouster proceedings against him that he was told by Commissioner Barr and Mansfield to "go ahead and get a beer license but keep quiet because we don't want it to get in the newspapers."

Slater testified the Commissioners took him into a back room "behind the gold room" for the conference which, he testified, occurred in April, 1933, two months before he was given the airport concession.

Commissioner Barr took the stand and denied Slater's testimony. Barr denied that any official action had ever been taken by the Board of County Commissioners to authorize the sale of beer at any of the county concessions but he admitted that beer was being sold without permission.

Barr declared that he never would approve the sale of beer at the concessions.

The injunction hearing is being held before Judge Ambrose B. Reid. Assistant County Solicitors Ralph H. Frank and John H. Lauer are representing the Commissioners. Attorney H. Stewart Dunn is Slater's counsel.

Woman Falls Dead Walking on Street

Mrs. Martha Krakowska, 64, of 3309 Ridgway street, collapsed while walking in Bigelow boulevard early today and was pronounced dead at West Penn Hospital, presumably from a heart attack according to a morgue report.

Boulevard Flooded By Defective Tap

Water poured into Baum boulevard near Morewood avenue early today when a shut-off valve failed. The water was shut off by employes of the Department of Water without damage.

McNair Lawyer Writes Jones Denying Remarks

In a letter to Edward N. Jones, state director of the National Recovery Act, Patrick J. Corr, attorney for Mayor McNair, has indicated that if Jones sues the Mayor for slander, the Mayor will plead that he did not make the statements attributed to him concerning Jones.

McNair is reported to have said former Mayor Magee had "fired Jones," after saying David L. Lawrence, state Democratic leader, had wanted Jones named Director of Public Safety. Jones said he was not fired, but simply quit.

Corr's letter read in part:

"This is to inform you that Mr. McNair did not make the statement."

The NRA head recently wrote to the Mayor asserting he would enter suit if he did not make a full retraction.

Roomer Best Looking Man She Has Ever Known, Susan Tells Mary

CHAPTER XI.

She was dressing now for an engagement to go to the movies with one of her young men friends, and Susan was sitting at the foot of her bed watching her in the mirror of the dressing table. It was 6 o'clock and through the half open door of the bedroom the fragrance of marrowfat beans, baked with molasses and onion and white bacon in the kitchen, came to mingle with the fragrance of Mary's French perfume and face powder.

"Tell me about this new man at your house, Susan," she said, leaning close to the glass to put some eye shadow in just the right place at the corner of her eye. Mary's method of making up was to put on rouge and lipstick and powder and eye shadow with a generous hand, and then to wipe practically all of it off with a clean piece of old linen. The result was that she never looked artificial but only delicately tinted and interesting. Girls knew that she made up her face, but they could never persuade their men friends that she did.

"It must gripe the Brodericks to have to take in a roomer," Mary added. "Who is he? Some broken down aristocrat friend of theirs?" Aunt Nell and Uncle Arthur were too proud to discuss the older Brodericks, who had never taken any notice whatsoever of them. But Mary had no inhibitions about them—or about anything else. What she wanted to talk about she did talk about with the most perfect frankness and freedom.

"No, he's a young man. A stranger," Susan answered her. "Uncle Worthy put an ad in the paper and he answered it."

She paused for just the fraction of a second. "He's the best looking man I've ever seen," she finished.

Mary swung around on the seat before the dressing table and looked at her, her eyes round with pretended amazement.

"Surely, Susan, you're not saying a thing like that about another man when you're just engaged to Wallie! When you've just picked him out from the whole world of good-looking men! Darling, I'm afraid he wouldn't enjoy hearing you say that."

Susan shrugged her shoulders. "I can be in love and still realize that there are a good many handsome men around, besides Wallace. Being engaged doesn't make you blind, Mary."

'Bring Him Over'

Mary turned back to her work. "I've heered different," she said.

She picked up a lipstick and bore down heavily on her mouth. "Some girls has all the luck," she went on. "Think of you getting yourself engaged, and then meeting the best looking man you've ever seen all in one day. It just isn't fair, Susie. As soon as you really know this new man you must bring him over here so I can work on him."

Susan said, "All right, if I can manage it," in a dry little tone.

"He probably doesn't expect to become very friendly with us, just being there at night," she said presently. "He takes his meals out, of course, and he's studying law at night. I don't imagine we'll see much of him."

Mary was powdering her white neck with an enormous green swansdown puff. Her bright hair came down upon the nape in a V of copper red.

"You bring him 'round, Susie," she said, and then she began to sing in a high nasal voice:

"'Young men lodgers,
Young men lodgers,
Young men lodgers, three.
One for you,
And one for Sue,
And the other one
For ME'—"

Suddenly she stopped and all the humor went out of her pretty clever face. "Listen to me, Susie Broderick! If you're engaged to one man, and you think that another man, whom you've just met, is the best looking one you ever saw," she said slowly, "you'd just better watch your step. That's all."

Just by coming to live in the house Mr. Sholes had changed it completely for Susan. It became for her, from the first week of his stay in it, a place of adventure and interest.

She had always tried to be downstairs at eight in the morning to help Anna empty the ash trays, pick up the newspapers of the day before, putting the lower floor into a semblance of order before the family came down to breakfast.

Lingers at Doorway

During the first days of Mr. Sholes' occupancy of Grandfather Broderick's room, Susan lingered about the doorway of the parlor in the morning so that she could speak to him when he came downstairs a little before eight. She told herself that it seemed dreadful not to be friendly to him when he was so nice about using the side door. He made no unnecessary trouble about the house. He left it early and returned late. No mail came for him, and he carried out his own laundry in a bundle. To Susan, who saw him take it, there was something oddly pathetic about that bundle tied up in newspaper. She was accustomed to men who found clean collars and shirts in their bureau drawers every day and never asked whose hands had washed and ironed and put them there.

She soon learned that the nights he went to law school were Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Sometimes on the other nights he would come home early to change his clothes before going out again to dinner. She always managed to see him then, on the stairs or in the hall, and say, "Good evening, Mr. Sholes," hoping he would stop for a minute to talk to her. But he never did.

He went his own way, kept to himself and showed no curiosity about the people in whose midst he had come to live, so far as Susan could see.

They were far more curious about him. On morning Lutie came into his bedroom when Susan and Anna were cleaning it, and began to look through his things.

"'Allen G. Sholes,'" she read aloud his name, written on the fly leaf of one of his books. "Nice name."

She opened the door of his closet and looked in. "Not very many clothes," she commented, closing it, "and not very good ones."

Wardrobe Scant

She strolled across the room to his dresser. Without looking at it Susan knew just how few things there were on it. A pair of military brushes, a comb, a pair of nail scissors, an open cardboard collar box with three stiff collars and a few inexpensive handkerchiefs in it.

"Lutie, don't!" she cried out, stopping in the middle of her work. "Don't look at his things!"

But her aunt was pulling out the drawers of Grandfather Broderick's massive old bureau. "My word! His things don't fill even the top drawer," she said, and, glancing within the drawer involuntarily, Susan saw that what she said was true. There was a pile of linen at one end of the drawer and a half dozen pair of sox at the other end. Between them, pressed under a book, were three neckties. As she looked at them, Susan's heart swelled with pity just as it had when she saw him walk out of the house with his bundle of washing.

"Please shut the drawer, Lutie!" she said. "We haven't any right to pry into his things just because he lives in our house. I think it's a mean thing to do!" With a sharp sudden movement her hand went out and closed the drawer with a bang.

There was no real reason for feeling sorry for Mr. Sholes, she kept telling herself later on as she went around the house finishing the morning's work. He was young and strong; he had a position, and he was fitting himself for a career. Everyone couldn't have the perfectly matched ties and socks, the thin gold watch and cigaret case, the tailor-made suits and custom-made shoes of a Wallace Steffen. . . . All this was true, but the odd little stir of pity stayed in her breast just the same.

Synopsis

Lovely Susan Broderick lives in the old family mansion with her father, Morris, brother John, Uncle Worthy, his wife, Edna, and a spinster aunt, Lutie. Although they have lost their wealth the old folks live in a dream world of social prominence. They feel humiliated when it is necessary to take in a "paying guest." Susan is filled with pity for the stranger; she knows he will be ignored by her snobbish relatives. The family wonders what Susan's fiance, Wallace Steffen, young banker, will think. John, working his way through college, wants to give it up, and get a job on The Express. His father's heart is set on the boy becoming a lawyer. John does not like Wallace and warns Susan to be sure she really loves him before marrying. While Susan is waiting for Wallace, Mr. Sholes, the roomer, arrives. Uncle Worthy reprimands her for talking with Sholes. Wallace presents Susan with a diamond and sapphire ring. Later, Susan comes upon the jeweler's box, stamped with the name of a firm long out of business. The Brodericks objected to Suan and John being friendly with their late mother's relatives, the Cullens. The Cullen home was like the family itself—cheerful, friendly and large. Uncle Arthur Cullen owns a grocery store.

Glass Chapel Builder Marks Anniversary

SPARTA, Wis., June 15.—(AP)—In the tiny "Chapel of Glass" which thousands of sightseers visit annually and where countless sentimental lovers have chosen to be married, Paul J. Wegner, its builder, observed his golden wedding anniversary.

It seats only 22.

Rodney Descendant Dies in Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA, June 15.—(INS.)—Landreth L. Layton, 73, a descendant of one of Delaware's oldest families and Democratic candidate for Governor of that state in 1932, is dead here today.

NRA Holiday Bars Statehood Fete

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 15.—(AP)—The state celebration Saturday of the anniversary of the NRA is shoving a legal state holiday into the discard. Gov. Kump has proclaimed a special holiday for celebration of the NRA's anniversary and the state's birthday.

His office said today that in view of the proclamation the customary legal holiday on June 20, anniversary of the state's birth, will be disregarded.

Constable in Row Not Maloney Aide

In a report of a North Side street squabble, Louis Eisenbeis, 44, of Ruxton street, was identified as a deputy constable from Alderman A. M. Maloney's office, as he so testified in North Side Police Court. Eisenbeis is a deputy from the Seventeenth Ward, where he worked out of the office of the late Alderman Thomas D. Jones.

Since Alderman Jones' death much of his office work has been wound up through Maloney's office. Eisenbeis was discharged when arraigned in the police court.

98 out of 100 Women say— "THIS MEDICINE HELPS ME!"

They take it before and after childbirth, at middle age, when they are nervous, weak and rundown. They give it to their daughters and they recommend it to their neighbors. When a woman learns from experience how good this medicine is, she is always eager to tell some other woman about it.

By accurate record, more than 800,000 women report benefit. Let it help you too. Get a bottle from your druggist today.

"For five years I suffered terribly with headache and backache and was so nervous I would have to go to bed. I took different medicines but with no results until a friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking four bottles I am a different woman. I only wish I had started on it when I first had my troubles."—Mrs. H. B. Lusby, 202 N. 34th St., Louisville, Ky.

"No Backache Now"

"I have five children and a large house to attend to, besides church affairs. Last summer I was weak and rundown, and suffered so with my back. Six bottles of the Vegetable Compound helped me wonderfully. I do all my work now, sew for others and have no backache. If every woman would only take this medicine four times a day regularly there would be fewer pained faces."—Mrs. G. M. Ketel, 8558 N. Allegheny Ave., Portland, Ore.

"I am a young mother. Before my baby was born I was so rundown and nervous that I could not do my own housework. My mother told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to ease my nerves and prepare me for childbirth. After only a few bottles I was up and doing my work cheerfully. Childbirth was very easy, thanks to your medicine".—Mrs. John Ellis, 6308 So. Campbell Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Airport. Aviation history will be made at our air pageant and I hope that you are going to be one of the thousands helping to make it. I'm counting on meeting you at the field!

There is not much more that I can tell you about the air show except that I believe about every one of the 2,000 members of the Pittsburgh Sun-Teleghaph wing will be there to see the dandy program that has been planned. It will be one of the greatest spectacles of its kind ever put on in this part of the country.

The program starts at 12 noon with an inspection of the field, hangars, municipal building and control tower. At 2 p. m. Sergt. U. S. Madden, in charge of the South Park police, will put on a horse-jumping show at the field for your amusement. That should be a treat for you members who like horses.

Then at 2 p. m. the air pageant will begin. Taking charge of it will be Lieut. Corley McDarment, commandant at Rodgers Field, and one of the finest writers on aviation subjects in the United States. He is a real gentleman and always interested in helping young boys and girls to understand aviation.

Noted Pilots Take Part in Pageant

In the thrilling air show will be Col. Roscoe Turner, one of America's topnotch fliers. He is flying almost 3,000 miles from Seattle, Wash., in his speed plane in order to attend the pageant. You members should be willing to go five or eight miles to the airport to see such a famous pilot.

Also you will want to see Lieut. Felix Vaitkus, Lithuanian United States Army aviator, and the ship in which he will make a trans-Atlantic flight next month. You will also have a chance to see Capt. Haig, one of Australia's most famous airmen.

Other fliers include Lieut. "Light Horse" Harry Wilson, former football star at West Point. He will fly here from Langley Field, Va., in an Army pursuit plane.

Miss Helen Richey, McKeesport endurance flier, and Miss Helen MacCloskey, Pittsburgh's flying society girl, will both be at the field to stunt their ships for you.

Special Street Car Rates to Field

Though the County Airport is located outside of the city there is no reason why you cannot attend the field day. Special street car and bus rates have been arranged to get you there.

A special 25-cent round-trip street car and bus pass to the field for any boy or girl under 16 years of age has been arranged by the Sun-Telegraph through the Pittsburgh Railways Company. The pass will be on sale at the following stations:

The Sun-elegraph main office, Telegraph square; the Sun-Telegraph branch office, Fifth avenue and Market street; Homewood News Company, 540 North Homewood avenue, Homewood; L. Brouty Confectionery, 5466 Penn avenue; Brown's Confectionery, 115 Shady avenue; Mr. Conegley, book store, 326 East Eighth avenue, Homestead; Young News, 5904 Forbes street; Rodgers Brothers, 316 Seventh street, Braddock; Muhr's Confectionery, 757 Chartiers avenue, McKees Rocks; West End Dairy Store, 432 Main street, West End; Carrick News Company, 2605 Brownsville road, Carrick; P. & A. News, 220 Federal street, North Side; North Boro News, 603 Lincoln avenue, Bellevue; C. Eiszler, Freeport street, Etna; Tege's Confectionery, 622 East Ohio street, North Side.

To reach the airport from the downtown, take a No. 56 McKeesport car. It will carry you out Second avenue, through Hays and Lincoln Place. At Grandview stop—where the Lebanon Church road bridge crosses the street car tracks—a bus will take you the remaining mile to the airport.

Let's all hope that it doesn't rain. If the skies look cloudy, listen in on radio station WCAE Saturday morning for an announcement as to whether the pageant will be held or not.

Meet's Chief

CORLEY McDARMENT

claimed Saturday as "Aviation Day" in Pittsburgh.

Col. Roscoe Turner, Lieut. Vaitkus, Capt. Frederick W. Haig, of Australia, and probably Lieut. "Light Horse" Harry Wilson, former West Point grid star, will be on the program, and in addition to noted men and women fliers of this district.

Lieut. McDarment, who is widely known in literary and aviation worlds for his articles on aviation, looks to the first air pageant sponsored by the Sun-Telegraph wing, Junior Birdmen of America, to arouse intense interest in flying by showing young America—as well as adults—how active Pittsburgh already is in commercial and individual aviation.

Col. Turner, now in Seattle, is flying direct to Pittsburgh in order to speed and stunt for the youngsters of the district. He is coming in his racing plane, capable of a speed of 300 miles per hour.

Such stunts as bursting balloons high in the sky, making "spot" landings, flying in procession in a "follow the leader" game and many other entertainment features will occupy the afternoon.

The program will begin at noon with a trip about the airport under direction of Maj. Hal T. Barley, manager of the field. The flying stunts will start at 2 o'clock.

Another feature of the pageant will be a horse jumping program which has been arranged by Capt. W. E. Rucker, in charge of the county police. It will be staged in the traffic circle in front of the airport municipal building and will begin at 2 p. m. Sergt. U. S. Madden, who is in charge of the South Park police, and some of his men will put on the horse show.

Children of 16 and under will be able to get special transportation tickets to the field for only 25 cents. News about this will be found in today's Junior Birdmen column.

Weather reports will be carefully checked on the morning of the event so that announcements may be made over WCAE at intervals on Saturday morning as to whether the air pageant will be carried out. Its postponement from last week was forced by rain and a low ceiling.

TWO FLEE ISLAND PRISON IN BOAT

TACOMA, Wash., June 15—(AP.)—Two prisoners from the McNeil Island Penitentiary were sought by armed posses today after a sensational four-mile dash for the mainland in a motorboat.

Throughout the night officials of the penitentiary, known as the "prison without walls," led guards through the woods off the Fort Lewis military reservation in search of the men, William L. Fitzmaurice, 34, San Francisco counterfeiter, and T. P. Audette, 32, Portland (Ore.) automobile thief.

Fitzmaurice and Audette broke through a barred door in the cell block and entered a tunnel leading to the prison's auditorium yesterday afternoon. They made their way to the main prison yard and, with no tower guards on duty, cut through a wire gate.

Discovered, they broke into a sharp run down a 300-yard incline to the prison's dock as the prison alarm sounded. They overpowered the pilot of the motorboat and started the motor. Before other boats set out in pursuit they were more than two miles on the four-mile race to the mainland.

New Price Fixing In Ice Cream Milk

HARRISBURG, June 15—(AP.)—Fluid cream to be used in the manufacture of ice cream may be sold by Pennsylvania milk dealers to others at not less than 18 per cent above the minimum price the dealer pays the farmer.

The State Milk Control Board announced the new ruling yesterday.

Courses for teachers, which run for six weeks will begin Monday, June 25. Registration for these classes which will be in art, music, drama and industrial education, will be held on June 22 and 23.

Youth Injured In Truck Mishap

Mike Olexsa, 14, of 322 Vine street, Munhall, suffered lacerations early today when an automobile driven by his stepbrother, Albert Mioski, 28, collided with a guard chain in the produce yards at Sixteenth and Pike streets. Both were treated at St. Francis Hospital.

Illusions

This will go on—this thinking in a room—
When I am old and rock the hours away;
All that is past of loveliness will bloom
Afresh, and seem exceedingly more gay
Than formerly . . . and I shall think of you
So pleasantly, the things we did and said,
And smile and nod remembering we two
Were once in love and very nearly wed.

And you will seem romance personified,
Our happiness more perfect than it was . . .
And I'll recall how tenderly I've sighed
With every foolish Spring I've known because

Proverbially woman's heart must carry
—Jane Sayre.

The Retort Dandy

The performance by Will Rogers in O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness!" in Hollywood would rate any New York critic's approval. Rogers, however, wouldn't risk playing it there, he says. He actually is afraid of the New York reviewers—in the Cohan role. Imagine Will Rogers giving a damb.

But what we started out to jot down was this repartee in his undressing room the other night. Leslie Howard came back stage to congratulate Rogers.

"Will," he ejaculated, "I have never seen such acting!"

"You're the first one," quipped Will, "to tell me the truth."

Incidentally

In his curtain speech every show Rogers tells the spectators if they witnessed George M. Cohan playing it in the New York troupe—they can go right up to the box office and get half their money back.

"Why," snapped a clown heckler, "you don't really think you're even half as good as Cohan, do you?"

As If You Didn't Know

Ham and Cheese

Louis Calhern and Sidney Blackmer, a pair of the better actors in the West Coast Studios, were working long hours over a scene in "Count of Monte Cristo." They were costumed in high collars, Wellington boots, etc. (a la Marseilles 1815) and they finally got a "take" that was okay'd.

"That scene," said Sidney, "could be played a lot better."

"But," squelched Calhern, "not by us."

Gag

Mae Clarke, one of the lovelier persons on the West Coast, tells how they discovered the first no-man in Hollywood. It appears that all the producer's yes-men were gathered about him at a preview, and when the flicker ended, he selected the lad next to him and exclaimed:

"Did you ever see a better picture?"

A Friend Passes

The flash over the wires from Manhattan which told of the passing of Billy La Hiff was not unexpected—but the definite news brought on the aches to many of us who were Billy's friends. He was the sort of fellow you mentioned in the first three names—when you mentioned Broadway's grandest guys.

When I was having it toughest (pardon me for repeating myself) and didn't know where the rent was coming from or the next meal—Billy La Hiff "carried" me and my brood for nearly a year. I know hundreds of others he befriended that way, too. And he once went broke doing it!

But that's the kind of a man Billy La Hiff was—and no wordage of mine can embroider a finer epitaph.

Observation

Add Thumb Nail Sketches

Julius Tannen: Skippy with a Roman nose.

Imagine

A boy actor about 12 is the sole support of his parents—one of whom is his stepdad. The stepfather won't even pretend to work or go looking for it—being satisfied to live off the child's earnings.

The other day the step-pop started chopping down the only tree in the backyard of the home.

"Why are you doing that?" he was asked.

"Because those darn birds that perch on it," he growled, "keep me awake in the mornings!"

Newspaperman Stuff

Tom Kiene, of The Blade-Empire, Concordia, Kan., says that the man who "never heard a speech short enough" would enjoy meeting Jack Harris, of the Hutchinson (Kan.) News.

Harris was among others banqueted by a fraternity recently. He was to receive recognition as the best columnist in the state. When called on for a talk, he said:

"The fellow who just finished told the story I wanted to tell—so I'm done."

Then he sat down—and got the biggest hand all night!

Who Wouldn't?

Haw!

"The Phantom Gypsy," a darn good fiddler, reports that this expense account was turned in by Gene Fowler, when Gene was a reporter. Fowler was in Alaska on an assignment, and the swindle sheet went this way: One pair of colored glasses, 20 cents; one dog team to go to Nome to get the glasses, $250.00; bonus paid to driver for loss of one dog, $200.00—total cost of glasses, $450.20.

Parents Are Like That

It was when Irving Caesar's father was dying that he sent for his son, whose new musical show had clicked. The old gent asked his boy how the show was going.

"I want to be happy," wept Irving, "but I can't be happy."

"Look, look," interrupted the father, "I'm dying and I'm satisfied, and he's living and complaining!"

Mr. Trabert In Remade Opera

By GEORGE SEIBEL

George Trabert, of Pittsburgh, is to appear on Broadway in a new musical play called "Gipsy Blonde." It sounds Hollywoodish. And in fact there is a very tall Ethiopian in the woodpile, for this new play is our old friend "The Bohemian Girl," without which, with Zelie de Lussan, no week of light opera used to be complete. "I Dreamt I Dwelt in Marble Halls" and "The Heart Bowed Down" may soon be heard over the air, just as "Champagne Sec," which was Strauss' "Fledermaus" jazzed up, brought back some old familiar waltz tunes.

Mr. Seibel

But why should a cheap and trashy title be foisted on the delightful opus of Balfe? Are they afraid people may have heard of "The Bohemian Girl?"

It looks as if the literary geniuses who used to write dime novels were now concocting titles for films and plays. If it were "Faust" it would appear as "A Soul for Sale," and if it were "Antony and Cleopatra" it would emerge as "The Vamp and the Viper."

Well, Lawrence Barrett once played "Hamlet" in New Castle under the title of "The Grave Burst, or the Ghost's Piteous Tale of Horror." So this is nothing new.

SHORTEST CRITIQUES

Recently I had occasion to look up the shortest criticisms in the annals of the stage. One of them appeared in an American paper, and was as follows:

"A play by Ulysses S—— was played last night. Heaven will judge him."

The other appeared in an English paper, and read:

"Last night Mr. W——'s play was produced. Quite a number of people stayed to the end."

There is also the classic criticism of "Hamlet" as played by a barnstorming tragedian. The critic praised him by saying he was "funny without being vulgar."

TELLING THE BARD

Burlesque criticisms of "Hamlet" have appeared in many places, and one that always seemed most amusing was the offering of a backwoods Alan Dale:

"In this piece," he began, "there is too much chinning. The author is behind the times, and forgets that what the public wants nowadays is thrilling situations, brilliant detective work and pretty girls. In the hands of an up-to-date playwright, a sleuth would have been put on the trail of Ham's uncle, and the old man would have been hunted down in a way to lift the gallery gods right out of their boots. The moral of the piece is not good. The scene where Hamlet sasses his mother sets a very bad example to the rising generation. Our advice to the author is a little more action, a lot more sentiment, and a spice of variety business in his next piece. In the play scene there was a chance for barefoot and art dances that was entirely overlooked. Try again, Bill."

All this shows that there is nothing new under the sun. Even the cart of Thespis, who was the first actor, is with us again. The Federal Portable Theaters, which are to travel from town to town, the van being turned into a stage to give productions in any park, is only a modern version of that old cart which rumbled over the hills of Greece.

Sleuth Role Again Goes To Vic

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, June 15.—Hello! Victor McLaglen's hard-boiled detective characterizations are becoming almost as cinematically famous as William Powell's portrayal of Philo Vance. Vic adds another badge-trotting role to his list when he steps before the camera for Lewis Milestone's special Columbia movie, "The Captain Hates the Sea," one of Wallace Smith's better yarns.

Jack Warner has weakened for another expensive production—a new John Monk Saunders yarn, "The Lafayette Escadrille," which is to tell the exciting air thrills of the daring squadron of American fliers under the French flag.

Aerial productions are the most costly, yet Jack Warner feels Saunders has a sure-fire winner in his true story of the daring birdmen, of which the late William Thaw, of Pittsburgh, was one of the original half dozen. There's one Hollywood chap, Ted Parsons, who "came through" and lives to tell about it.

Wanderings Around Hollywood—Joe E. Brown's gone j'alai daffy and will attempt to introduce the fast-and-furious game to Hollywood . . . Now that Colin Clive has been ticketed by Warners, the missus (Jeanne de Casalis) is a-boating it here . . . Paul Gerard Smith has joined the Paramount gag staff . . . Charlie Chaplin's up to his old stay-up-late tricks—sitting around the Brown Derby all hours with King Vidor and Dudley Murphy . . . M-G-M is doing most of the talking to Garbo on a new contract. So far, she's as silent as ever—if not more so! Lloyd Bacon is set to wield that tapered tube on Joe E. Brown in "Six-Day Bicycle Race."

Boulevard Buzzing About—Helen Lowell has landed a lengthy Warner ticket . . . Rena Borzage, Frank's wife, tagged along to West Point, but will SKIP off to New York for a show-seeing spell.

Odds and Ends—Russ Columbo's option has been lifted by Universal . . . Dorothy Lee is slated to do a short comedy with Walter Woolf for RKO . . . Lee Tracy, cinemaland's fast talker, and Rosco Ates, the village's slowest gab guy, met for the first time. Lee said, "Hello, how are you?" and "goodbye" before Rosco could get into his stuttering routine.

Kinema Knick-knacks—Nobody paid any attention to the death of Gloria Warner, pretty chorus girl, who died last Friday. She, too, was heading for big breaks . . . Major Rupert Hughes, the literary laddie, is reported as the man with the money bags behind "Air Mates," a musical comedy now in rehearsal . . . Gloria Swanson is being waved at by Fox for the feminine lead in "Music in the Air."

Your Theater and Mine -:- By KARL KRUG

HOLES IN HIS SHOES

From the tons of publicity material shipped East each year from Hollywood, it is a rare day indeed that such a story as the following can be culled. It is the best yarn to come from a motion picture studio press department since Nulty, the dope fiend, died after getting an extra's role in "Mother's Boy."

It concerns Charlie Ray, who has taken a terrific buffeting from life, and, with apologies to nobody, I set it down exactly as it came from Tom Baily, of Paramount.

There were holes in his shoes—holes through which peered sturdy, long-wearing socks, and there were other things about him that were so unlike the Charles Ray of eight years ago. A decade or so has passed since this characterizer of Horatio Alger-like heroes trod importantly on the screen. Those 10 years have been unkind to him: they've witnessed the passing of three fortunes, a unique art collection and an elaborate home.

The Charles Ray of today is a humble man, considerable of a philosopher on the futilities of life. He is starting all over again at Paramount, which in recent months has dealt new opportunities to William Farnum, Helene Chadwick, George Walsh, Ruth Clifford and Jack Mulhall, a quintet of former notables whom Fate forgot.

CHARLIE GETS JOB

Charlie believes that luck runs in cycles and that his stretch of heartaches is over. He points to a romantic episode of a few days ago to prove this belief. Without hope of landing a job he arrived at the studio to tell his old friend, Douglas MacLean, Paramount producer, that he was up and around again after a sick spell of many weeks.

He also told MacLean that he had sent a novel of Hollywood life to a New York publisher in the hope that it would be accepted and that he would be "able to eat for a while" on the small advance that goes with an acceptance. "Doug" remembered Charlie when he didn't have holes in his shoes and when he would have been a bit more meticulous about the cut of his coat and the hang of his trousers.

He also remembered that once upon a time Charlie had been a screen figure to be reckoned with, an actor of more than average ability, popular with the great mass of moviegoers known as the "family audience." Out of a clear sky, he offered Charlie a part, and a fairly good one, in "Ladies Should Listen."

GLOSS OFF HIS DREAMS

And so Charlie Ray came back into pictures—into his first talking film—not as the barefoot boy and bashful lover type that he once portrayed, but as a character actor and a man with a philosophy based on the rough-and-tumble pranks that life can play on those riding the crest of fame and fortune.

One of his greatest delights in getting back to work seems to be that it will enable him to get a start in paying off his "honest" debts, which are plentiful and the result of almost three years of sickness and idleness. Happily for him, he has no illusions of paying these off quickly, for the gloss has come off his day dreams and the bitter realities alone confront him.

It was with Thomas H. Ince and Paramount that Ray scored his big successes, appearing in such box-office triumphs as "The Coward," "The Deserter," "The Dividend," "The Pinch Hitter" and "The Clodhopper." It was after he organized his own company in 1920 that his popularity waned and his fortune sagged.

It is a splendid gesture on the part of Paramount to give so many of the silent-day stars a chance to talk their way back to screen recognition. George Walsh, hero of more than 100 silent photoplays, was one of the best lost in the shuffle when sound came to the screen. He did a good bit in "The Bowery," but the best "break" he has had since the loudspeakers were turned on is in Mae West "It Ain't No Sin.

GREEN ROOM GLEANINGS

Bill Beck, assistant Stanley manager, and the Missus have returned from their Atlantic City honeymoon . . . It's been two years and a half since Duke Ellington and his band have played a stage engagement here . . . The Duke comes to the Penn a week from today . . . Jimmy Totman, Warner manager in Erie, drew first honorable mention in the Martin Quigley awards for May for his "Twenty Million Sweethearts" publicity campaign . . . Mike Cullen, Penn manager, and Manny Greenwald also won a Quigley certificate of honor for their work on "The House of Rothschild" . . . One of the few complaints I heard against the Arliss picture was that Loretta Young wasn't "the Jewish type" . . . Philip Reed, who appears as the crooner in "Glamour," in the Warner, is the brother of a well known Broadway playboy and his right name is Trinnis . . . Roy Rowe, Warner manager, is home from North Carolina, but he left the Missus and the baby in Dixie for a month . . . Bob Nathan, ahead of "Little Man, What Now," was connected with the local Paramount office back in 1920 . . .

Grins and Bitters

TWO OF the most brilliant young men in the publicity business today are Marc Lachmann and Monte Proser. Marc and Monte joined forces a few weeks ago. And both being keen-witted and extremely well-liked, the partnership was an immediate success. There's nobody on Broadway who doesn't wish them well.

The other day, the firm was handed the exploitation job for "Are We Civilized?" the new picture at the Rivoli. Marc looked around for something novel as a photographic stunt and finally dug up a gentleman by the name of Joe Cadillac.

Cadillac is an old circus man who now earns a living by eating live fish. Don't laugh. It's absolutely true. The man plucks goldfish from a bowl and swallows them alive, one at a time. He makes his money by giving exhibitions of this startling stunt. And the only thing he can't do is to bring 'em back alive.

Armed with a bowl of goldfish, a few cameramen and Mr. Cadillac, Marc Lachmann started out the other evening on his exploitation stunt. Cadillac was made up to represent a primitive man, whatever that might have been, and the first stop was Leon and Eddie's unique cafe.

Frankly, Lachmann didn't know what was going to happen. He didn't know whether Cadillac would actually swallow a fish, because the man had given no demonstration. But since he had his photographers along, he was hoping for the best.

Into Leon and Eddie's marched the amazing troupe. The bowl of goldfish was placed on the bar. The photographers set up their cameras. A crowd gathered around. Joe Cadillac gave a resounding whoop, reached into the bowl, yanked out a squirming fish—and swallowed it in a gulp.

Cadillac stood perfectly still for a moment while the crowd gasped. Then, suddenly, he gave his stomach a resounding whack. It was far from a pat. As a matter of fact the man almost floored himself with his own punch.

Lachmann grew nervous.

"Hey, Joe," he cried, "What's the big idea?"

The fish swallower drew a long breath.

"You gotta knock 'em out," he explained as he reached for the bowl again. "Otherwise they give you indigestion!" . . .

OVER in one of the night clubs, Mildred and Marge are two chorines who generally squabble throughout the night. The other evening, the manager nailed Mildred and unfolded the sad news that her salary would be cut $5. The girl beefed a bit, but finally said she'd accept.

"That's fine," said the manager. "And as long as you've been so nice, I'm going to ask your advice. What kind of cut do you think I should give Marge?"

The girl never hesitated.

"From ear to ear," was her reply . . .

A SANDWICH man, reports Manny Hall, was working in the vicinity of Radio City. He stood directly in front of the main entrance to the broadcasting studios and marched up and down. Strangely enough, though, the signs he carried were a total blank.

A radio executive stopped him yesterday.

"What's the idea?" asked the mogul. "What benefit do you get out of walking around with blank signs?"

"That's my business," returned the sandwich man. "I'm only sustaining now, but I'll have a commercial soon." . . .

"Good Night, A Tarzan Good Nights." . . .

"JUST heard about a Sally Rand imitator being pulled in by the police," wires Sam Gevins. "The charge was fan-handling.

"And believe it or not, Mark, she is being held for feather examination!" . . .

THE genial Joe Zelli, most popular cafe man in Paris, is back in New York again. He redecorated the old Park Avenue Club, installed a cooling system, hired the lovely Gloria Grafton, signed a puppet show for the first time in night club history—and threw open his doors. Within two weeks, Zelli's has become the most popular late spot in town.

I'm glad, because I like Zelli. He has taken it on the chin for a lot of dough on several occasions, but he has always come up smiling. If he had stuck to the cafe business exclusively, he'd have a lot more money than he has today. But he insisted on fooling with theatrical productions. And those are famous last words.

Zelli is the only producer in history who opened a show on Broadway, ran it for two nights, closed it for a week, had the play rewritten, changed his cast, opened it again—and closed it in four nights. The production was a very costly failure—and could never have been anything else.

Joe is going to make a great deal of money out of this new club. He'll have to. Because—and this is one for the book—he wants to give the same play another chance in the fall!" . . .

Family Life Comedy and Triangle Film Are Bill In Warner

By KARL KRUG

A mildly diverting domestic comedy, "The Merry Frinks," and a slow-paced, badly cast domestic drama, "Glamour," from the Edna Ferber magazine story, comprises the new double bill in the Warner.

Before "The Merry Frinks" grows serious in intent it is good, forthright fun, offering a sterling cast in the persons of Aline MacMahon, Hugh Herbert, Frankie Darro, Guy Kibbee, Helen Lowell and Allen Jenkins. Crowded into a small Bronx flat is the Frink family, and bedlam reigns day and night. To Miss MacMahon has gone the role of the long-suffering mother of the Frinks and as long as Miss MacMahon does not grow serious with her suffering, "The Merry Frinks" is good enough humor for the likes of any movie audience.

While the merry Frinks are not in themselves merry their raucous clashes are productive of that always pleasing theater tidbit, family strife, a homely subject that never fails to take with the lookers-on. As a hard-drinking, irresponsible sports writer, Hugh Herbert, father of the Frinks, gives another of his superb characterizations, and Guy Kibbee is high class as Uncle Newt from New Zealand, free boarder in the household, whose appetite finally ends his earthly existence.

Allen Jenkins, with Bolshevik tendencies and Frankie Darro, as the prize-fighting youngster going under the nickname "Stinky," add to the humorous turmoil. Helen Lowell, with her taste for Scotch and gossip, is excellent as Grandmother Frink. Human and true to life, "The Merry Frinks" retains an even comedy keel until romance and pathos come in the door, and then most of the fun flies out the window.

"Glamour," just one more addition to the eternal triangle school, presents Paul Lukas and Constance Cummings in the leading roles, with a newcomer, Philip Reed, thrown in for one end of the triangle. What he lacks in acting ability, Mr. Reed makes up in romantic appeal, and his appearance may go a long way in creating a screen career for him.

As a playwright and song writer, Lukas makes Miss Cummings a star, marries her and then she goes for Reed. There's a baby that dies, and Miss Cummings comes back to Lukas, who is unable to compose hits without her. Mr. Lukas hasn't complained when Miss Cummings leaves him and, although her heart is still with the new love, she doesn't grumble when she returns to her first husband. In fact, the noble sacrifices tossed around in this one are just too ducky for words.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Jill Stern is acting as press agent for the Pittsburgh Civic Playhouse, which will begin its summer season in Arnold School, South Braddock avenue, Monday, June 25, with "The Curtain Rises." When she is not press-agenting Miss Stern is rehearsing a part in the play, in which she will make her debut in Pittsburgh, where she said she came to "get down seriously to the work of becoming an actress." And, for a newcomer, she is terrifically serious about the importance of the Pittsburgh Civic Playhouse. She feels that it is the real, genuine representative community enterprise, which is certainly a lot of loyalty to generate in a short time. This will not be her first dramatic experience, however, since she did her bit on the stage for her school, Bryn Mawr, and has acted in stock in two summer theaters. Haddonfield, N. J., is her home, and her daddy is David Stern, publisher of the Philadelphia Record, New York Post and the Camden Post-Courier.

Hy. Small, formerly of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement Players, has veered from the profession of acting to that of tunesmith. He and Harold Levenson, who turned out hit songs of this year's Pitt Cap and Gown show, have had an arrangement made of their "In My Heart, Cherie," which has been heard in Eddie Peyton's, and it will go to a publisher Saturday. Hank Johann, pianist at Peyton's, made the arrangement. The boys also have written a new one, "I Never Knew What Happiness Could Be," which will be heard in Eddie's place the first time Saturday night.

Harry Brown, manager of the Nixon, says his house has been staging scenery for "the last act." On the Nixon stage, for several days this week, there has been an exhibit of funeral coaches—hearses to you and me.

AND DON'T FORGET TO FIX SANDWICHES FOR KIDDIES

In planning your schedule for tomorrow, don't forget to include the making of a few sandwiches for Bobby and Jane. While they're at the Sun-Telegraph's Junior Birdmen air pageant with all their friends, those kiddies of yours are sure to become hungry.

And have you won a prize yet for your recipes sent to Prudence Penny, at the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. If you have, you know how welcome either a $5 or a $1 prize check is. If you haven't it's about time you entered the winners' class.

Five Dollar Prize Winner

MRS. GLEN WILD,
111 Thielman street, Carrick.

FOURTH OF JULY SHERBET

Boil one cup sugar and one-half cup of water to the thread stage. Pour slowly over stiffly-beaten whites of three eggs and continue beating until cold. Then very carefully beat the meringue into one quart of raspberry ice, whipping it to a pink froth. Serve in slender glasses and top with two or three raspberries and leaves. If you want to serve the sherbet in a more liquid form, the glasses may be half filled with the mixture, and then finished off with a fizzy, sparkling water.

This beverage, which is in reality half way between a beverage and a sherbet, is particularly suited to a garden party.

Five $1 Prize Winners

MISS MYRA E. NEAL,
7443 McClure avenue, Swissvale.

DATE BARS

Two eggs—beat and add:
One cup sifted brown sugar.
One cup chopped dates.
One cup English walnuts.
Five level tablespoons flour.
One-half teaspoon baking powder.
One-eighth teaspoon salt (approx.).

MRS. ALICE THOMAS
R. F. D., Verona.

SUNDAY NITE SALAD

One cup cooked meat cubes (chicken, pork or veal).
One cup walnut meats (put through large food chopper.)
One cup French peas.
Two hard cooked eggs.
One-quarter cup stuffed olives, lettuce and French dressing.

Chill the meat cubes and the tiny peas 15 minutes before serving. Marinate the meat, peas and nuts in French dressing and chill. Then arrange on lettuce leaves, dusting with paprika and dotting with mayonnaise. Cut hard cooked eggs into slices, remove the yolks, then arrange the white rings around the border. Cut the olives into rings and put a ring of the olive into the center of each white egg ring. Press the yolkes of egg through sieve. Scatter them over the salad.

MRS. LEONA SIRANN,
850 Franklin avenue, Apt. 5, Wilkinsburg.

ASPARAGUS WITH OLIVES

One bunch fresh asparagus.
One small bottle stuffed olives.
One-fourth pound sharp cheese.
Two cups medium white sauce.
Two tablespoons butter.
One-half cup bread crumbs.

Wash and cut asparagus in two-inch pieces. Cook in small amount salted boiling water, (uncovered). Drain and place in bottom of buttered baking dish, over which arrange layer of sliced stuffed olives, followed by layer of sliced cheese. Cover with white sauce, dot with butter, top with crumbs and bake in moderate oven for 20 minutes.

MRS. ELIZA VOGEL,
R. D. 2, No. 7, Leechburg.

STRAWBERRY CREAM ROLL

Sift and then measure one cupful of flour. Add half a teaspoonful of baking powder and a dash of salt and sift again. Sift one cupful of fine granulated sugar. Beat three eggs to a light froth, add the sugar and beat again, until lemon-colored and thick. Then add three tablespoons of water and beat again. Flavor with one teaspoonful of vanilla, or half a teaspoonful of lemon extract. Fold in the flour and just at the last add one tablespoonful of melted butter. Pour into a flat, shallow pan which has been well greased and lightly floured. Bake a very light brown, and not more than 15 minutes in a moderate oven. Turn out on a paper sprinkled with powdered sugar, and carefully trim away the edges. Sprinkle the cake very lightly with powdered sugar, then roll it up in a clean towel until partly cooled, when it may be unrolled and spread with this filling. Crush slightly one cupful of strawberries and add three-quarters of a cupful of granulated sugar, stir a moment and add one unbeaten egg white. Then pour the egg beater in the bowl and beat lightly until the whole mixture is just one big, fluffy mass. Spread over the cake (leaving one roll it up once more. Serve on a pretty platter garnished with perfect whole berries and their leaves. You can use other fruit in the same way.

MRS. BERNICE BROWN,
1464 Grape avenue, Steubenville, O.

CANTALOUPE FROZEN ICE

Two cups water.
One cup sugar.
Four tablespoons lemon juice.
Two teaspoons gelatin dissolved in
Two tablespoons cold water.
One cantaloupe, pulp ground through food chopper.

Stir sugar and water until dissolved and boil three minutes. Add lemon juice and gelatine. Cool slightly and add the ground cantaloupe, or any other fruit you can use in place of the cantaloupe. Freeze.

"Now I know what 'Blended to a Flavor Standard' means"

You are hearing remarks like this all over Pittsburgh

It means that the flavor of BEECH-NUT COFFEE is never allowed to vary. It is always of the same mellowness and richness which appeals to millions.

There is a definite reason for this. BEECH-NUT COFFEE owes its flavor to certain rare mountain-grown coffee berries which are rated the finest berries in the world. They make this unique Beech-Nut flavor standard possible. Yet this coffee, blended to an unvarying high quality, sells for a moderate price.

Beech-Nut high vacuum packing always keeps the coffee FRESH

You can always be sure that BEECH-NUT COFFEE comes to you as fresh as the day it was roasted, because Beech-Nut is packed by the high vacuum method. Authorities agree that this is the only method of packing yet devised which insures absolute freshness for any considerable period of time.

BEECH-NUT COFFEE stays fresh. You will notice the difference the instant a can is opened and you smell its fragrance. You will appreciate it even more when you taste how good it is.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS :-: Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance :-: By MARION BRUNOT

New Boy All Girl Could Ask, But There's Jack

One of my Speak Up, Sisters, admits she is no reigning beauty. But she has enough emotion to be crazy about a boy she has known ever since he was a freshman in high school. She says that once in a while he gives her a BREAK. He is popular with many people.

Yet RIPTIDE, for that is how she signs herself, tells me she has managed to ward off his knowing the state of her feelings. She says she is neither TOO WARM, nor TOO COLD.

She writes:

This winter I have been going with a boy who seems to like me quite well. He has taken me to plays and local dances. He has been so nice to me, that I feel like a skunk because I can't forget this Jack. The second boy is all I could possibly ask for, and Jack can't measure up to him at all.

Miss Brunot

Jack doesn't like the idea of my getting out of his clutches, I feel positive. So once in a while he pays me some little attention that thrills me so deeply that I nearly die. Most of the time he doesn't even know I exist. Yet I think that since I have been crazy about him for over three years there must be something to it. For, try as I may, I can't fall for the second boy.

What shall I do, Miss Brunot? Wait and hope that some day Jack will come toward me, and in the meantime do my best to become more interested in the new friend? Or give up the latter? Or, again, let Jack know the state of my heart? I have a little too much pride for that, though.

I am quite of the opinion it will be well, as you suggest, to let things drift for awhile. Do nothing rash toward giving up the new friend, or in attracting more attention from Jack . . . The fact that he shows some jealousy of the rival, may work miracles for you.

Being as you say not a reigning beauty, may help you more than you think . . . For girls, not overly pretty, have more patience and less conceit, than the very pretty ones. . . . And often win against the more beautiful.

You seem to be a girl who faces facts, and that always is good. The dreamer often clings to a love that does not exist at all . . . And so I cannot help thinking, maybe Jack cares more for you than you realize.

FALSE COURAGE

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am a very much interested reader of your department. I am a girl of 18, and in love with a young man of 21. We have known each other for a year, and I have gone out with other boys. But he has never taken another girl out. He does not object my going with others, though. I see him on an average of once a week and sometimes more often.

Now here is the question: The only time he ever told me he loved me was when he was drinking. And this does not satisfy me. I must find out when he is sober if he really cares. Would it be wrong to ask him?

Every time I go out with him, I find myself caring more and more. Sincerely, DESPERATE.

You are a wise girl to want a declaration of love at another time than when your boy friend has been drinking. A sober man is the only one to believe where such a serious thing as real love comes in. No, I do not think it very wrong to ask him if he meant what he said. But would it be very wise?

You can afford to wait awhile, as matters surely are not as desperate as you seem to think . . . I believe he does care, and maybe he only has enough courage to tell you when he had a few drinks. Even so, that is not for you or me to decide . . . Let him speak of his intentions again.

Dear Miss Brunot:

We are two cousins, fairly good looking. And dress neat. And are popular. We drink and smoke a little. I am 18 and my cousin is 19. About six months ago we met two fellows and fell in love with them, and are quite sure they love us. They have asked us to marry them several times.

We go out with them quite a lot by accident. But every time they make a date, they never keep it. And they never have good reasons, either. They have made at least 20 dates, like that. As we are very much in love and can't forget them, what shall we do? K. and E.

I do not think very highly of these boys, since they break so many dates, and are not respectful enough to give you a good excuse. I cannot help but form the opinion that you two girls are much too anxious in arranging these engagements . . . Also, it is to be wondered if fellows of such insecure caliber really mean their proposals of marriage.

There is a variety of young man who asks many girls to marry. They have nothing much to lose, and when a girl really takes them seriously they are genuinely surprised . . . Also, sisters, I imagine you could forget such suitors if you really tried . . . Maybe much discussing of these fellows have made each one of you imagine she cares more for her special boy friend than she really does.

Try finding other young men who have more honor when their promises are given . . . A man who continually breaks dates and without just cause, never would make a considerate husband.

Miss Brunot will be glad to answer letters submitted to her by readers.

Given in Marriage :: A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Explains Halting of Avis' Campaign

For a second or two after Lillian's jubilant little boast, I stared at her in utter amazement.

"What do you mean?" I queried at last. "What guns did she have to spike, and how did you spike them?"

A look of humorous commiseration came into her eyes.

"Do you mean to tell me?" she demanded, "that you haven't seen what a dead set the Arlen pain-in-the-neck has been making at Hugh? She's tried all the approaches, evidently, and finally was clever enough to settle on the one sure fire to click—the helpless girl appealing to the 'drate, big, strong man.'

"She nearly put it over, too, I'm telling you. I don't mean that Hugh was falling for her, or anything like that. He's pretty well insulated, as I don't need to tell you. But she was getting him to the point where he thought tender, helpless Avis was being put upon by a miaouwing, elderly cat named Lillian Underwood.

"From there it would have been but a step to having him think you were also hard upon the poor child. It would have been a long step, I grant you, but once Avis had accomplished it, the rest of her campaign and her mother's would have been fairly easy."

ENLIGHTENS MADGE

"What campaign?" I asked confusedly, furiously conscious that my cheeks were flaming at her references to Hugh's "insulation," which I understood only too well. It was a banal question enough, but I was grasping at any conversational straw that came my way.

Lillian looked at me quizzically.

"My word! But we're dense this evening!" she said mockingly. "But you shall be enlightened, never fear. The campaign to which I refer, my dear Mrs. Graham, is that which is now in process of launching by the Arlens, mother and daughter, with the object of winding up Hugh in knitting yarns and delivering him safely bound at the altar. Object, matrimony, in other words—and no particular scruples as to how the thing is to be accomplished."

"Oh!" I said banally, but unwilling to make any other comment upon what she was telling me.

"Also 'ah!' and 'alas!' and 'dear—me—suz!' and all the rest of the lady-like expletives," she mocked. "But I don't expect any other comments from you upon this subject. You're handicapped for full and free discussion."

She grinned with diabolical enjoyment of my furiously flushing cheeks, and then went on to a statement that startled me out of my confused embarrassment.

"I knew something had to be done," she said, "but I didn't get any chance until she came in with that cock and bull story about the man on the ladder. She might have been right, at that, but I didn't choose to believe her. So you saw how I tried to trip her up, and how I managed to get her back to her room.

DROPPED SUSPICION

"Then perhaps you noticed how I managed to drop into Hugh's shell-like ear the suspicion that Avis wasn't doing right by you. That was the master stroke, my dear! In one fell or rather happy second, the castle of blocks Avis had begun fell farther than the famous McGinty, and not all the king's horses nor all the king's men can build it up again. I'm certainly pulling a lot of mixed similies, darlint, but perhaps you gather what I mean."

"Lillian!" I gasped. "You don't mean that you believed what she told you about the man on the ladder, but made Hugh think that you didn't, in order to discredit her with him and make him think she was shielding Sax Brixton because she wished to harm me?"

Lillian gave me a beaming smile.

"But surely," she said, "why not? Surely you've heard the old proverb about everything being fair in love and war. Call this whichever you choose."

Fashion Flashes

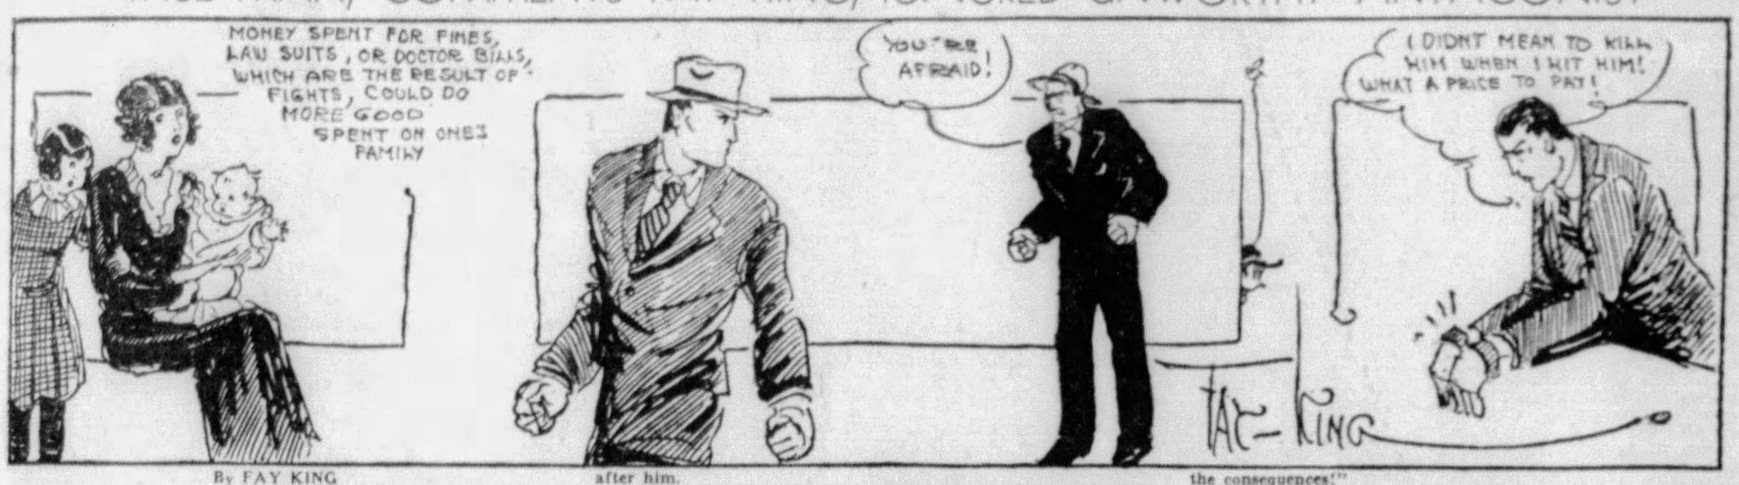
Take away one of the new, cool, Mandarin coats. One that will do duty over clothes of all types, from morning things to dinner dresses, is of white bengaline lined with thin silk.

Stringing along are accessories made of string. An attractive jacket that can be worn over sports clothes or for the beach, is of red, white and blue string in a plaid design. It is double-breasted and collarless.

WISE MAN, COMMENTS FAY KING, IGNORED UNWORTHY ANTAGONIST



By FAY KING

Two men were having a heated argument. Onlookers expected to see them come to blows any moment.

Suddenly one o fthe men turned, and started to walk away.

"Yellow! Coward! You're afraid!" the aggressive one yelled after him.

At this, the other stopped, turned and came back a few paces. The gallery thought surely now they should see some "fun."

"Afraid?" he shouted, "Yes, I am afraid—but not of you! I'm afraid of myself and what I might do to you! You're not worth the consequences!"

Then he marched off briskly about his business, proving himself the wiser of the two.

How many, not so wise at such a moment, have paid too great a price for the momentary triumph over some unworthy antagonist?

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

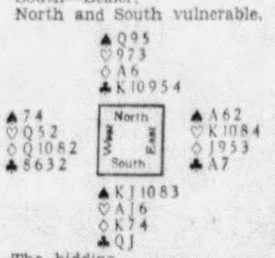
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

A Problem in Defense

The success or failure of a contract at the Bridge table often depends upon such seemingly immaterial things as, for instance, whether the defending player elects to lead a fourth-best card or another card chosen for some good reason. One play may result in the winning of no tricks whatever. Another play may produce one trick, while a third may produce the vital contract-setting trick, as was the case in the hand below. The holder of the East hand, upon whom the burden of correct defense rested, is a very fine player, a past and present champion in the world of Bridge. He has a well earned reputation for finding the correct defense, but in this instance, probably because he did not stop long enough to study out the division of the other cards in the suit, he failed to make the correct lead.

South—Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.



The bidding.

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

The march of the North and South players to game was not impeded by any adverse bidding. Against the four-spade contract West opened the club 2, and East won with the Ace.

It was, of course, obvious that the club suit was established. It was equally obvious that the setting tricks could not be developed in diamonds. East had a sure entry card in the spade Ace and thus a shift to hearts was clearly indicated. On the bidding it was obvious that South held the heart Ace. The only question remaining was whether he held the Ace-Queen or the Ace-Jack. If the Queen was in the South hand there was no prospect whatever of defeating the contract, so that assumption could be dismissed. If South's holding was the Ace-Jack, there was a chance to develop two heart tricks before the trump Ace could be driven out and the club suit used for discards. This quite far enough. East returned East realized, but did not go his fourth-highest heart, South ducked, and West was forced to play the Queen to win the trick, leaving a major tenace in hearts in the Declarer's hand.

Had East instead chosen the heart 10, South would have had no play to avoid the loss of two heart tricks. He should have made a valiant effort by covering with the Jack, but after West won with the Queen, a heart return would have trapped Dummy's seven under East's King-eight, and the second heart trick would have been established while East still held the Ace of trumps.

The play may be slightly difficult, but it is certainly not obscure. It is a type of play which in varying forms occurs at almost every session of Bridge.

(Mrs. Culbertson will be very glad to answer questions on bridge. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address your question to Josephine Culbertson, in care of the Sun-Telegraph.)

:-: :-: Hints for the Household :-: :-:

Yolks of eggs may be kept for several days by covering them with milk or olive oil.

Bran water is excellent for stiffening colored things, such as chintz and cretonne.

Never wash lacquered trays in water. It will cause them to show fine cracks almost immediately. Rub them with a soft rag which has been dipped in olive oil or milk, and polish them with a soft, dry duster.

Oatmeal is excellent for cleaning dirty wall paper. Apply with a pad of damp rag, paying particular attention to parts that are badly soiled. Remove all particles afterwards with a soft cloth.

All new cotton or linen articles, including curtains and sheets, are much easier to wash for the first time if they are soaked overnight in cold water in which a handful of common salt has been dissolved.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Dr. Copeland

Hemophilia is a strange and unusual disease. It is fortunate it is not a common affliction.

Victims of this ailment are often spoken of as "bleeders." They are called this because they are subject to severe bleeding and hemorrhages.

Contrary to a popular belief, hemophilia is not a new disease. It has been known for generations. Reference to it is found in ancient historical writings. Some of the greatest notables of the world have been sufferers from it.

I am often asked whether hemophilia is a hereditary disease. Of this there is no doubt. Strange as it may seem, the disease occurs only in males of the white race. It is transmitted through the maternal side of the family.

By this I mean that even though it is not found in the daughters of a family suffering from this affliction, these daughters may pass it on to their male offspring. For example, a daughter may have hemophilia but show no ill effects or signs of the disease. She is not a "bleeder," but if she marries and has children, her male offspring will be "bleeders."

Unfortunately, once the disease has become established in a family it will persist until that family becomes extinct. For this reason medical authorities advise sufferers from this rare disturbance to refrain from marrying. But too often the disease is overlooked, or confused with some other similar ailment, and the stigma is carried on for generations.

I am glad to say that hemophilia is now more accurately diagnosed than in former years. In most modern hospitals a routine blood test is conducted on all patients admitted. This often reveals the affliction in persons who are unaware of having the tendency. This is a valuable test because it is the means of discovering the disease in children and adults, too, prior to their undergoing an operation. When it is overlooked, an operation or injury may prove fatal because of the severe and uncontrollable hemorrhage that follows.

A common question asked by worried persons who are convinced that they are "bleeders" is, "What measures can be taken to prevent the disease?" I am happy to say that in most instances it is found that the descriptions are not at all like the symptoms of hemophilia.

A victim of nemophilia bleeds upon the slightest provocation. A simple blow, scratch, or fall, may be sufficient to cause a severe hemorrhage. Often the disease is first detected by the profuse bleeding that follows a small abrasion, or simple operation, such as the extraction of a tooth.

Severe bleeding due to any slight cause should arouse suspicion of hemophilia. Careful survey of the family history and accurate blood tests should be conducted without delay.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Ex-Boy Friend

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—Would it be proper for me to send a card of congratulations to an ex-boy friend on the day of his graduation? I would not want to give the impression that I am trying to win him back.

2—What sort of message should I write on the card besides my name . . . something that isn't too formal?

READER.

1—With so little information as you have given me, it wouldn't be easy for me to say whether or not such a gesture would mean to him that you are trying to win him back. This would depend on all the circumstances of your past friendship. However, this is such a simple gesture to make, that I don't believe that a friend, even an ex-friend, would misinterpret it.

2—"Congratulations on your graduation, and good wishes to you" would be an appropriate and not-too-formal message to write.

The Guest Book

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly tell me the correct use of a guest book? Up to now I've kept mine in my guest room solely for overnight guests.

I find that most of my friends are not my overnight guests and I should like to have them sign my book, too. Would it be proper to have guests just spending the evening sign in the book?

B.

Any way you decide you wish to use your guest book will be correct. Often on yachts or in clubs or in buildings, guest books are used as you wish to use yours, and they make a delightful record of all guests, a charming Memorabilia.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Dr. Charlotte C. West, in her interesting book "Ageless Youth," has this to say:

"The face has thirty-five muscles with which to express emotion. Through their nervous connections these muscles are related to every internal organ. Every thought, every act, every particle of food that we consume, every passing phrase of health, from the slightest malaise to pulsating vitality, show effect upon the countenance."

Now then, will you eat your spinach, do your exercises and avoid arguments with papa?

Now that jewelry is fashionable, there's danger of overdressing. Styles are going a bit wild, there's a lot of fluff stuff flying around. Which means that the woman who looks really smart and distinguished is the one who still hangs onto her ideas concerning the charm of simplicity.

There's also that interesting business of matching gems to eyes, hair and complexion. Not only that, they must be friendly with the color of the robe. It's the gal who sees herself complete, like a full length portrait, that has it all over the one who regards herself piecemeal.

Parenthesis lines from nostrils to lip corners are due somewhat to the formation of the upper jaw. They can be kept under control by persistent massage treatment.

Apply a heavy cream. Place thumb at lower end of line, first finger just above it, go skipping upward with little quick nips. Follow with a rotary upward movement with the first finger. Finish with crosswise strokes from lip ends outward. Then for the ice rub.

Emotional sprees are complexion wreckers, placing upon the human phiz all sorts of ugly creases and pleatings. No woman can afford to have the blues, chug up a case of jealousy, or make it a regular practice to stage a family fight. And worriers? Well, look at em.

If lines are appearing, learn about mental hygiene, give battle to weak feelings, wear a nice calm visage to give tense muscles a rest. Lay on the massage cream every night. Begin tapping and slapping under the chin, work upward gradually. In the morning apply cold cream compresses to the complexion, and cream again.

QUINTUPLETS GAIN MORE

CORBEIL, Ont., June 15.—(AP.)—Good news came today from the little farm home where five nurses and Dr. A. R. Dafoe are guarding the health of the 18-day-old Dionne quintuplets.

The tiny infants continue to gain weight, and as days go by optimism that they will survive is greatly heightened.

Their 24-year-old mother, Mrs. Ovila Dionne, also has gained strength. She was ordered back to bed two days ago.

The babies weighed a total of 11 pounds 3 ounces the last time they were placed in the scales, a gain of three ounces. Annette, next to Yvonne, the heaviest, was the only one to lose, dropping one-quarter ounce.

SAC CITY, Ia., June 15.—(AP.)—Little two and a quarter pound Lorraine Delaine, smallest of the Wycoff quadruplets, showed touches of temperament today, outsqualling and outkicking her larger sisters and brother as the quartet passed their fifth day in a home-made incubator.

All four, to whom Dr. G. H. Swearingen, prefers to refer to numerically than by their somewhat similar names, ate well and showed slight gains in weight on their corn syrup and milk diet.

Mt. Rushmore Deadline Set for School Texts

Organizations Must Submit Selections By Tomorrow

Tomorrow noon is the final hour when school and organization committees must submit the best selections of the individual groups in the Mount Rushmore National Memorial inscription competition to the regional committee.

The texts must be received at the Pittsburgh Regional Rushmore Committee headquarters in the Sun-Telegraph building. These committees have been facing a huge task in eliminating the texts to find only the best for considration of the judges here.

In the meantime, headquarter staff workers are eliminating the last few hundred entries of all clasification in preparation of submitting the 50 best texts in the tri-state district to the Pittsburgh committee.

As the work of elimination narrows to several hundred, the task of choosing the best becomes more difficult. Participants gave such time and study to the preparaton of their entries that technical treatment of the nine specific episodes of history necessary in each text must be carefully considered.

The same detailed task is being faced by all regional headquarters of the Hearst newspapers which conducted the competition for the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission. The final selection of the national winners will be made by President Roosevelt and his committee of prominent leaders.

IGNORE BAITING, JEWS URGED

WERNERSVILLE, Pa., June 15.—(AP.)—Time spent in reiterated denunciations of the Adolph Hitler and his Jew-baiting Nazi policies is deprecated by Dr. Samuel H. Goldenson, president of the Central Conference of American Reformed Rabbis, in a plea to his people to devote their efforts to more important things.

He urged his fellow Jews to "keep some"" reserve strength for the"" more useful task of understanding the causes of the world confusion" and "remove as far as possible the forces that threaten the stability of our social order."

He told the Rabbis' annual session yesterday:

"The most certain protection of any minority group comes from its participation in and the promotion of every just cause."

Rabbi Morton M. Berman, of New York, urged that Jewish children be taught Palestine is the center of the race's civilization and not a remote ancestral home. Dr. Leon Fram, of Detroit, called for more adult education.

Jewish Relief Drive For $100,000 Extended

Extension of the drive for $100,000 for relief of Jews who have been driven out of Germany was voted at a meeting of team captains and group heads in the Y. M. & W. H. A. last night. To date workers have raised $89,000. Leo Lehman, campaign chairman, presided. Speakers were Mr. Lehman, Leon Falk, Jr., associate general chairman; Isadore Rothstein, Sidney Stark, I. A. Abrams, Mrs. M. B. Grant and Harry Dobrin.

Priest Celebrates First Mass Sunday

The Rev. Louis L. Berchmans Schmidt, of the Capuchin Order, will celebrate his first solemn high mass in St. Martin's Church, West End, at 9:30 a. m. Sunday, assisted by the Rev. J. C. Angel, pastor of St. Martin's. Rev. C. Tschippert, noted Catholic writer and scholar, of Fidelis Seminary, Herman, Pa., will also assist him.

CHILD BUREAU CHIEF RESIGNS

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Children throughout the land lost a staunch defender today when Miss Grace Abbott resigned as chief of the children's bureau of the Department of Labor.

Serving under five Presidents since 1917, Miss Abbott fought continually for abolition of child labor and social and physical betterment of children.

Miss Abbott resigned to become professor of public welfare at the University of Chicago and editor of a social service review. At present she is hurrying to her home in Grand Island, Neb., where her father is gravely ill.

"Three washes a week . . yet their clothes stay bright" mother of three babies says

Chipso Economy

1. BIG BOX . . . LOW PRICE
2. SOAPIER . . . goes farther. Chipso makes thick, peppy suds that stand up.
3. SAVES CLOTHES AND HANDS . . . Chipso is not adulterated with the harsh substances contained in soaps which hurt your hands and gradually weaken and fade fabrics.

"I began using Chipso because a neighbor said it made the best suds," Mrs. Harvey Fell of Wilmington, Del., told us. "When I tried it I thought so, too. But I found out something even more important—Chipso doesn't fade colored clothes, or hurt my hands, or harm even dainty garments.

"The children get so many clothes dirty that we wash two and three times a week. It wouldn't take long for the clothes to wear out if we used harsh soap as often as that! But with Chipso the colors hold up and the materials don't get thin and sleazy."

No hard rubbing . . . "Besides, with Chipso, you don't have to break your back scrubbing. Dirt soaks right out in those good suds! One washday's hard rubbing is equal to months of actual wear on clothes, so I think they are bound to wear longer if you wash them this softer Chipso way."

Don't endanger clothes you have spent good money for by washing them in cheap flakes or strong granulated soaps and powders. Get Chipso from your grocer. At its low price, Chipso is the biggest value in rich, safe soap on the market today!

Junior Patrol

And one of the best ways to make a party interesting. Did you ever play in one? Whether you have or not, we'll just go ahead and tell any Junior Patrol members who have never played "scavenger" how it's done.

The captain first makes a list of a number of things he would like to have—all sorts of things like an empty tooth paste tube, a pair of rubber boots, an empty tomato can, a piece of string 30 feet long, a yardstick, two dead mice, an old auto tire, a girl's handkerchief with the initial "Z," a pink hair ribbon, a pair of blue shoe laces, a chunk of coke, and the signature of some prominent citizen.

Then he divides all the fellows and girls who want to play into four or five groups, or teams. Each team has a list of the things wanted. They go out and try to bring back just as many of the things wanted on the list as they can gather, or "scavenger" together before a certain time. The list of things we have written here can be changed to suit yourself. The idea is to list things that are somewhat difficult to get, but not too hard if the searchers are smart and try hard enough.

You can see what a lot of fun a scavenger hunt would be. The team getting everything on the list first wins. There should be a prize ready for the winning team, too, like a cherry pie or something else nice.

Besides being such good fun, a scavenger hunt is a good test of how clever and smart fellows are. Your Junior Patrol will have more fun if you have a scavenger hunt. Best of all, you can play it anywhere—in the country, or in the city. And just as many people as come to the party can play. It is an especially good summer game, too, because it is an out-of-doors game.

The only warning is, be careful not to ask for anything which will be dangerous to get. Try to ask mostly for things that will make a fellow think what to do.

Write and tell us if you have a scavenger hunt, fellows!

Malted Milk Minerals Ward Off Infections

Contains Substances That are Important Factors in Natural Growth and Development

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York, Former Health Commissioner of New York City

A mother writes me: "My children love malted milk drinks and have them daily. Is this good for them? The youngsters consider malted milk a great treat. I do not want to deprive them of food they enjoy if it is healthful for them."

All mothers want their children to eat good foods and when they find a food that combines nutrition with taste appeal they are fortunate. Malted milk may be classified as a healthful and tasty food. It is nourishing and easily digested.

It is made by adding to milk barley malt or barley which has sprouted. Barley is a grain grown in this country and abroad. Its flour contains no gluten and is chiefly used in infant feeding and for individuals who are on a liquid diet. Malted barley used in the manufacture of malted milk contains "enzymes" or "diastase." These are valuable in the digestion of foods.

The popularity of malted milk has grown since its early use in 1883. The annual production today is believed to be over twenty million pounds. It was one of the first successful forms of dried milk ever used. When you purchase malted milk you are assured of pure and wholesome ingredients. Its manufacture is strictly supervised by federal and state authorities.

There are several grades of malted milk. A good quality has a creamy color, a taste of malt and a rather sweet aroma. Its flavor and odor are agreeable and it will keep for a long time without spoiling if properly sealed. Never leave a container of malted milk open as it absorbs moisture from the air and becomes lumpy. For children and adults who are active, it is an excellent beverage to take between meals, and it will not spoil the appetite.

The protein found in malted milk, like that found in milk, aids the body in its normal growth and development. It replaces old tissue, builds new tissue and furnishes heat for the body.

The vitamin and mineral contents of this food are valuable in protecting the body against colds and other infections. These substances are important in developing strong and sturdy bones and teeth. They are necessary for the normal growth of the human body.

To individuals who dislike the taste of milk, malted milk will have appeal. Its flavor and taste are agreeable to the most "finicky" person. It is a welcome and nutritious addition to the diet of the convalescent.

HOW Dad DISCOVERED THE EPICURES' SECRET

"Your mother and I were honeymooning in the West. One day in San Francisco we rode behind a pair of spanking bays out to the old, original Cliff House above the Pacific.

"It was famous among epicures all over the world. They served food at its very finest. And the butter! Never in our lives had we tasted butter so delicious!

"So I asked the chef for his butter secret. 'Ah!' said he, 'so many ask me that. I whip it—so—in a bowl, and that is the whole secret of why it tastes so fine.'"

"How on earth did you ever discover this secret?"

"That's easy. The Kraft people discovered it for us. Their new Chiffon Butter is whipt. We get it at the corner grocery and it's so good we get it nearly every day."

Chiffon WHIPT PURE Butter

KRAFT invites you to enjoy this delicious WHIPT butter with INSTANT FLAVOR

Spreads Easier

• Chiffon Butter spreads more easily, more smoothly, than ordinary butter—yet it keeps its form in warm weather. Easy to make sandwiches with this delicious butter.

Creams More Quickly

• Chiffon Butter creams in much less time and much more easily than ordinary butter. Saves time and work in making sauces and cakes. And the Chiffon Butter flavor makes all good foods taste better.

Economical

• Chiffon Butter is economical, as you will appreciate when you see the big Chiffon package—nearly a third larger than the usual half pound of butter package—because this butter is whipt!

• Taste Chiffon Butter and you will realize instantly the reason why epicures have praised the virtues of butter which is properly whipt.

Here is the true and matchless flavor of pure, fresh creamery butter at its best. And you enjoy it instantly. Use it in baking. Its delicious flavor improves the flavor of all good foods. And it creams more easily, in much less time.

This new butter is churned in the great Kraft creameries from the finest selected, pasteurized cream. Then it is properly whipt, a new operation scientifically developed by Kraft dairy experts. This distributes the flavor elements through every bit of Chiffon Butter. They are more instantly released when this butter touches the taste buds on the tongue.

Take home a pound . . . two pounds . . . of Chiffon Butter and enjoy a new and happy experience.

BERLIN TESTS CREDITOR'S CREDULITY

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 15.—German innovations in human conduct in the last 15 months have been so far-reaching and so at variance with established civilized standards that in the circumstances outsiders have tended to overlook mere financial changes in that country.

As a matter of fact, Germany is testing to the utmost the credulity of foreign creditors.

Mr. Rukeyser

Having rooked foreign creditors with the disappearance of the old mark, it seemed to theorists that Germany would have to wait at least a generation for a rebirth of alien faith in Teuton promises to pay. Yet strangely enough, in the years immediately thereafter, foreigns, especially Americans, absorbed an unprecedented volume of new German external securities. The willingness to accept German obligations so soon after default on the old mark constitutes a financial miracle.

It is partly to be explained by the intervention of the League of Nations, and by the sponsorship of German government bonds by the principal bankers in this country of the Allies, who previously had never been identified with German financing.

SUBTLE REPUDIATION

Dr. H. Schacht, head of the Reichsbank, has at least been consistent in steadily opposing the rising mountain of debt.

What the outside world has not fully grasped has been the extent to which the German economy has extinguished foreign debt through subtle repudiation in the last three of four years. In 1930 German external debt was computed at 26,000,000,000 marks.

While defaulting on interest on certain private obligations and postponing repayment of principal on short term loans, German interests, it is understood, have been using foreign exchange to repurchase Teuton obligations at a huge discount and hence retire them.

The German banks have taken advantage of the American securities act to postpone their promise to redeem script in which interest has been paid in part.

EXPORTS HURT

Having gone through extreme inflation, which culminated a decade ago, Germans almost unanimously intellectually oppose the idea of inflation. Yet the logic of events appears to be driving them anew to an unbridled and uncontrollable inflation. As evidence of this, witness the almost complete disappearance of the German gold reserves in this depression period.

Moreover, the 1934 foreign trade statistics thus far demonstrate Germany's increasingly unfavorable foreign trade position.

Insiders in the German movement, recognizing the barriers to a huge German export trade, are emphasizing economic self-efficiency, but the German economy in its present state of transition appears ill adapted to a closed system.

An immediate cause of the slackening in German exports has been restraints on imports, which in some fields limit imports to 5 per cent of those of 1930.

Some of the smart international bankers have already taken their loss on standstill commitments, having accepted registered marks which they resold at a substantial discount.

Resiliency Attribute Of World

By B. C. FORBES

THIS OLD WORLD has more lives than the proverbial cat.

It has passed through plagues, famines, wars—and still it survives. I once lived in a foreign city visited by the deadly bubonic plague, saw men and women fall down on the street fatally stricken and witnessed many blocks purposely destroyed by fire. But today that city is flourishing as it never flourished before.

Mr. Forbes

This country has been afflicted by panic, depression, widespread unemployment, losses aggregating many billions, but it is still carrying on.

YESTERDAY I visited a well-known restaurant and found it crowded. The proprietor told me:

"Business has improved. We are doing better now than we have done at any time since 1929. People are spending money, which means that they must be again making money. I'm satisfied that everything is going to work out all right."

THIS IS a resilient world. It may be depressed, crushed, badly dented, but, like a rubber ball, it bounces back again.

Heads of big organizations, men responsible for filling thousands of pay envelopes, may and do tell you, with gloomy head-shaking, that this country is rushing towards hopeless bankruptcy, inflation, repudiation.

But the reassuring fundamental fact is that people are buying. They are buying not only necessities, but refrigerators and other labor-saving appliances for the home, furnishings, automobiles, insurance. They are manifesting faith that the country is not at the brink of bankruptcy and ruin.

RESILIENCY, recuperative powers are also being exhibited by other nations. Economic recovery is almost universal.

This encourages many to believe that, regardless of what Washington may do or may not do, America will forge ahead.

TRUE, THERE are citizens of means who are fearful that Washington is forcing the country along paths which can lead only to disaster. They emphasize that the New Deal in 15 months has called for the appropriation of some 17 billion dollars, that this will necessitate the levying of impossible burdensome taxes, that even these abnormal distributions of taxpayers' funds have not imparted genuine vigor into business and employment, and that Washington is not acting in a way to inspire the business world with a spirit of confidence, enterprise, daring.

MEN OF AFFAIRS everywhere are asking:

"What will happen after Congress adjourns?"

I, for one, am hopeful that a respite from feverish activity and experimentation at Washington will serve to bring to light the genuine, impressive improvement which has already set in throughout the business and industrial world, and that the recovery pace, lately hesitant and faltering, will become distinctly more pronounced.

From all sides one is told that old debts are being reduced or wiped out, that buying is expanding, that ordinary folks are registering confidence that the country is headed towards substantial betterment.

THE TRUTH is that this depression has already lasted longer than previous depressions generally lasted. A tremendous back-log of business, especially for "durable goods," has accumulated, thus inspiring the confident belief that a tremendous amount of deferred buying will ere long make itself felt.

TALK TO ANY group about threatened steel or other labor strikes, and you almost always elicit some such comment as this:

"President Roosevelt is aware of the importance of averting grave labor upheavals. He can be depended upon to avoid any menacing strike in the steel industry or anywhere else. He has the approval and the authority of the public behind him when he propounds any plan for the peaceful settlement of difficulties."

SO, BY THIS time next month, with Congress out of the way, it should be easier to read the outlook for American stocks and bonds, American investments, American security flotations, American commodities and the general American outlook.

IT IS NO crime, meanwhile, to indulge in hopefulness rather than in crippling pessimism.

Private Building Awards Increase

NEW YORK, June 15.—A drop in all classes of public works contracts during the past week was only partially offset by an increase in private awards, says the Engineering News-Record. The figures, as reported by the publication, are, public works $14,581,000, of which $2,720,000 was federal and $11,861,000 state and municipal. Private awards at $4,433,000 were almost double those of the previous week.

EIGHT STATES SEND OIL PLEA

HARRISBURG, June 15.—(AP.)—Fearing a breakdown in the oil industry because of overproduction, Governors of eight states yesterday asked President Roosevelt to support legislation designed to stablize the business.

A telegram to the President made public in Harrisburg, was signed by Govs. George White, of Ohio; E. C. Johnson, of Colorado; Henry Horner, of Illinois; Alfred M. Landon, of Kansas; Ruby Lafoon, of Kentucky; J. Marion Futrell, of Arkansas; Herbert H. Lehman, of New York, and Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania.

Pointing out that the eight states have 250,000 wells which produce nearly one-fifth of the domestic supply, the governors said continuance of improved conditions in the industry and the future of thousands of wells are "in grave danger" because of overproduction of crude oil.

The governors wired:

Meat Packers Get Drought Exemption

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Exemptions from the meat packing code asked by the industry for the purpose of speeding the processing of drought area cattle have been approved by Gen. Johnson.

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Raw sugar was firm today and following sales late yesterday of about 139,000 bags of Porto Rican for late June and July arrivals to local and outport refiners at from 3.00 to 3.05c, which represented an advance of 10 points, there were additional buyers at the 3-cent level early today.

Futures opened unchanged to 1 point higher on scattered covering and trade buying and became more active after the call. There was considerable realizing at the extreme advance, but the offerings were promptly absorbed and the market at midday was holding at or within a point of the best.

In refined a moderate inquiry was reported and prices were unchanged at 4.65c for fine granulated.

Hearst Consolidated Shows Stability

By GEORGE H. SNYDER
Business Editor

Stability in earning power has been found to be a rare investment factor. The organizations which have shown this quality in the face of the adverse conditions of recent years have achieved unique places in investment recognition.

The annual report of William Randolph Hearst to over 43,000 investors in Hearst Consolidated Publications class A 7 per cent shares shows a net profit of $3.43 per share on the entire issue of 2,000,000 shares. These earnings amount to $1.68 a share in excess of the annual dividend requirement.

Net Earnings Show Stability

THE NET PROFIT for the year ended December 31, 1933, was $6,855,347. While this was equivalent to $3.43 on the entire authorized issue of 2,000,000 class A 7 per cent cumulative preferred shares, only $1.75 per share is required to provide for dividend payments on the stock which has a par value of $25 a share. The net profits exceeded this requirement by $1.68 per share.

The entire 2,000,000 shares of authorized stock have not been issued, so that the net profits represent approximately three times the dividends required on the outstanding stock.

Number of Holders Shows Increase

DURING 1933 THE number of holders of class A stock of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., increased by 10,196. This made a total of 41,275 persons who held Hearst Consolidated Publications class A stock in 1933.

Stability in earnings is strongly reflected by the fact that 1933 net profit amounted to $6,855,347 and the average for the past four years of the depression was $7,516,750.

In commenting on the results shown by his organization during the depression years, Mr. Hearst said:

"I have purposely refrained at all times from optimistic prophesies because it has been our intention from the first offering of Hearst Consolidated class A stock to keep this security on a sound investment basis and to eliminate any speculative element.

"I believe the record of Hearst Consolidated and its subsidiaries has justified this policy and resulted to the benefit of its stockholders.

"We believe the security has undergone the most severe tests during the last three and one-half years."

XPERIMENTS' STILL HEART OF NEW DEAL

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

EW YORK, June 15.—The well episode had this importe: It shows that the method constant and unlimited "eximents" with our social and nomic life, conducted by the ernment, is the heart of the Deal.

nd it shows that the Demotic party has become so enled in the New Deal that it not escape for a long while.

ugwell came through the Senhearing with eclat, and will confirmed as under secretary griculture.

any people will say that he is dicated. Did he not say that liked many things in America? he not disapprove Russian thods?

When, however, one considers Tugwell's statements just a le more carefully, one cannot so sure. I think that the whole ry is that he merely said in ect:

"I stand for what we are ing under the New Deal—if at be treason, my fellow Demrats, make the most of it!"

What he said about the conitution was merely this: It is fficiently "flexible" to allow us w Dealers to do what we want do.

That amounts to saying that e constitution, as he sees it, is "elastic" that it has no definite haning.

RCED CODES

One kind of "elasticity" has en created by the New Dealers. r example, they have induced forced businessmen to enter des. Then they have held that e businessmen cannot attack the nstitutionality of code provisns.

Tugwell also testified that he d learned to believe in some merican institutions. But did t specify, nor was he asked to plain, what institutions or asts of American life he does not prove.

In short, he told the Senators at he believed in the "flexibility the constitution, and in some our institutions."

As to Russia, one may disagree ith the kind of planning they do ere and with some of their pracces, and still believe in Comunism or collectivism. Many ocialists bitterly attack the Stan regime.

The senators did not ask Tugell whether he approved any of he Russian "experiment," and if in what respect.

In general, the Tugwellian defense was built around the Presient, which put the Democratic nd Progressive senators in a hole. He said he believed in the kind of lanning "the President is talking bout." He said ,in effect:

"See what we have done under the New Deal. That is the sort of thing I stand for."

NO CHANGES SEEN

So apparently the government's building of towns (with every ome equipped with an electric efrigerator), the government opration of manufacturing plants, the direct loan to business by RFC, the gifts of federal money to states for road building, government control over agriculture and bonuses to farmers, and the inflation of our currency by "silver certificates"—these, and much more, are to go on.

In short, government "planning" for individuals, and bureaucracy, are to go on. The President himself has stated the objective of providing "for American families to live as Americans should," and has called people "childish" who think that we must have business recovery first.

Two great dangers confront us. The first is that, under the alibi of "experiments" all this collectivist plan will be allowed to develop. The second is that farmers, laborers and small home owners will be bribed by government loans and doles to sit by while individual initiative is stifled, and the Constitution is "flexed" into a cocked hat.

Pattern 1912
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

You might think to look at it, that it would be difficult to wear—the silhouette is so simple. But haven't you overlooked the clever lines which do the seaming traces on the figure? They are astonishingly grace-giving as well as very smart. On the bodice, buttons call attention to the side seams which carry the eye down to the long panel of the skirt and create an illusion of additional height and slenderness. The unbelted front waistline is extremely chic and the belt joined in the side seams fastens smartly in back. The back neck opening is the last word!

Pattern 1912 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 takes 3¼ yards 36 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

AYRES NOTES RECESSION

CLEVELAND, June 15.—(AP.)—The progress of recovery has been "checked by reversal," says Col. Leonard P. Ayres, economist, for the "third time since the bottom of the depression."

He declared in the monthly business bulletin published by the Cleveland Trust Company, of which he is vice president, that "business activity and industrial production have definitely slowed down during the past month."

Col. Ayres named three factors needed for the absorption of unemployment — increased exports, expanded building construction and heavier output of durable goods financed by new securities—and asserted these developments cannot be expected soon. He said:

"The amount of the recession so far is slight, and it would not have serious or even important implications if it were not for the great numbers of unemployed whose prospects for work are now diminished."

HEARST SHOWS SHARE PROFIT OF $3.43

SAN FRANCISCO, June 15.—The excellent results from operations in 1933 of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., were revealed today in the annual report of William Randolph Hearst to over 43,000 investors in his company.

Mr. Hearst's summary of 1933 corporate activities, which accompanied the sixteenth quarterly dividend disbursement on the Class "A" 7 per cent shares, shows a net profit of $3.43 per share on the entire issue of 2,000,000 preferred shares. These earnings amount to $1.68 per share in excess of the annual dividend requirements. Mr. Hearst points out:

"I believe the showing in 1933 particularly gratifying in view of the economic chaos which prevailed as a result of the national banking holiday, thousands of bank failures, unemployment, business stagnation and general curtailment of earning and buying power."

MR. HEARST'S MESSAGE

The complete text of Mr. Hearst's annual message to stockholders follows:

To the Stockholders of

HEARST CONSOLIDATED PUBLICATIONS, INC.:

The net profit of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., for the year ending December 31, 1933, was $6,855,347, the equivalent of $3.43 per share on the entire authorized issue of 2,000,000 Class "A" 7% Cumulative Preferred Shares.

Necessary for the payment of Preferred dividend on the entire authorized 2,000,000 shares was $1.75 per share.

You will notice that the net profits exceeded this requirement by $1.68 per share.

Inasmuch as the entire 2,000,000 shares have not been issued, the net profits represent approximately three times the dividend requirement on the outstanding stock.

The corporation paid its Preferred dividend promptly each dividend date, disbursing for this purpose a total of $1,936,966.

PROFITS AVERAGE $7,516,750

Throughout the four years of the depression Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., has had average net profits of $7,516,750.

I believe the showing in 1933 particularly gratifying in view of the economic chaos which prevailed as a result of the national banking holiday, thousands of bank failures, unemployment, business stagnation and general curtailment of earning and buying power.

At the time of my last annual report it seemed that the end of the depression was in sight and I pledged the stockholders that the management of the corporation would proceed along sane, sound and conservative lines as hitherto pursued.

The management has sought to keep step with such improvement as there has been in general conditions; it has undertaken and absorbed increased expenses incidental to national recovery.

SECURITY HAS FACED TEST

There can be no question that with the elapse of time sound changes in the economic structure of the country will be completed and the period of experimentation having elapsed there will be a return of confidence which will result in the development of industry.

I have purposely refrained at all times from optimistic prophesies because it has been our intention from the first offering of Hearst Consolidated Class "A" Stock to keep this security on a sound investment basis and to eliminate any speculative element.

I believe the record of Hearst Consolidated and of its subsidiaries has justified this policy and resulted to the benefit of its stockholders.

We believe the security has undergone the most severe tests during the last three and one-half years.

Again I desire to take this opportunity to express my appreciation to the many thousands of investors who have given us their confidence and to assure them that the corporation will be guided in the future exactly as it has been during the last three and one-half years.

HEARST CONSOLIDATED PUBLICATIONS, Inc.
WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST, President.

COAST OIL PACT TO GET O. K.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(AP.)—Word that Secretary Ickes would approve the Pacific Coast Petroleum Agency agreement was given last night by Attorney General Cummings.

In a statement Cummings said that as a complement to Ickes' approval the San Francisco consent decree would be modified by the Department of Justice to allow the operation of the petroleum agency agreement.

Saying that the arrangement is "very largely experimental in nature," Cummings made known that a three man committee would be selected by Ickes to watch the functioning plan, receive reports and hear complaints.

Signatories to the agreement are required to abide by the code of fair competition for the petroleum industry and not to take part in monopolies "or other unfair practices."

Cummings' statement said that these precautions had support from the various interests in the industry and "may be beneficial in assisting in the curtailment program, in the payment of higher wages and in the prevention of the destruction of small enterprises which are under present condition unable to stand the pressure of cut-throat competition."

P. R. T. Receivership Ruling Postponed

PHILADELPHIA, June 15.—Judge McDevitt in Common Pleas Court today declined to pass upon a petition for receivership for the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company brought by City Controller Davis Wilson.

The court stated that while allegations have been made in the petition, he would not pass upon them until Mr. Wilson had submitted his audit on the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, which Mr. Wilson claimed would show his grounds for receivership.

Illinois Central To Buy Equipment

CHICAGO, June 15.—The Illinois Central system will ask bids on a stream-lined train and 11 Deisel locomotives which it proposes to buy with proceeds from a $2,000,000 PWA loan.

AUTO BUILDERS SEE BUYING REVIVAL

DETROIT, June 15.—(AP.)—Convinced that price is the chief factor of influence in consumer demand for automobiles at present, leaders of the motor car industry are looking for a sharp reversal of buying trends during the next few weeks despite the fact the season is normally a slack one.

The producing heads of the industry explain that prices currently are virtually where they were when a huge accumulation of orders for news cars was piled up a few months ago. Trade circles still are buzzing with comment concerning the action of nearly all plants in reducing prices at a time when the general trend is just the opposite and only a few weeks after retail lists generally had undergone an upward revision.

It has been said in some quarters that a general reduction had not been part of the industry's program at this time, but that the introduction of new lower priced competitive models instead had been proposed as the solution of the problem presented by receding retail distribution coincident with the posting of higher list prices a couple of months ago. The production of these newer models has been a much easier undertaking for most of the producing units of the industry than would have been the case a few years ago.

A number of makers, however, felt that standard lines of their particular types would make a greater appeal to buyer interest and soon one after another the makers who had raised prices about eight weeks ago came out with reductions, determined to garner as much of the retail demand as could be attracted by lowered retail prices. Virtually all the reduction announcements have included the statement that no alterations were being made in the cars.

The comment heard in trade circles concerning the action of the producers in raising and then lowering prices, included the statement that the reductions in many cases just about represent the federal tax on the lower priced models.

The tax on motor cars has been the subject of considerable discussion in trade association meetings ever since the industry lost its fight in Washington against the impost. The trend of the discussion generally has been that the expansion of motor car manufacturing has been retarded by the tax. This has been the contention throughout of opponents of the levy, who have pointed to the fact that in addition to the federal tax several states have sales taxes which must be added to the retail price.

That part of the industry which opposed price increases a few weeks ago asserted at the time that consumer enthusiasm would be blunted to no small degree if material upward revisions were made. They argued that consumer interest had just begun to respond to improving general conditions, but was far from the unrestrained rush that the early season accumulation of orders might have indicated.

Making allowances for a hoped-for upward trend in buyer interest as a result of the price cuts, the industry has tentatively keyed its assembly lines for the production of approximately 290,000 units in June. At the same time dealer stocks are reported currently at slightly higher than average levels and should the anticipated retail upturn fail to materialize a sharp curtailment of output would be the inevitable before the month-end.

Industrial Output Holds Recent Rate

NEW YORK, June 15.—Aggregate industrial production in June, as estimated by the Standard Statistics Company, is expected to continue at the relatively high level established during the past few months. The preliminary June index stands at 78.4 per cent, compared with 77.3 per cent for May, 78.7 per cent for April and 83.1 per cent for June, 1933.

TRADE HOLDING FAIR GAIT

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP.)—The seasonal recession in trade has been less pronounced than it was in some of the years immediately preceding, and in most divisions sufficient momentum has been gained to prevent a serious interruption of the general recovery movement, said Dun & Bradstreet today in the weekly trade review. It continued:

"Apparently a period is being entered in which business will be held to a steadier level until crop prospects will have been more definitely ascertained.

"Despite good rains the drought has not been broken.

"The full effects of its devastation may not appear in trade returns until July and August.

"Gains in retail sales for the week, which amounted to 6 to 8 per cent and 10 to 15 per cent over the total for the corresponding week of 1933, based on the reports from all parts of the country, were contributed almost entirely by industrial centers and the farm areas in the south and southwest."

The review reported a sudden spurt in building activity, following the inauguration of the home-modernizing campaign, sponsored by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Protest Blue Eagle Use On Prison Goods

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Practice of prison-made goods flooding the manufacturers' markets, which, it is charged, has become even more acute since the approval of plans for a code for prison industries to permit use of the Blue Eagle label on such goods, was denounced today by the National Retail Dry Goods Association in a bulletin to its members.

The organization declared that "prison-made goods should not bear the Blue Eagle." It pointed out that it has fought against the distribution of such goods in consumer markets, and maintained that the "labor of our penal institutions should be restricted solely to producing goods for the consumption and use of our state institutions."

During the years of the depression, the bulletin pointed out, there was a widespread increase in the production and distribution of prison products made for general consumer use. The competition of these goods with the products of private industries soon began to collect a heavy toll from the ranks of American labor. To meet this unfair form of competition, many industries resorted to sweatshop working conditions, it claims, and wages inadequate to supply even the bare necessities of life to the workers.

STOCKS PUSH UP IN SLOW TRADING

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP.)—The stock market apparently saw a few rays of light in the murky trading skies today and prices generally pushed slowly forward.

The proposal of President Green, of the A. F. L., presented to the steel workers' convention at Pittsburgh, that a mediation board be appointed by the President to settle all disputes and that the threatened strike be called off, gave speculative sentiment a much needed lift. Trade and industrial news was interpreted as rather constructive. Berlin's debt suspension edict was a disputed factor.

Grains provided no cue for equities. Wheat reacted after an early advance of around a cent a bushel and other cereals were barely steady. Cotton did little and rubber and silver were barely even. Bonds of the prime categories held their ground and some of the German loans showed recovering tendencies. The mark improved, but other foreign exchanges were a little lower in terms of the dollar.

Overnight consideration of the German moratorium brought the conclusion in some quarters that the chief repercussions would be felt in Europe, particularly in Switzerland and Holland, which are big creditors. The shock to those countries which have been in more intimate trade relations with the reich was also believed to have been minimized because, due to increasing restrictions, business with Germany has been drying up for the last 18 months or so.

At the same time, foreign exchange bankers pointed out that, notwithstanding the protestations of Reichsbank officials, devaluation of the mark was entirely within the range of possibility. Considerable irregularity of foreign currencies over the next few months was forecast and some market observers drew the conclusion that any further loss of confidence in the maintenance of the gold standard in the remaining gold bloc countries would tend to bring a flood of investment money to the United States.

With Treasury securities, and various prime corporation issues, moving in to new high territory for the past year or longer proponents of higher equity prices argued that funds must gradually resort to other investment and somewhat more speculative channels to obtain even half-way satisfactory returns.

The markets paid little or no attention to the news that all the countries owing war debts to the United States, with the lone exception of Finland, had formally defaulted. There had not been even a faint hope that some of the debtors might decide to pay something on account.

CAR LOADINGS GAIN 37,024

WASHINGTON, June 15. —(AP.)—The American Railway Association announced today that carloadings for the week ended on June 9 were 615,565 cars, an increase of 37,042 cars above the preceding week when loadings were reduced due to the observance of Memorial Day.

This was an increase of 46,408 cars above the corresponding week in 1933 and 113,880 cars above the corresponding week in 1932.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight amounted to 162,932 cars, an increase of 19,276 above the preceding week. It was, however, a decrease of 5,453 below 1933 and 13,553 below 1932.

DEMAND LIFTS WHEAT PRICES

CHICAGO, June 15.— An upward trend showed itself in grain values early today. Buyers based operations more or less on ideas that severity of liquidation in the wheat market had gone far toward correcting the general speculative position of all grains.

Opening unchanged to ⅝ higher, September, 95¼@95½, wheat afterward rose all around. Corn started unchanged to ¾ up and subsequently made a general advance.

LOCAL MARKET QUIET AND STEADY

Trading continued light on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today with most of the early business being confined to the brewings and miscellaneous specialties which were turned over in small volume at prices showing only small fractional changes from their previous quotations. Dealings in the usually active fuels and industrials were extremely small and there was no definite price trend evident in these groups.

The "big board" started the day with a slight downward tendency but developed rallying power later and the list moved up slowly from the bottom levels. The Street remained hopeful that the threatened steel strike would be averted. Trade reports indicated spotty conditions in some sections but government efforts to revive the movement of goods to consumers was expected to prevent a deep decline.

COTTON PRICES RULE LOWER

NEW YORK, June 15.—Cotton futures opened barely steady, 4 to 9 lower on lower Liverpool cables, favorable weather and the German moratorium: July 11.94; October 12.10; December 12.23; January 12.27; March 12.40; May 12.50.

Trading was quite active at the start with July selling off to 11.84 and December to 12.23 under liquidation combined with moderate selling. The decline to 12.10 for October making a reaction of about 33 points from the high price of Wednesday brought in some buying on old trade limits, however, while there also appeared to be some trade and commission house buying which may have been influenced by fears that the Gulf storm might eventually work into the belt. July rallied to 11.93 and December to 12.27 and the market was holding within 2 or 3 points of yesterday's closing quotations for active months at the end of the first half hour.

Offerings became very light later in the morning and prices worked upward on fresh buying coming by commission houses. The forecast for a return of partly cloudy conditions in the eastern belt to probably local showers and continued apprehensions as to the further course of the gulf storm appeared to be the factors on the advance which carried October up to 12.25. The general list showed net advances of 3 to 6 points at midday.

LIVERPOOL, June 15.—Cotton, no receipts. Spot moderate business done; prices seven points lower; quotations in pence: American strict good middling, 7.21; good middling, 6.91; strict middling, 6.76; middling, 6.61; strict low middling, 6.46; low middling, 6.21; strict good ordinary, 6.01; good ordinary, 5.71. Futures closed steady. July, 6.37; October, 6.33; December, 6.28; January, 6.29; March, 6.29; May, 6.29.

Labor Difficulties, German Moratorium Obscure More Favorable Items, Market Analysts Say

Such considerations as labor interest and the German debt moratorium continued to obscure the business picture today as far as the stock market was concerned. Some market analysts believe the June advance in prices would have made more headway if the market had been paying attention to business statistics alone and to fall business prospects. Forecasts of a seasonal slump in business have been modified lately in face of the resistance activity on the whole has shown to the usual summer influences. Some of the heavy industries, particularly, have been holding spring gains well.

Intensified competition in the motor industry for summer business was foreseen as the result of announcement that Ford had followed the price-cutting by other makers of cars. He did not follow the April price increase by motor makers. It was feared that price-cutting would lower profit margins and second quarter estimates of motor earnings were revised downward somewhat. However, Wall street news tickers published an estimate that General Motors second quarter earnings would approximate 90 cents a share, against 63 cents in the first quarter. That would make earnings for the first half of the year around $1.50 a share against actual earnings of $1.01 in the corresponding period last year.

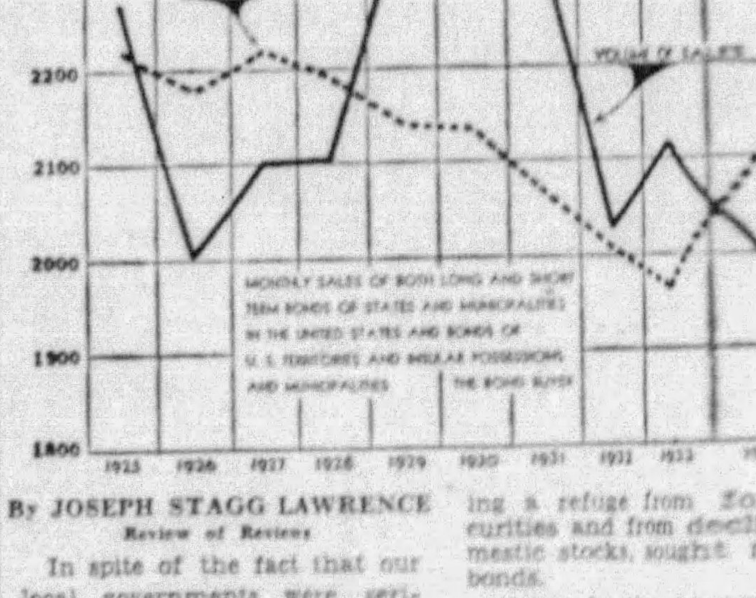
Carloadings on southwestern railroads over the next few weeks are expected to reflect increased movement of grain. Grain is moving to market this year earlier than usual, recent hot and dry weather hastened the ripening of the crop. The wheat harvest in Kansas is reported to be fully 10 days ahead of previous harvests. Enid, Okla. received nearly 250 cars of new grain yesterday, according to reports to grain houses. The Santa Fe, Missouri Pacific, Missouri-Kansas-Texas and the Frisco handle the bulk of the Kansas and southwestern crop.

Commodity prices on the whole have been fairly stable for months, or since they settled down into a relatively narrow range after the crash of the speculative structure built up on the spring and early summer rise last year. A gradual uptrend in staple prices has been visible lately, however. The Moody Index of spot commodity prices yesterday touched a new peak for the year at 140.5. At that level it is well above a year ago but still has some distance to go to duplicate the July, 1933 peak.

The steady accumulation of Federal Reserve Member Bank reserves should operate to keep the bond market firm, but when it will be effective in expanding commercial credit is still a matter of guesswork. Partly as result of the use of its "free gold" by the Treasury, reserves in the week ended Wednesday increased $108,000,000 to a record peak and excess reserves were estimated to have attained approximately $1,750,000,000, also a new high. Bankers are talking of excess reserves crossing $2,000,000,000 at the current rate of increase. With high grade bonds and short-term obligations yielding an exceedingly small return, banks are finding it increasingly difficult to employ their excess funds profitably.

Those favoring the constructive side of the market were pleased to note that stocks went up easily and on light transactions. Some aggressive buying came into the public utility group and this was followed by strength in the rest of the list. Brokers say any important total of buying would find a dearth of stock in many issues. Both bonds and preferred stocks were again in demand and scored some advances.

Municipal Financing Downtrend Reversed



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE
Review of Reviews

In spite of the fact that our local governments were seriously bitten by the extravagance bug during the post-war period, with resulting defaults in more than two thousand local units, the volume of municipal financing has been maintained at an amazing level throughout the period of the depression.

The volume of sales in 1930 and 1931 exceeded that of the boom years of 1925, '26, '27 and '28. This, of course, is due partly to the fact that industrial common stock enjoyed investment favor in the earlier period. Bonds, as a result of the decline in the market value of common stocks, came into their own during the first two years of the depression. The crisis in local government finance had not yet reached an acute stage.

Tax collections, although showing distinctly the effect of the depression, had not yet reached the critically delinquent stage of the last two years. Consequently, many investors, seeking a refuge from foreign securities and from declining domestic stocks, sought municipal bonds.

Although the experience of 1932 and 1933 in the rapidly rising total of municipal defaults has changed this picture, the fact remains that the municipality seeking financial aid still enjoys exceptional favor in the capital market. Our municipal governments are exempt from the provisions of the Federal Securities Act; bonds are likewise free from the regulations of the Fletcher-Rayburn bill, and of course the securities of local governments continue to enjoy freedom from taxation, which has always been one of their attractive qualities.

With an increasing inclination of Congress to increase the progression of income and inheritance taxes, this quality of exemption in the future is likely to become more rather than less attractive. During the past year the declining trend in the total number of issues has been reversed and has jumped up sharply.

BAER HAILED AS SECOND DEMPSEY AFTER TRIUMPH

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Baer's Reign Up to Self. Can Be Popular Champ. Restores Punch to Game. • Baseball Figures Mislead. Wightman Cup Records. Golfers' Earning Power.

Whether the world heavyweight fistic championship, brought back to America by Max Baer at the appropriate time of Flag Day, is in hands any more satisfactory than were those of the dethroned Primo Carnera, can be determined only by the future conduct of the new titleholder. Carnera, though a likable giant personally, never measured up to the popular idea of what a heavyweight champion ought to be. He lacked the knockout punch and the color the crown wearer is expected to have, and he was generally viewed as being up there only by reason of his great size. But it must be said of the courageous Italian at least that he defended his title oftener since he won last June 29 than did any other champion in recent years, even though his showing was not overly impressive on any of the occasions.

Max Baer

By following the same fighting course, now that he has restored the punch to the big class, and giving up his playboy, clowning habits, Baer, the first Jewish boxer ever to attain the world heavyweight throne, can make himself one of the most popular champions since John L. Sullivan, to whose swaggering, mighty punching days he is in some respects a throwback.

There is no question that his victory on a technical knockout in the eleventh round last night was a popular one. He was known to have the physical equipment required to win, but there had been no assurance that he would use it intelligently. The result shows that the man who has been called the Harlequin of Hollywood outside the ring, who was said to be a joke in his training exhibitions and unfit to fight, is anything but a clown inside the roped square. Whatever else they may say of him, Baer when in the ring is a real fighter, a real champion of the knockout type the public demands, worthy in every fistic sense of the title he has won, and a colorful battler whose achievement in stopping the Man Mountain, whom he knocked down 10 times in his savage assault, and bringing the crown back to this country will act as a tonic to American boxing in general. Another thing that Max taught the smart boys was not to take too seriously what they see or don't see in a training camp. Real fighters like Baer do their fighting in the ring.

BASEBALL AVERAGES OFTEN DECEPTIVE

Baseball averages showing the standing of the clubs are the only ones to which smart managers pay any attention, aside from the column that shows the number of runs knocked in by individual hitters. All other averages they consider pure hokum, and if they had their way there would be no batting, fielding or pitching figures published.

Bill Terry insists Jackson still is the greatest shortstop in the game, bar nobody, but remarks that if he were to go by the batting averages he would have to pick several others over the Giant star. The New York pilot points out that Jackson, though hitting only .270, has knocked in 43 runs, almost equaling the 47 that Chuck Klein has produced with a .327 average; and the total of 46 accounted for by Jim Collins with a mark of .341.

LEADING HITTERS NOT BEST RUN MAKERS

Terry does not spare himself in the comparison, calling attention to the fact that, though hitting .359, he has punched in only 30 runs. Sam Leslie, with a .366 average, has driven home only 33 tallies, he remarks. And Terry bats fourth and Leslie fifth, while Jackson is down near the pitcher. As a clinching argument, Bill points to Mel Ott, whose value is shown by the fact that he is leading the National League with 55 runs batted in for 53 games on a .324 average. "No, those batting and fielding averages can run for Sweeney," the New York manager concludes. "I want no part of them."

Mel Ott

Terry might have included Cookie Lavagetto, who has brought in 31 runs with an average of .250. Similar contrasts are found in the American League. Heinie Manush is hitting .400, but has knocked in only 31 runs, while Zeke Bonura, batting .300, has pounded in 48. Rolly Hemsley is socking at a .370 clip with but 18 runs to his credit, while Tony Lazzeri has knocked in 24 tallies on an average of .221. Fielding averages are just as deceptive. Many players with high averages don't cover enough ground or get near enough to batted balls to be charged with many boots.

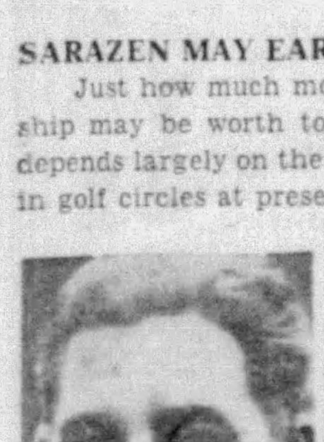
BIG AMERICAN LEAD IN WIGHTMAN SERIES

Even if the United States women's tennis team, weakened by the loss of Miss Alice Marble through illness, loses possession of the Wightman Cup in the annual competition with the British team to be concluded at Wimbledon tomorrow, this country will still hold a comfortable lead in the all-time record. For in 11 years of competition since the cup was put up for competition by Mrs. George Wightman in 1923, American women have been victorious seven times against four wins for the British.

In winning seven out of 11 series, the United States players took 43 matches against 34 for their opponents. Prior to the present series, Uncle Sam's daughters won the trophy three times in succession, the longest streak in the history of the cup. The British team won twice in a row in 1924-25, and the Americans did the same in 1926-27.

SARAZEN MAY EARN MORE THAN CHAMPION

Just how much money the national open golf championship may be worth to the winner during the ensuing year depends largely on the personality of the holder. Speculation in golf circles at present has to do with the extent to which Olin Dutra will be able to cash in on the big title which he won last week at Merion. Dutra has the build which should give him color, standing 6 feet 3 inches and weighing 230 pounds. Yet he lacks showmanship and crowd appeal. He does everything in a matter-of-fact way. The new champion is a golf technician, not a golf personality. He does not play on crowd emotions, and in teaming up with Walter Hagen he admits a realization that he would not have been a good card if touring alone.



Olin Dutra

Gene Sarazen and Hagen are the players with crowd appeal, as they showed at Merion. These two men dominate the crowds. They are affable, they talk to the spectators, and they are showmen. They play top-flight golf, but they also play it in a showy way. It is estimated that Sarazen, though only runner-up in the recent tournament, will earn more money than Dutra.

PIRATES EAGER TO MAKE DEAL FOR HURLER

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The time limit for trading and selling players expiring at midnight, Pirate officials this afternoon were desirous of making some sort of a deal that might strengthen the Buccos, although the local bosses held little hope that they would be able to accomplish anything.

Manager Gibson and his associates have tried to put over a deal for several weeks. A lot of people figured months ago that the Buccos hurling corps was not capable of holding its own with other outfits. Red Lucas was acquired, but the Buccos also had designs on Si Johnson and Paul Derringer, of the same Cincinnati Reds.

REDS HESITATE

Either Johnson or Derringer would be welcomed by the Pirate pilot, but the Reds are so deeply in the hole they don't wish to make matters worse by swapping their stars.

Pirate President Bill Benswanger has had several conversations with rival owners during the past week relative to deals. Benswanger said today:

"I do not look for any deals on the last day. We have discussed several propositions, but none of them had a good Pittsburgh angle. To get new players we would have to fork over athletes who were superior to those we seek. We even had a proposition on with a certain club today, but I guess nothing will come of it."

Benswanger may have been referring to the Brooklyn management as he let it be understood that any negotiations held with the Cincinnati owners were at a standstill.

Speaking of great pichers, a young fellow named Van Lingle Mungo showed the Pirates more stuff than they had seen this year as he turned the Buccos back in 10 innings at Forbes Field yesterday. Mungo's fireball held the Pirates to five hits and the Dodgers won, 3 to 2.

Larry French should not have been scored on in seven frames, but the foe made two lucky runs before French left the scene for Pinch-hitter Lucas in the seventh. The Pirates rode to a deadlock in this round and Ralph Birkofer finished.

BEATEN IN TENTH

Birky lost the contest in the tenth partly through the hitting power of Sam Leslie. The Dodger firstbaseman made an error in the seventh to allow the Pirates to knot the game. Sam opened the tenth with a double and he scored on Stripp's single.

Mungo's speed and his curve were so powerful he had the Pirates looking like rookie batters. The big righthander rose to heights in the seventh when he fanned Fred Lindstrom with the bases filled and none out. Lindstrom batted for Tommy Padden.

FIGHT 'GATE' $428,392

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP.)—The Carnera-Baer fight drew a "gate" of more than $425,000.

The official figures, as announced by Madison Square Garden, showed gross receipts of $428,392.80 and net receipts of $361,357.29. The paid attendance was 52,268.

As the challenger, Baer received 12½ per cent or $45,169.66 of the net gate receipts. Carnera's share of the purse, 37½ per cent, was $135,508.98. Jack Dempsey, who received a cut of 7½ per cent for releasing Baer from his contract, pocketed $27,101.08, while the milk fund cut of 10 per cent amounted to $36,135.73.

THE BEGINNING OF THE END . . . CARNERA REELING ALONG ROPES, BAER LOADING UP "FINISHER" IN ELEVENTH ROUND

BROWN STICKS BY OPINION

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP.)—Brown, the boxing commissioner who pronounced Max Baer thoroughly unfit to fight Carnera and recommended a postponement, refused to alter his opinion after seeing the challenger win the heavyweight title. He said:

"My opinion stands. Baer didn't show much, but Carnera showed even less. Carnera was so weakened and befuddled by Baer's first-round attack that he was unable to do anything effective or take advantage of the challenger's obvious weariness. It was a poor exhibition by two poorly trained men, but if the public wants that kind of stuff, it's all right with me."

Writer Collapses At Title Battle

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP.)—Harry B. Smith, veteran sports editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, collapsed at the ringside during the Baer-Carnera fight. He was treated on the scene by Dr. William Walker of the New York State Athletic Commission, and later was put to bed at a hotel. His condition is not serious.

PRIMO VICTIM OF MAX'S K. O. WALLOPS

By HARRY KECK

Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, June 15.—A new Jack Dempsey sits atop the fistic throne today. He is curly-haired Max Baer, the curly-wolf [illegible] from Livermore, Cal.

He slaughtered big Primo Carnera in their battle for the world heavyweight title before more than 53,000 persons in the Madison Square Garden Bowl in Long Island City last night. Slaughtered the man they once said was too big to be permitted to fight a human being much as he used to slaughter cows when he served as a butcher's apprentice for his father in his pre-fighting days.

TRIUMPH CLEAN CUT

There's no ifs or buts about his triumph. It was so clean-cut as to be amazing. Carnera, scared to death and fighting a hopeless fight from the last minute of the first round, lasted as long as he did only by the grace of his good condition and Baer's inclination to let down in spots.

Carnera was knocked down or fell down nine times during the battle to make a Roman holiday for the fans who like to see the big fellows get hit and go down.

It was every bit the thriller Max promised to make it. In the second round he floored the giant three times and went rolling down with him on top of him each time. He was the [illegible] killer that Dempsey was at his best, and not since Dempsey floored Willard seven times in the first round to win the title at Toledo 15 years ago has a big man been so badly beaten as Baer beat Carnera. Slaughter is the only word to apply to Primo's crushing defeat. The episode ranks with the Dempsey-Firpo fight as a thriller.

When the end came, after two minutes 16 seconds of the eleventh round, it was through the intervention of Referee Arthur Donovan, to Carnera's rescue. At least Donovan thought Carnera begged off. Carnera was seen to gesture and talk to the official and had his hands down when Max struck the final blow. Afterward, Donovan told the reporters at the ringside:

"I don't know whether he was asking me to stop the fight, he was groggy and said something in Italian. It was unintelligent. He was muttering. I took it he wanted to quit, and so I made it unanimous."

CARNERA GAME

The wonder was that Carnera didn't ask for succor before he did. Perhaps somewhere in the back of his mind he retained the memory of a remark Baer made when they were posing for pictures after weighing in during the afternoon. As the photographers' flashlight bulbs flashed, he said:

"See that, you big bum. Lightning and thunder. And tonight I'm going to kill you."

He almost did. He might have if the bout had been permitted to continue on. That was just about the only boast Baer didn't make good. He didn't kill his rival.

The vaunted boxing skill of Carnera failed to avail him against this ox-slaying young David. Baer fought a well-planned fight. In fact, he really acted it. He clowned and stalked the boards like a comedian and a tragedian in turn. He played and he stormed. And every time he lashed out in fury he hurt the big fellow. He just missed knocking him out in that first round, when the bell saved Primo.

MAX SCARES PRIMO

PRIMO DENIES LAYING DOWN

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP.)—Apparently uncomprehending his defeat, Primo Carnera strode like a mechanical man down long and winding aisles of jeering spectators to his dressing room.

He merely turned a glittering, almost stuporous eye on those hecklers who accused him of "laying down" under the savage attack of Max Baer. He said:

"I no lay down. I fight good and he fight good, too."

Primo lumbered into his dressing room and flopped on a table. There were plenty of anxious hands to help the fallen champion, but he turned them away. He sat there dejectedly, occasionally cocking an ear to the din in the direction of Baer's quarters, where a raucous celebration was going on.

"Take off shoe quick. I got pain there."

One of his handlers removed his shoe and the ankle was badly swollen and bruised. Primo said:

"I sprained it in first round and it gave me great pain. I was a little nervous and confused. It always take me long time to get started. Baer no hurt me. He hit heavy, but no hard. Gee, me fight him again and lick him if he give me chance."

Dumb Dan Morgan, Carnera's chief second, surveyed the fight differently. He remarked:

"Baer stung Carnera in that first round and Primo didn't recover fully until the third round," he said. "Once he got his bearings again he was alright and won some rounds. But then Baer would land one or two crushing rights in succession that all but knocked Carnera's brains out."

(Ripley Cartoon and Explanations on Page 44.)

NEW CHAMPION ASKS FOR BEER

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP.)—While a cheering, shouting crowd milled outside his dressing room and his handlers put on fox trots in their joy, Max Baer calmly rose up from a dressing table and said:

The big Californian was the coolest of the lot, in fact his composure evoked from former Champion Jack Dempsey:

"Can you beat that kid? You'd think he had ice water in his veins."

To Max the toughest part of the evening was fighting his way back to the dressing room from the ring.

Police formed a flying wedge to clear the way back. For several hundred feet he struggled through lanes of wild-eyed fans. They pounded him on his back, head and arms, snatched at his dressing robe and pulled his hair. One shouted:

"How do you feel?"

Mimicked Baer:

"Ask Bill Brown (New York state boxing commissioner). He said I was out of condition."

When they finally reached the dressing room, Baer straddled a dressing table and said the hardest part was getting back to his quarters.

Asked if Carnera's punches had hurt him at any time, Max wisecracked in typical fashion:

"You can't hurt a Baer."

Becoming serious, he paid high compliments to his recent opponent.

"Primo is a good strong fighter. He is as clean as they make them. I don't like to say I'm glad he lost, but I'm sure tickled I brought the title back to this country. The big fellow sure was a great sport and how he can take the punches."

MAX MADE ART JOB OF PRIMO

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 15.—It was a great fight, but poor old Primo had his troubles. He spent so much time lying around on the floor that any minute it looked like he'd be arrested for vagrancy.

Baer, however, enjoyed it right from the start. Like Whistler or Rembrandt, he felt very proud as he stood back and admired his masterpiece on the canvas.

Carnera weighed 263 pounds, but Maxie bounced him up and down in the ring like a rubber ball. In his next fight he'll probably do away with boxing gloves and use a tennis racquet.

Primo was in great shape, but by the eighth round he had worn himself out walking back to his corner. Walking was the only way he could get there; he had hurt his thumb and couldn't hitch-hike.

In the ninth round he tried to save time by going to Baer's corner. But that wasn't the only reason. He heard that Max had a radio and he wanted to listen to the fight.

Carnera had pretty good luck though; every time Baer would put him to sleep, the gong would wake him up. That's why he quit in the eleventh round; he wanted to go home and sleep where he wouldn't be disturbed.

MAX BAER PROVES SELF TO BE 'KILLER' IN WINNING TITLE

NEW CHAMPION VICIOUS IN TRIUMPH

By BILL CORUM
International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 15.—The sick man of California got well with a bang.

His maroon gloves crashing and roaring like an artillery barrage along the Marne, Max Baer, the Livermore Assassin, slashed his way past the ponderous bulk of Primo Carnera to the heavyweight championship of the world in the Garden Bowl, Long Island City, last night.

The end, practically inevitable from the first round when Baer sent Primo thudding against the ring boards with a man-murdering right and had him looking for a gate in the ropes, came in the eleventh with Primo still on his feet.

CARNERA BEATEN

But he was a beaten champion, bloodied and through. To those around the ringside it looked as though he acknowledged this to Referee Arthur Donovan, when he turned his smeared and pain-distorted face and grunted an unintelligible word or two.

Watching his lips and in a position to see it seemed to me that he said:

"I can't go on."

But in his dressing room Carnera vigorously denied this, and Donovan said he did not know exactly what the beaten man had said. He only knew he was beaten. More than 52,000 persons, who had paid $425,000 to sit in on the most savage, thrilling, primal battle since Dempsey and Firpo, knew it, too.

Baer was a Dempsey with curly hair. Baer was a curly wolf. A clown, eh? A sick man, eh? Well, he was a clown in whom there was no humor, but only the curled lip sneer of the born killer.

From the minute he made his grand entrance in his moving picture bathrobe—the one he wore in "The Prizefighter and the Lady," in which Carnera knocked him out for the camera's sake—Baer was the actor.

Primo did some fighting, too. There were times when Baer's handsome, sable thatched head seemed fairly impaled on that sharp, jolting left hand. Times when it looked as though Baer might be tiring, and that the big man from Italy might still come on to box his way through the 15 rounds and a possible triumph.

But just when you thought Baer had shot his bolt, that he had fought himself out against the hulking giant before him, back he would come tearing to knock Primo down again and send him tottering and reeling back to his corner at the bell.

WHAT PUNCHES!

What punches! What punches! Crash! Bong! Pow! No wonder the stricken Primo sometimes turned his back and ran away from that grinning devil, who spread his lips in a gargoyle grin, and said in action if not word:

"How do you like it, big boy?"

Some may say that Carnera showed a lack of gameness in quitting. Don't believe it. He took it longer and better and oftener than many another man would. Sometimes it did look as though he was trying to run out of the ring. Perhaps he was. But he was befuddled and bewildered from those shocking, brain-numbing blows and I am sure did not really know what he was doing.

So Baer was sick and a bum, eh? Well, if he was sick, I hope I never get well. And if he is a bum as modern heavyweights go, I want to go see the bums fight all the time.

FANS AT FIGHT GO PRIMITIVE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor.
(Copyright, 1934, Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, June 15.—Human nature in the raw. The primitive emotions of early Adam before Mother Eve donned the concealing fig leaf seethed in the breasts of a snarling, howling mob of 50,000 souls. Men and women who paid a big price for the privilege of seeing Max Baer knock out Primo Carnera in Madison Square Garden Bowl became temporary maniacs.

I was one of those maniacs. I too screamed, cheered and thrilled at the blow or blows that was to settle the biggest fight since Gene Tunney wrested the title of heavyweight champion of the world from Jack Dempsey on a rainy night in Philadelphia. Tunney and Dempsey, smiling affably in the ring as they were introduced side by side in the ring, reminds us what a difference a few years make.

Many of those who screamed loudest for Carnera to stop Baer's grin, or for Baer to crush the big bad giant, were gentle women who wouldn't kill a fly or step on a flower. Many of the men who grew positively murderous in their efforts to get Carnera to do a little private killing for them were respected citizens who would condemn to death any law breaker who went on a punching spree.

And yet it was a dressy affair—last evening's prize fight which gave Max Baer, former Livermore butcher boy, the right to be called heavyweight champion of the world. Society, political and civic leaders, big business men and New York literati were fully represented. Orchids carelessly flung on graceful shoulders, diamond braclets worth a king's ransom, soft silk summer suits made in the latest style and expensive silver fox furs gave the occasion the appearance of a pink tea.

SHOOT TOMORROW

The Fort Pitt Rifle Club will give a special merchandise shoot, the first of its kind of the season, on the club's range, Wilkinsburg, tomorrow afternoon. All events will be shot from a distance of 100 yards.

Max Tagged New Dempsey After Great Triumph

an egg. Then he brought the blood streaming from Carnera's nose in such copious quantities with a single punch that it was feared he had broken Primo's nose or severed an artery. He had the fading champion groggy so often that the reporters lost count. And after that first round he had the Italian scared stiff and fighting a hopeless cause.

True, Carnera won three of the rounds by slight margins on his forcing and held his own in one other session, but it was only because Baer was biding his time and waiting for openings. And when Primo was winning these rounds he was so far behind that his only hope of winning lay in scoring a knockout himself, and he didn't have the punch with which to do it. There was more chance of Max knocking himself out than there was of Primo doing it.

Baer not only knocked out the Man Mountain, but he wowed the spectators as well. Every pose, gesture, every punch was executed with an eye to determine effect. He was at once the actor and the fighter, and when it was all over he received a tremendous ovation. Dempsey, one of his mentors, climbed into the ring and hugged him, and then Max delivered an oration into the radio microphone and then moved over to the press row and took a crack at Boxing Commissioner Bill Brown, who only a week ago had declared him unfit after seeing him go through his song and dance training maneuvers. He said:

"How was that, boys. I feel TERRIBLE!"

REFEREE A SURPRISE

The naming of Donovan as the referee came as a surprise, as he was one of two referees to whom Baer's manager objected on the ground that Donovan had not treated Baer fairly in his bout with Max Schmeling, a former champion, whom Baer knocked out in 10 rounds in the same ring a year ago to gain last night's match.

There was no question that Baer had Carnera half beaten with his badinage before they entered the ring. His first good right hand punch in the first round clinched matters.

A fortune lies before Baer as a result of his victory. He has brought the heavyweight championship back to America and he is established as a moving picture and radio favorite already in addition to his place in the pugilistic sun.

A right to the jaw floored him in the first round and he was out on his feet on the ropes at the bell.

In the second round he was down twice for no count and then for four and was staggered again before the bell. Baer went down on top of him on each of these knockdowns.

In the third, he was half knocked down and half slipped in his own corner as the round ended. In the fifth he was staggered and Baer drew that gush of blood from the nose.

At the end of the eighth he skidded down again.

In the tenth he was tottering groggily along the ropes, oblivous of his surroundings when the referee stepped in and pushed back Baer and held up the fight momentarily and thus saved the big fellow. It looked at the time as if the referee was stopping the fight, but he motioned to them to resume and Baer rushed in and dropped Primo twice for three and he was helpless when the bell came to his rescue.

PRIMO DOWN AGAIN

In the eleventh, Baer battered Carnera into a sitting position on the lower rope and then floored him for a count of three with a right to the jaw, and then came the intervention of the referee, with Carnera apparently asking for it.

Baer's manager, Ancil Hoffman, knew whereof he spoke when he said several days before the fight that the promoters ought to have an ambulance ready to rush Carnera to a hospital after the fight. Max killed Frankie Campbell with a punch early in his career, while Ernie Schaaf died following a bout with Carnera after having been knocked unconscious for 10 minutes by one of Baer's punches in his last previous fight, in Chicago.

In only five of the 11 rounds did Carnera fail to go to the floor. He did his best work in the fourth, seventh, eighth and ninth rounds. The eighth round was even. In these frames Primo kept on top of the retreating Baer and jabbed him with his long left and occasionally followed with a right and a few times brought upper-cuts. At no time did he hurt the Californian and most of the times he was just pushing his punches. Many times Max grimaced and spat disdainfully as if to say:

"Is that all the harder you can hit?"

The result was a distinct upset of the form sheet, which says that nine time out of ten a good boxer will beat a good puncher. Carnera, weighing 263½ pounds to 210 for Baer, was the favorite right up to ring time at the odds of 6 and 7 to 5. However, it was generally conceded in advance that if a knockout were to end the fight Baer would score it. His strongest boosters, though, did not count on him hitting with as deadly effect as he did against his big target and his success may have been due to some extent to the fact that he had Primo demoralized from the start.

PRIMO STARTS WELL

Carnera started out like a winner, forcing the fighting, with Baer, his smile gone, back-pedaling about the ring and Primo following him, standing erect and boxing well. Then came the first devastating blow, and a new champion was on his way. As a matter of fact, if Baer had pressed his advantage in the early rounds, he might have won much sooner than he did. But he had to act his fight, and never was a more theatrical exhibition given on any stage than he turned in under the starless sky with a threat of rain in the strong breezes that swept the wide expanse of the bowl.

Charley Massera, of Monongahela, won the referee's decision over Al Ettore, of Philadelphia, in the six-round semi-final, put on after the main bout. In the other preliminaries, all scheduled five-rounders, Dynamite Jackson defeated Willie McGee, James J. Braddock knocked out Corn Griffin in three rounds, the referee stopping the bout; Eddie Hogan showed a lot of class in beating Chester Matan, Lou Poster bested Al White and Don Petrin won over Ed Karalok.

BETWEEN ROUNDS

Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney were introduced together by Announcer Joe Humphreys before the main bout. So were Jimmy McLarnin, Steve Hamas, Ray Impellitiere, Jack Sharkey, Tommy Loughran, Willie Ritchie and Benny Leonard.

Baer carried on his acting even to the extent of wearing the robe he used in the moving picture he made with Carnera, "Prize Fighter and the Lady." On the back of it was the legend, "Steve Morgan," which was the name he used in the picture.

Maxie kept Carnera waiting in the ring for three minutes to add to the big fellow's discomfiture, and when a challenger does that it is considered lese majesty and nothing less.

Among the Pittsburghers at the ringside were Vic Green and his wife, former Mayor John S. Herron, Harry I. Neaman, George and Milton Jaffe, Art Rooney, Charley Faulkner, Mat Phillips, Pat Murray, John Hernon, Bill Tracey, Jack Bower, Slim Silverhart, Al Oliver, Chief of County Detectives George W. Murren, Babe Eppy, Jacob Loblinar, George Kelly, Pat O'Malley, Jack Weiner, Earl McDonald and Morris Smith.

Dr. W. D. McClelland, Pennsylvania State Boxing Commissioner, was a guest of Commissioner Bill Brown at a dinner at the New York Athletic Club before the fight and also attended the weighing ceremonies to get a line on how they do things in New York state.

Heydler to Attend Benswanger Dinner

John A. Heydler, president of the National League, has accepted an invitation to attend the William E. Benswanger testimonial dinner to be held at the William Penn Hotel, Saturday evening, June 30, in conjunction with the Silver Jubilee of Forbes Field.

Heydler's acceptance was received today by the dinner committee. Members of the Chicago and Pittsburgh clubs also will be gathered around the banquet tables.

BAER FOUGHT PERFECT BOUT —TUNNEY

By GENE TUNNEY
Written for the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP.)—Max Baer fought exactly the type of fight calculated to whip Primo Carnera and he demonstrated conclusively what I have felt and said right along—that the Italian has a vulnerable chin and extremely limited fighting equipment.

After Carnera's bout with Tommy Loughran, I said Primo would be a mark for a man who could show anything like an effective punch. The Italian himself cannot hit and he is bewildered as soon as his defense starts to break down. His confidence was shattered in the first minute of last night's fight and it was simply a question of how long it would last. At the finish he was obviously ready to quit and did so.

I was not surprised Baer failed to finish Carnera in either of the first two rounds. The big fellow has amazing stamina and showed he is really game under fire, although he used very bad judgment in not taking longer counts when he was down three times in the first round. A fighter is entitled to all the count he can get under such circumstances and it was ruinous for Primo to leap up at once and stumble into another succession of hard blows.

I would say on the whole that Baer fought a perfect fight, showing rare confidence at all times and proving himself a terrific hitter. He did not waste time and energy trying to box Carnera.

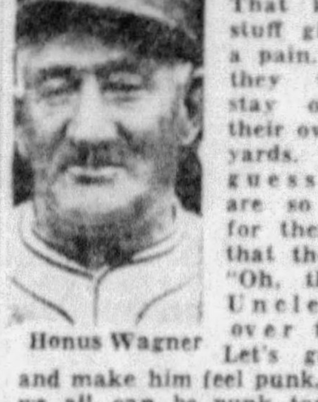
Honus Says:

By HONUS WAGNER
Former star, now coach of Pirates

To the Sports Editor:

There is an old saying that misery loves company, and maybe that is why some foreign governments send over their propagands. That kind of stuff gives me a pain. I wish they would stay over in their own back yards. But I guess things are so rotten for them that that they say: "Oh, there is Uncle Sam over there. Let's go over and make him feel punk, too, so we all can be punk together." There are some people in the world you can lend money to and not lose their friendship, but they are few and far between.



Honus Wagner

HONUS WAGNER.

ZIVIC MATCHED FOR GO WITH JOEY COSTA

Eddie Zivic, Lawrenceville lightweight, who arrived back home last week from the Pacific Coast, where he and his brother, Fritzie, mopped up on the opposition served them, will meet Joey Costa, of New York, in the 10-round main bout at Hickey Park, Millvale, a week from Monday night.

This will be Eddie's first showing here since last November, when he and Fritzie, accompanied by their manager, Luke Carney, heeded Horace Greeley's advice to "Go west, young man; go west." They went and conquered.

Paul Pirrone, of Cleveland, who meets Anson Green, Negro belter, of Homestead, in the feature bout of the double windup at Millvale Monday night, will complete his training in the Forest City tomorrow and will arrive here Monday morning. Along with Pirrone will be Louis De Santis, a stablemate, who boxes Patsy Hennigan, local lightweight, in the five-round semi-final. Dominic Mancini takes on Jackie McFarland, of Canton, O., in the other 10-round match. Young Gizzy tangles with Charley Blozevich in the second five-round affair, and Irish Jimmy Ferry trades blows with Al Farone in the opener.

GILPIN TOPS SEEDED LIST FOR LOCAL NET TOURNEY

100 RACQUET STARS ENTER TITLE PLAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Sam Gilpin, Philadelphia ace and ranking racqueter of the Middle States L. T. A., heads a seeded list of 12 and a field of exactly 100 in the men's singles division of the forty-sixth annual Western Pennsylvania tennis championships, beginning on the clay courts of the Stanton Heights Golf Club and the Pittsburgh Golf Club at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Dr. John O'Loughlin, P. A. A. star and defender of the David I. McCahill Cup symbolic of the West Penn crown, comes second to Gilpin, with Frank Broida, crack Belmont southpaw, third, and Dr. Dave O'Loughlin, Winged Head net leader, fourth.

John O'Loughlin was rated next to Gilpin because of titular prestige and in spite of Broida's close victory over him in the Stanton Heights invitation final last Sunday, the 1933 rankings and the fact that the Stanton event was an early season affair swaying the balance to John by a close margin. Leroy Weir, rangy Clevelander, whose play in his debut here last year was a revelation until John O'Loughlin stopped him in the semi-finals, copped fifth, a notch ahead of Bill Haseltine, Quaker redoubtable and 1930 and 1931 premier, who fell before the Ohioan last June.

LOCKHART SEVENTH

Charley Lockhart, scintillant Princeton product, landed a close call over George Henderson, husky Stantonian, for seventh position, while Frank Smith, ever-dangerous Edgewooder, who has been troubled this year by a shoulder ailment that is at last responding to treatment, comes in at number nine. Slim Billy O'Loughlin of the P. A. A. is tenth, with Sam Harbison carrying Allegheny Country Club colors at number 11 and Bob Madden, Pitt Freshman luminary, bagging the twelfth post and being the only newcomer—and a junior, at that—to crash the select group.

Though the local net fraternity is turning out virtually en masse for the classic, at least two noteworthy standbys are off the roster. Paul Barber, Penn State satellite, is out on account of his brother's wedding, and Frank McClintock will be absent due to pressure of business. B. F. Arkle, 1932 titleholder, will not make the trip hither from Wheeling because of the conflicting West Virginia State closed tournament, which he will attend at Charleston, while Byron Baur, who copped West Penn honors in 1927 and 1929, cannot leave his legal practice in Erie.

PLAY OPENS TOMORROW

Chairman Frank S. Smith has decreed that all first round contests must be run off tomorrow, which will leave Sunday and Monday to clean up second stanza frays and reduce the pack to 32 prior to start of the other events. Contestants drawn in the upper bracket must report at Stanton Heights; those in the lower will go to the Pittsburgh Golf Club courts on Northumberland street, just off Forbes.

Entries in men's, women's and mixed doubles and women's singles will remain open until Monday night. Names may be filed with Chairman Smith either at Stanton Heights or at his office in the Frick Building.

Manager Helen Kasputis will take her Goldenson Vanities to Castle Shannon to play St. Ann's today in bracket II of the Girls' Division of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Western Pennsylvania softball tournament. The contest is scheduled to get under way at 7 p. m.

Two more senior games are listed for this evening. The Kirby Transfer Company team will oppose the E. J. Noftz in Bracket 2, and the Morgan Blue Birds will play the Weise Newsies in Bracket VII at Morgan.

Manager Henry Hofbauer hit a home run in the ninth inning to break up a 5-5 tie to give the Andersons a 6-to-5 victory over the E. J. McAvoys in a senior competition game of Bracket 5 yesterday on the Schenley High School field. The McAvoys took an early lead but the Andersons came back strong in the fifth and sixth innings to knot the count at 5 all. Pitcher Ted Shall, of the winners, hit a home run with a man on base. N. J. Villa, former amateur boxer, played well in short field for the conquered team.

The East Liberty Drugs defeatetd the Blues Chasers, 7 to 3, in a Bracket 3 game in the senior class. Paul Cralle, of the winners, hit a home run in the first inning with two on bases. Howdy Levy's fielding featured the contest. A fair-sized crowd viewed the game.

Softball Slants.

The Stanleys seem to have it on the E. J. Noftz team, which is entered in the Senior Class of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's softball tournament. Stanley Vazalewski and Stanley McCoskey are two pitchers who have not been defeated this season. The Noftzs lost only two games of 18 played.

Louis Di Cello, manager of the Carnegie Panthers, entrants in the Intermediate Division, is a playing manager. He plays the outfield and is a dangerous man at bat.

Pitcher George Richardson has been turning in some spectacular victories for the Panthers. Richardson looks like the probable pitcher to hurl the opening softball game for the Panthers. John Spinda and Nick Howrylchak are other pitchers who may see action in tournament play. Nick plays first base when he is not scheduled to pitch.

Henry Dorn, George Richardson and John Gatz are Carnegie High School athletes. Dorn plays second base. Gatz is one of the Panthers' star batsmen. He has been playing second and third base.

The Elizabeth Produce team is eager to book games with first-class softball teams that use the 12-inch ball. Games may be arranged on a home-and-home basis. Write W. H. Reed, Center avenue, Elizabeth, Pa.

The Koppers Company team is leading in the Business Men's Softball League. The leaders have won five games and lost one, while the second-place U. S. Engineers annexed four and dropped one. American Fruit Growers are in third place. Commonwealth Trust has yet to win a game.

Miss Kight to Seek Record at Willows

Lenore Kight will try for the world record at the Willows pool, Oakmont, on Saturday, June 23, in the 880 yards senior free-style championship race. Helene Madison is the present titleholder, but, one by one, Miss Kight is gradually breaking all Miss Madison's records.

Bob McTiernan is up against severe competition defending his high board title. Carik Johnston, Stover, Caldwell, McQuillen, Muha and McGowan, all topnotchers, are out to get McTiernan's scalp.

CHAMPION JOY, DESPAIR OF MANAGERS

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP.)—Max Baer, world heavyweight champion five years after he first pulled on a pair of boxing gloves, has been the joy and despair alternately of a procession of managers and handlers since he decided to give up an irksome task of wrestling quarters of beef on his father's farm to try his hand at thumping chins.

From the time he knocked out Chief Caribou, an obscure Indian ringster, the one-time Livermore butcher boy has engaged in the clowning tactics that rankled some fans, made others laugh and caused still others to tap their heads in significant fashion. He once said:

"I'm going to get them coming to see me whether they're for me or against. I think it's good box office appeal."

Today he said:

"Boy, this is great stuff being champion."

His showmanship and ability marched hand in hand from the first. He scored 13 knockouts, won three decisions and lost one fight on a foul in 1929.

Ring tragedy cropped up to nearly halt Baer's career in the second year. On the night of August 25 in San Francisco he knocked out Frank Campbell in five rounds. Campbell died from a brain hemorrhage the following day and Baer, while exonerated, quit boxing until January of the next year.

His fistic rise since then has been steady, mingled with marriage, divorce, more heart affairs and resultant breach of promise suits, motion picture acting and night club engagements, all combining to make Max a spectacular figure.

When he insisted on waving to friends and making joking remarks during a 20-round bout in Reno with Paulino Uzcudun, meanwhile losing the decision, his manager shook his head and said:

"I thought he was going to become the boxing champion. He acts like he is due to become boxing 'chumpion.'"

Carnera's Finish Is Tragic As Giant 'Resigns'

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, June 15.—Weakly, his mind a blank, his grotesque feet shod with unseen rockers, all that remained of the giant who had been Primo Carnera, heavyweight champion of the world, gestured feebly with his right hand in the eleventh round last night. Stiffly, his bruised and battered lips moved, but made no sound.

"I've had enough," they tried to say and Referee Arthur Donovan, who had been a most understanding man all evening, did not fail the stricken mammoth now. With one hand, he pushed Max Baer, the new champion, away and with the other escorted the old and broken and bereft leader to his corner. It was the end. Carnera had been knocked down until mind conquered instinct and refused to admire the outrage longer. He had been down perhaps a dozen times to establish a modern championship record.

END IS TRAGIC

A tragic end to the Italian's countrymen who sat stunned while around them a crowd of 50,000 reveled and reeled in frenzy at this climax to the wildest evening the heavyweight championship division yet has known, the Dempsey-Firpo shambles not excluded. An abject end, too, for this great oaf, 263-odd pounds on the scales yesterday and almost 6 feet 7 inches tall. He stopped on his feet, he surrendered, "resigned," I believe is the term they use abroad.

And so to the loss of his championship and his prestige and self-approval was added the ignominy of being the first of his kind to admit defeat in this manner. No champion ever before has asked to lose. Willard didn't come out of his corner at Toledo. But the assumption was that he couldn't. Primo, when he requested a cessation, was on his feet. Maybe the novelty was too much for him. He had been on his back most of the night.

But perhaps I draw too stark a picture of one whose incentive was great. A moment before the end he had been knocked down from the wind of a missed punch. He was about to go again, probably for the last time, after being clipped with an overhead right. But he refused. Probably the memory of him would have been kinder if he hadn't.

In all, Carnera was down anywhere from nine to 13 times, depending on whether one counted football tackles or the times when Referee Donovan, a surprisingly tolerant man, was becoming confused in his duties to a point where he seemed to be acting as Carnera's chief second.

MAX DERIDED

A year ago Baer had done something of the same thing to Max Schmeling, a former champion; yet they derided him this time because in the training camp he fiddled and fooled, one of our esteemed boxing commissioners even going so far as to use the term "bum" and to suggest that the fight be called off.

Baer proved a fairly faithful replica of Dempsey, at least in results. In actuality, Baer retreated last night, whereas Dempsey always advanced. So their methods differ radically. In fact, Baer seemed to have none. But that was a delusion.

He carefully paced himself, wilfully accepting 100 unimportant punches, so that when he launched a good one the surprise element was the greater. And always he seemed to know that the outcome was ordained.

DORMONT PILOT GOOD BATTER

By TOM BIRKS

Veteran ball players in the City League apparently never lose their batting power. The latest war horse to come back and hit bingles all over the lot is Billy Fuchs, playing manager of the Dormont Club.

With a scarcity of players of City League caliber and injuries breaking up the morale of the club, Fuchs injected himself into the Dormont lineup and collected three hits while his club was losing to Homewood.

Books travel to Homewood for its fifth league game of the week this evening. Manager Bill Dalzell and his Homewood club realize that this is a big opportunity to get into the league leadership.

The third game in the circuit finds Mt. Oliver traveling to the Salt Works to meet the J. J. Vaughan nine.

Homewood, Books and Mt. Oliver turned in triumphs in last evening's City League engagements, the big surprise of the evening coming as Mt. Oliver, with Scheutz hurling fine ball, blanked Dormont, 2 to 0. Homewood defeated Beltzhoover, 11 to 7, and Books nosed out the Vaughans, 11 to 9.

BROACA PROVES NEWEST MOUND SENSATION

ROOKIE TWIRLS ONE-HIT WIN FOR YANKS

Associated Press.

In three games 23-year-old Johnny Broaca, who took his degree as master of the art of elbowing under Joe Wood at Yale, has become the reigning sensation of the American League.

Only two hours after he joined the Yankees, Broaca started a game and promptly was shelled off the hill. His confidence was unimpaired however, and he came back to pitch and lose a three-hit game against the Athletics and then yesterday turned in a one-hit feat against the Browns that brought him his first major league victory by a 7-to-0 count.

RUTH HITS TENTH

Babe Ruth also had his say when he started things off by hitting his tenth homer of the year with two aboard in first. But it was mostly Broaca who led the Yanks back to the league lead. The one-hit stunt was the best by any Yankee pitcher this season and 10 strikeouts offset the ill effects of six passes.

The pitchers stood out in yesterday's big league records with few exceptions. Cleveland and the Athletics didn't get much in the hurling line, as the Indians hammered out an 11-to-7 triumph.

In the National League, St. Louis and Boston shelled each other's hurling for a total of 34 blows, including three Cardinal homers, a triple and 10 doubles. The Cards came out with a 12-9 decision. The Cubs also took the home run route to victory in a free-swinging contest, beating the Phillies 6-4, as circuit swats by Chuck Klein, Don Hurst and Babe Herman produced all the Chicago runs.

GIANTS BEAT REDS

But Hal Schumacher turned in a four-hit game, beating the Reds 3 to 0 to keep the Giants on top of the National; Monte Weaver, of Washington, granted the same number of blows in defeating the White Sox 5 to 1 and Brooklyn's Van Mungo granted the Pirates only five hits in 10 innings and won out, 3 to 2.

Schumacher's triumph was his tenth over Cincinnati without a loss in his major league career.

School Net Play Opens Tomorrow

The twenty-second annual City High School senior and junior singles tennis championships will get under way on the 10 clay courts of Frick Park at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning. The competition will continue for about a week. Completion of two rounds of action is the quota for the inaugural.

Some 25 schools may send representatives to the event, both winners and runners-up in intramural tourneys at the respective institutions being eligible to enter. This means that there will probably be more than 30 contestants in the senior group, with perhaps a few less in the junior division.

M'DIARMID VICTOR

ATLANTA, June 15.—(AP.)—John McDiarmid, Forth Worth, Tex., had a narrow escape in the quarter-finals of the southern tennis tourney yesterday, but managed to squeeze past Arthur Hendrix, of Lakeland, Fla., 7-5, 5-7, 6-4.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE WIDOW'S TEARS—The Lighthouse so named is situated in the Red Sea off Suakin, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, on a great steep rock called Djebel Ter (Bird Mountain). It was founded by the widow of an English captain who perished in the wreck of his ship on the cliff. The Lighthouse is so isolated and desolate and the heat so overpowering in this location that for 70 years after its foundation no keeper could be found to man the lighthouse voluntarily. The Turkish government then impressed into service a succession of criminals sentenced to death, promising them complete commutation after 10 years of faithful service.

TOMORROW: THE LONGEST STRAIGHT.

Blow-by-Blow Description Of Baer's Triumph

NEW YORK, June 15.—The blow-by-blow account of Max Baer's technical knockout victory over Primo Carnera for the heavyweight championship of the world in the Madison Square Garden Bowl, Long Island, last night, follows:

ROUND ONE

ROUND TWO

As Baer tore out viciously for the kill he nailed Carnera with a right to the head and both tumbled to the floor. They crashed down again, both of them as Baer landed a right high on the head. Again they fell, Baer on top as he drove the champion to the floor with a right high to the head. Game and dogged, Carnera fought to hold the challenger at bay, his left stuck out, his right high, as Baer stalked about him. But for a moment Max seemed to have punched himself out. Carnera quickly recovered. Another long overhand right smashed Carnera's temple but again he recovered quickly and driving Baer to the ropes clubbed him about the head with both hands, his first real offensive show of the fight. Baer patted him reassuringly on the shoulder as the bell rang.

ROUND THREE

Baer stalked his lumbering foe and leaped in with a smashing right uppercut to the body, landing just below the heart and bringing an expression of deep anguish to Primo's face. Still trying to force the going but with leads that were so feeble that Baer brushed them off like so many flies. Carnera tried vainly to do some damage with his left jab. It was tame for nearly a minute as Baer continued to strut his st"". Max then unwound with long right and Carnera went down hard on his haunches, bouncing right up after a count of one. The champion was consistently refusing to take any long counts in his visits to the floor and was obviously thoroughly bewildered. There was a flurry of punching with Baer digging hard to the body as Referee Donovan parted them at the bell.

ROUND FOUR

Baer waited in his corner for the champion to come to him and again with a reckless show of stamina for the punishment he had taken, Primo marched to the attack. The champion tried to reach Baer with his long left as they circled in the middle of the ring. Sneering, Baer backed to the ropes as Carnera sticking doggedly to the task, moved in ponderously behind his long left hand. Baer ducked and swept both fists deep into Carnera's body but he quickly moved away again, slow and tiring, as the champion kept ceaselessly after him, stabbing with lefts that landed once in every two tries. While the bell rang, Carnera marched bright eyed and apparently in full possession of his faculties again to his corner.

ROUND FIVE

Carnera bore out of his corner with a show of freshness and Baer, apparently feeling the situation was under control, stalked away from him, pulling up his trunks, sneering. The champion stabbed his ponderous left a half dozen times to Baer's jaw before the challenger turned on him, and swept in with a right swing to the head that nearly drove Carnera from his feet. Carnera apparently had no defense for the challenger's terrific overhand rights and he held on desperately to Baer's arm, holding himself erect. Baer tore in with a left hook to the body, bending Carnera in the middle, and then as Carnera staggered backward, a foolish, distorted grin on his battered and bloody face, Baer leaped savagely after him. Carnera was leaning, all but helplessly against the ropes, fending off the challenger's attack weakly with his ponderous arms as the bell sounded.

ROUND SIX

Baer came up slowly, danced across the ring and shuffled his feet in the resin of Carnera's corner. There he cut loose with a right that buried deep in the champion's body, and with face contorted, swept both hands madly for Carnera's face. Max missed with both lefts and rights before he drilled a terrific left hook to the head, crossed his right to the champion's jaw, and then ran himself into a two-fisted blast to the body that nearly swept him from his feet. Carnera pressed forward, looking like a wrecked battleship, and as Baer met him with another terrific right to the head, he held desperately. The champion's legs were buckling, he could scarcely stand, but he never stopped punching. He was wild though, and Baer rammed a right, then a left, into the champion's huge body before crossing his right to the chin. The bell caught them with Carnera retreating into a corner.

ROUND SEVEN

ROUND EIGHT

Carnera seemed to have all his great strengh back as he danced across the ring and stabbed at Baer's face with a long left. Max took a few and then turned slaughterer. He drove a terrific left hook and right smash to the body, then flung a crashing overhead right to Carnera's temple. The giant shook off the terrific punishment but ran back into another straight right to the side of the head that mashed the flesh under his left eye. Baer's right was low but he drove a terrific right back of Carnera's ear. The giant was wobbling again and a left hook brought a fresh stream of blood from his nose. Baer stood and looked him over, and Carnera, his face now the mask of a gargoyle, weakly beckoned him to come in. Baer did and as Carnera lunged to get away from him the champion fell flat on his own corner. As the bell rang Referee Donovan called a low blow on Baer which automatically cost him the round. Carnera took no count when he fell.

ROUND NINE

ROUND TEN

Baer came out in an exaggerated crouch and when Carnera reached for him with an open left glove, Referee Donovan ordered him to close his hand. They fell into a clinch and Carnera, strong again, hammered Baer's body with both hands. Then Baer turned the champion around and it was his turn to smash a dozen furious lefts and rights to the ribs. Carnera walked out of the corner and motioned to Baer that the challenger could do no damage down there. So Baer flung a long right to the head and missed, and Carnera grabbed him, hugged him, then pounded his head with both hands. As they came out of clinch, two rights floored Carnera and he came up reeling. Baer smashed him to the floor again for a count of three. Baer punched himself out as the champion lay back helplessly against the ropes and the bell rang with the crowd in an uproar. In one of those furious exchanges, Referee Donovan tried to stop the fight but Carnera forced him away. It was Baer's round.

ROUND ELEVEN

Baer was cautious. Carnera stumbled, a terrifically beaten hulk from his corner and Baer floored him with a long right to the chin. Carnera came up without a count and Baer smashed him again about the head. A dead game champion, Carnera flung his hands aimlessly at the challenger, and even whipped a hard left and right up to the head in mid-ring. Carnera's legs would scarcely hold him, but he threw a long right to his head. Then Baer floored him again with a long left to the chin. A right flattened Carnera again and as he came up Referee Donovan stopped the fight, giving Baer the championship on a technical knockout in two minutes 16 seconds of the round.

Former Girl Friend Stands by Primo

LONDON, June 15.—(AP.)—Miss Emelia Tersini, the raven-haired young waitress who saw to it that Primo Carnera collected none of the proceeds for the battering he took last night, insisted excitedly today that Baer didn't fight fair. She said:

"He tried to make Primo look foolish."

New York lawyers, at the instance of Miss Tersini, tied up Carnera's share of the proceeds, since the recent heavyweight champion for some months has owed her $15,000 she was awarded in a breach of promise suit.

WIMBLEDON, England, June 15.—Uncle Sam's tennis girls got off to a flying start today in their defense of the international Wightman Cup. Helen Jacobs, American champion and team captain, and Sarah Palfrey, of Brookline, Mass., registering victories in the first two singles matches over their English rivals.

Miss Jacobs, the sturdy California star, made short shrift of Margaret (Peggy) Scriven, defeating the English girl in straight sets with the loss of only two games. The scores were 6-1, 6-1.

Miss Palfrey played some of the greatest tennis of her career in cutting down Dorothy Round, top-ranking British player, 6-3, 3-6, 8-6. The New England lass came from behind, trailing, 5-6, to win three straight games and defeat Miss Round for America's first victory.

Triumph over Miss Scriven was was especially sweet for Miss Jacobs. The American titleholder bowed to Miss Scriven in the final of the French hard court championships two weeks ago after Miss Jacobs' protest against playing in darkness was refused by French officials.

Title Fight Briefs

LIVERMORE, Cal., June 15.—(INS.)—Livermore declared a holiday. This town of 1,500 population belonged to Max Baer today—he was reared here. Some enthusiastic citizens even suggested that the town's name be changed to Baerville in honor of the "Livermore Larruper." There was a parade—and firecrackers—bells rang, whistles tooted and the populace danced in glee in the streets after Baer's victory was announced.

DENVER, June 15.—Mrs. Nora Baer, mother of Max Baer, world heavyweight boxing champion, is looking for a title for Maxie's 19-year-old brother, Buddy. She said that Papa Baer was a champion butcher, and now that Max is a champion boxer, Buddy should be a champion of something or other. Mrs. Baer, who lives in San Leandro, Cal., is visiting friends and relatives here.

ROME, June 15.—(AP.)—Unconcealed disappointment at Primo Carnera's trouncing and the passing of the heavyweight world championship from Italy was expressed in sport circles today. News of Carnera's defeat amazed most fight critics and fans for they had come to regard the "man mountain" as invincible.

HAMBURG, Germany, June 15.—(AP.)—Max Schmeling, former heavyweight boxing champion, and Walter Neusel today signed contracts to meet in August in what the promoters advertised as an elimination bout for the right to meet Champion Max Baer at Miami, Fla., in February. The site of the fight was not named.

SEQUALS, Italy, June 15.—(AP.)—A twisted ankle, causing excruciating pain, and not Max Baer's fists brought Primo Carnera to a standstill last night in New York, his home village was convinced today. They have Carnera's word for it, expressed in a cablegram to his father. The message read:

The Thin Man

By DASHIELL HAMMETT

"That stumped me. Before I could think up an answer he was saying: 'However, we can discuss that more fully when we meet tonight.' I asked him where and when we'd meet him and he said he'd have to phone me, he didn't know where he'd be. He's to phone me at my house at 10 o'clock. He was in a hurry now, though he had seemed leisurely enough before, and hadn't time to answer any of the things I wanted to ask, so he hung up and I phoned you. What do you think of his innocence now?"

"Not as much as I did," I replied slowly. "How sure are you of hearing from him at ten tonight?"

Macaulay shrugged. "You know as much about that as I do."

"Then if I were you I wouldn't bother the police till we've grabbed our wild man and can turn him over to them. This story of yours isn't going to make them exactly love you and, even if they don't throw you in the can right away, they'll make things pretty disagreeable for you if Wynant gives us a run-around tonight."

"A few hours more oughtn't to matter much," I said. "Did either of you say anything about his not keeping the date at the Plaza?"

"No. I didn't get a chance to ask him. Well, if you say wait, I'll wait, but—"

"Let's wait till tonight, anyhow, till he phones you—if he does—and then we can make up our minds whether to take the police along."

"You don't think he'll phone?"

"I'm not too sure," I said. "He didn't keep his last date with you, and he seems to have gone pretty vague on you as soon as he learned that Mimi had turned in the watch-chain and knife. I wouldn't be too optimistic about it. We'll see, though. I'd better get out to your house at about 9 o'clock, hadn't I?"

"Come for dinner."

Promises to Be Early

"I can't, but I'll make it as early as I can, in case he's ahead of time. We'll want to move fast. Where do you live?"

Macaulay gave me his address, in Scarsdale, and stood up. "Will you say goodby to Mrs. Charles for me and thank—Oh, by the way, I hope you didn't misunderstand me about Harrison Quinn last night. I meant only just what I said, that I'd had bad luck taking his advice on the market. I didn't mean to insinuate that there was anything—you know—or that he might not've made money for his other customers."

"I understand," I said, and called Nora.

She and Macaulay shook hands and made polite speeches to each other and he pushed Asta around a little and said, "Make it as early as you can," to me and went away.

"There goes the hockey game," I said, "unless you find somebody else to go with."

"Did I miss anything?" Nora asked.

"Not much." I told her what Macaulay had told me. "And don't ask me what I think of it. I don't know. I know Wynant's crazy, but he's not acting like a crazy man and he's not acting like a murderer. He's acting like a man playing some kind of game. God only knows what the game is."

"I think," she said, "that he's shielding somebody else."

"Why don't you think he did it?"

She looked surprised. "Because you don't."

I said that was a swell reason. "Who is the somebody else?"

"I don't know yet. Now don't make fun of me: I've thought about it a lot. It wouldn't be Macaulay, because he's using him to help shield whoever it is and—"

Nora Hunts Slayer

"And it wouldn't be me," I suggested, "because he wants to use me."

"That's right," she said, "and you're going to feel very silly if you make fun of me and then I guess who it is before you do. And it wouldn't be either Mimi or Jorgensen, because he tried to throw suspicion on them. And it wouldn't be Nunheim, because he was most likely killed by the same person and, furthermore, he wouldn't have to be shielded now. And it wouldn't be Morelli, because Wynant was jealous of him and they'd had a row." She frowned at me. "I wish you'd found out more about that big fat man they called Sparrow and that big red-haired woman."

"But how about Dorothy and Gilbert?"

"I wanted to ask you about them. Do you think he's got any very strong paternal feeling for them?"

"No."

"You're probably just trying to discourage me," she said. "Well, knowing them, it's hard to think either of them might've been guilty, but I tried to throw out my personal feelings and stick to logic. Before I went to sleep last night I made a list of all the—"

"There's nothing like a little logic-sticking to ward off insomnia. It's like—"

"Don't be so damned patronizing. Your performance so far has been a little less than dazzling."

"I didn't mean no harm," I said and kissed her. "That a new dress?"

"Ah! Changing the subject, you coward."

I went to see Guild early in the afternoon and went to work on him as soon as we had shaken hands. "I didn't bring my lawyer along. I thought it looked better if I came by myself."

'Sounds Familiar'

He wrinkled his forehead and shook his head as if I had hurt him. "Now it was nothing like that," he said patiently.

"It was too much like that."

He sighed. "I wouldn't've thought you'd make the mistake that a lot of people make thinking just because we—You know we got to look at every angle, Mr. Charles."

"That sounds familiar. Well, what do you want to know?"

"All I want to know is who killed her—and him."

"Try asking Gilbert," I suggested.

Guild pursed his lips. "Why him exactly?"

"He told his sister he knew who did it, told her he got it from Wynant."

"So she says he said. I haven't had a chance to ask him about it."

He squinted his watery eyes at me. "Just what is that layout over there, Mr. Charles?"

"The Jorgenson family? You probably know as much about it as I do."

"I don't," he said, "and that's a fact. I just can't size them up at all. This Mrs. Jorgensen, now, what is she?"

Guild Wants Truth

"A blonde."

He nodded gloomily. "Uh-huh, and that's all I know. But look, you've known them a long time and from what she says you and her—"

"And me and her daughter," I said, "and me and Julia Wolf and me and Mrs. Astor. I'm hell with the women."

He held up a hand. "I'm not saying I believe everything she says, and there's nothing to get sore about. You're taking the wrong attitude, if you don't mind me saying it. You're acting like you thought we were out to get you, and that's all wrong, absolutely all wrong."

"Maybe, but you've been talking double to me ever since last—"

He looked at me with steady pale eyes and said calmly: "I'm a copper and I got my work to do."

"That's reasonable enough. You told me to come in today. What do you want?"

"I didn't tell you to come in, I asked you."

"All right. What do you want?"

"I don't want this," he said. "I don't want anything like this. We've been talking man to man up to this time and I'd kind of like to go on thataway."

"You made the change."

"I don't think that's a fact. Look here, Mr. Charles, would you take your oath, or even just tell me straight out, that you've been emptying your pockets to me right along?"

There was no use saying yes—he would not have believed me. I said: "Practically."

"Practically, yes," he grumbled. "Everybody's been telling me practically the whole truth. What I want's some impractical son of a gun that'll shoot the works."

I could sympathize with him: I knew how he felt. I said: "Maybe nobody you've found knows the whole truth."

He made an unpleasant face. "That's very likely, ain't it? Listen, Mr. Charles, I've talked to everybody I could find. If you can find any more for me, I'll talk to them too. You mean Wynant? Don't you suppose we got every facility the department's got working night and day trying to turn him up?"

"There's his son," I suggested.

"There's his son," he agreed. He called in Andy and a swarthy, bow-legged man named Kline. "Get me that Wynant kid—the punk—I want to talk to him." They went out. He said: "See, I want people to talk to."

I said: "Your nerves are in pretty bad shape this afternoon, aren't they? Are you bringing Jorgensen down from Boston?"

He shrugged his big shoulders. "His story listens all right to me. I don't know. Want to tell me what you think of it?"

"Sure."

HENRY CLAY PLEADS FOR HIS COMPROMISE PLAN (Feb., 1850)

The gold rush in 1848-49 increased considerably the population of California. Her desire for admission to the Union as a state brought up the evaded slave question. Chase, Hale, Sumner, anti-slavery leaders, debated Clay, Calhoun, Webster, the compromisers. All anxious to save the Union, they compromised finally in the "Omnibus Bill," 1850. By it California was admitted as free, Texas (reduced in size) as a slave state; the other Mexican cessions were left to "squatter" or popular sovereignty (inhabitants decide on slavery). Fugitive-slave laws were strengthened, slave trade in District of Columbia forbidden. The Nashville Convention of the same year extended the dividing line 36° 30' N. L. between slavery and free territories (Missouri Compromise) to the Pacific.

DISCOVERY OF GOLD BOOSTS CALIFORNIA

An endless stream of fortune seekers flowed into the newly conquered California after the rich gold strikes became known. Within one year (1849) California's population grew from 6,000 to 85,000.

Most of the gold came from stream-beds and was obtained by placer mining. This consists in shaking the sand in a vessel (pan, box, etc.) allowing the heavier gold to settle. The value of gold obtained in California up to date is nearly 2 billion dollars. Since the depression many thousands of jobless make a living by working over the abandoned places or prospecting for new strikes in California and other Western states. (U. S. History)

ANNE BOLEYN BEGGING KING HENRY VIII FOR A LAWFUL TRIAL

The Reformation in England was a national movement in contrast to its local character in France and Germany. The way prepared by Wycliffe, the immediate cause of break between England and Rome was the Pope's refusal to grant a divorce to King Henry VIII (1509-1547) from his first wife Catherine without a trial in Rome. Henry VIII received from the universities a statement judging his first marriage void and approving a second to Anne Boleyn (1533). Parliament declared the king head of the church and beneficiary of its revenues.

Later Anne Boleyn was accused of monstrous offenses and beheaded (1536).

Alternating persecution of Catholics and Protestants (Anglicans) followed in England according to the ruler's belief. (World History)

GRAHAM BELL'S TELEPHONE—THE LATER SYSTEM

THE TELEPHONE RECEIVER

LUTHER BEFORE THE DIET AT WORMS (1521)

The impetus in learning by the Renaissance, the strengthening of the national spirit of crystallizing nations, the malpractices of some unworthy representatives of the church, had as reaction the movement "Reformation" or Protestantism.

Wycliffe (1324-1384) started opposition to the Roman church in England; John Huss (1369-1415) in Bohemia; Luther (1483-1546) in Germany. Martin Luther stated his case with his 95 theses first in 1517. The German princes and ecclesiastical leaders, Emperor Charles V presiding, met in the Diet at Worms (1521). They declared Luther an outlaw and under the ban of the empire. Forced to hide, Luther translated the New Testament into German and continued his teachings.

Divided religious beliefs soon led to persecutions and civil wars in Germany. In 1555 Charles V was forced to legalize Lutheranism, which had spread rapidly.

BIRDS (AVES), WARM BLOODED ANIMALS

Birds, a class of the vertebrate animals, are feather covered, supported by two legs and having forelimbs adapted for flying. Their hearts have two auricles and two ventricles, so their blood-circulation is double. The pulmonary system includes two lungs and "air-sacks" that distribute air throughout the body. Their brains are more developed than those of reptiles, cerebral hemispheres improved but surface convolutions—as seen in mammals—are missing or merely indicated. Vision of birds is keen, hearing developed. The senses of smell and taste are feeble; some organs are helpful in touch (beak, bristles). Their beak is toothless. Birds reproduce by eggs. Destroying insects, weed-seeds, also as food supply, birds are important.

One Day is a Fisherman's Life

When you are out of sight of land in a cracker box you ain't nowhere at all. Every fishing boat is as crowded as twins in one barber chair. Everybody is sociable. It's amazing how you make friends with a stranger with your hook in his thumb. Nothing is too good for him.

Put 50 fishermen on the wrong side of a 30-passenger boat and and you have a budget to balance. That's human nature. If a mackerel is copped on the port everybody deserts starboard and goes port. The boat tilts like an opened cellar door. Then she swings back, plunges and stands on her hind legs. Fishing grounds are about a mile deep. But you feel better when the captain throws over an anchor on a fire-fast rope.

It's a thrill to watch flounder, mackerel and cod coming up over the sides. The Spanish mackerel is very obliging. He throws his fins over the rail and climbs right in. Just about as much sport

If your boat starts pulling in the shore dinners pretty soon you have neighbors. Captains of fishing boats watch each other through spy glasses. In five minutes our boat is pivot man for a fleet of 100 other craft. The fish all get headaches from bumping their skulls on bottles. Fishing consists mostly of throwing everything overboard.

If you get sea sick that makes it nice. Of all the tortures invented by the Chinese not one exceeds the agony of watching your healthy brother-in-law eat your lunch. Top that off with a triple layer of sunburn and you have earned an old-age pension in 10 short hours. And there ain't a town in America well enough policed to stop somebody from starting a fishing trip. And no one ever knows how the subject came up.

Neighbors are always push-overs for deep sea fishing tours. Let one bird get a rod and reel for Christmas and there will be 50 along your street by the Fourth of July. And there ain't a chance for the government to step in. No revenue stamps are being counterfeited.

The topper on a sea trip is to fall overboard. Rescue consists of gaffing by the captain. A gaff is a harpoon. He gaffs you in the seat of your trousers. On land you could sue him. But at sea you must give him a medal.

They Consider Us Fools For Tolerating Them

The Communists Would Be Guilty of No Such Nonsense Themselves If They Acquired Power

Some of the old-fashioned Americans in Pittsburgh who love their country think the Board of Public Education made a grave mistake in turning the Fifth Avenue High School over to the Communists for their meeting of Tuesday night.

Liberalism is surely being carried to an absurd extreme when the government, as represented by the Board of Education, acts as kindly host to an organization bent on destroying the government.

People have been lulled into a false notion concerning the Communists. The idea seems to prevail that the Reds are merely a political party like the Republicans, or Democrats, or Socialists, or Prohibitionists, and that as such they should be accorded the same freedom of speech as is accorded these others.

But there is a fundamental difference. The other parties believe in democratic government—in rule by the majority—and seek to put their policies into effect in a constitutional manner by winning victories at the polls. The Communists despise democracy; they are for a dictatorship; they hope to gain power, not by ballots but by bullets.

We have only to look to Russia, where Communists are in authority, to see what they would do if they gained control in America. There is no democracy in Russia. The people have no voice in the government. A cruel and tyrannical minority rules. Opposition is promptly put down without mercy.

That is the sort of thing which the Board of Public Education is encouraging in Pittsburgh by turning a public school over to the Reds for a meeting.

During Flag Week—a week devoted to patriotic exercises in commemoration of the birth of Old Glory—we have seen the strange spectacle of a meeting in a Pittsburgh public school of a snarling group of enemies of the Republic, who, if they dared, would tear down the Stars and Stripes from that school and hoist the Red flag of Communism.

What fools these Communists think soft-hearted Americans are to tolerate them. They would be guilty of no such nonsense if they came into power. They showed what they would do when they howled and hooted Mayor McNair off the stage when he undertook to address them.

Was there ever a more shameful sight than that of the Mayor of a large American city being insulted and threatened in an American public school by a mob of foreigners for upholding the American government?

We call these Pittsburgh Communists foreigners because, while there may possibly have been some among them who technically are American citizens, the spirit of the group was so hostile to the traditions and institutions of this country, so definitely anti-American, that we cannot conceive of any real Americans having anything to do with it.

Surely it is in order to demand of the Board of Public Education that it shall never again allow the Reds to meet in a public school.

Protect American Wines

A Prohibitive Duty Should Be Placed on Foreign Vintages, Especially Those of France

Notwithstanding the singular contention of Prof. Mordecai Ezekiel, of the Washington "brain trust," that American industry must be repressed lest it impair our ability to absorb the exports of foreign nations, we think the American people will nevertheless insist, at least with reference to some of their industries, that our government shall ENCOURAGE and NOT STIFLE them.

The words of Ezekiel had to do with the use of the common pine of the southern states for the manufacture of newsprint and paper base stocks—an undertaking which is practicable from every point of view, a sure source of profit and a way out from our present dependence upon the foreign producer.

We shall have more to say of his attempt to spike this new source of wealth to the South.

The same objection, ON THEORY, could be made to the protection of the American wine industry.

It will hardly be attempted, however, as this industry is too far developed and too well established to tolerate such absurd and false economics—professional though their origins be.

The American people have a pride in their domestic wine industry. Its product has a unique excellence. Its purity is safeguarded by our own supervision and inspection. Its popularity and use are increasing constantly.

There is no reason under the sun why the wines of Europe, and particularly those of defaulting France, should be suffered to compete with our domestic wines.

No superiority can be claimed for the foreign product. Likewise there is no limit to the progress in rareness of flavor and general excellence which our domestic wines can achieve if the industry is surrounded with reasonable protection against competing products coming to us from foreign countries, where wage scales and other conditions of production are depressed beneath the standards prevailing in this country.

In some of the older countries of Europe, the ancient industry of the vineyard and the wine press has long been regarded as an institution. Its history is interwoven with the history of peoples.

It is surrounded with romance and dignity. It is one of the strands which make up the strength of nations.

The late Carl Schurz, our adopted son from the Rhineland, in one of his most charming addresses, dealt with the social, historical and political significance of Rhenish grape culture and wine production, its graceful usages, the amiable legends that clustered about it, and the pride and affection with which successive generations regarded it.

There is no reason why the same industry in the gorgeous realm of California, where natural conditions are as favorable to its development as any region in the world, should not renew and repeat the romantic story of the grape, as it was written in Palestine of old, and later in Greece and Italy, and later still in France and Germany.

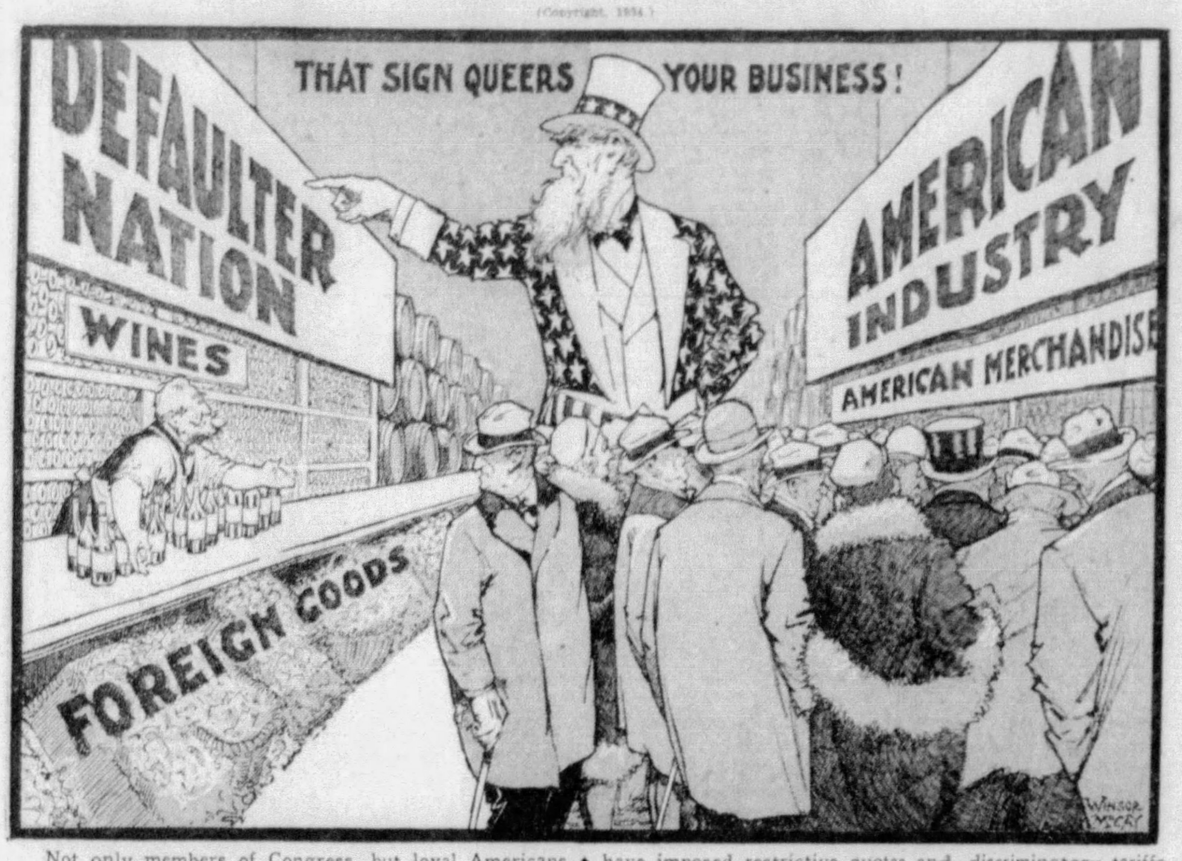
America has a RIGHT to develop this industry; and our people have a RIGHT to the consistent protection of the government in their efforts to do so.

Let a prohibitive duty be placed upon foreign wines, and let it be maintained!

Not only California, but our other wine producing regions as well, are entitled to receive this type and degree of support, and every section of the country wishes it.

As It Should Be

(Copyright, 1934.)



Not only members of Congress, but loyal Americans everywhere are bitterly resentful of the conduct of foreign nations which, in distress, borrowed our money, and later accepted a large part of the loans as outright gifts; which promised by solemn compacts to repay the remaining minor parts of their debts; which have since had the effrontery to default on their just and acknowledged obligations, leaving the American taxpayer to hold the bag; which, furthermore, have imposed restrictive quotas and discriminatory tariffs against OUR merchandise, and which now want to invade OUR market with THEIR alien goods.

As we have said in these columns, there can be no trading, there can be no dealings with cheats and defaulters.

And the American people can drive this lesson home where it belongs by adhering to one good American rule:

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, June 15.—Thoughts while strolling: Put wooden shoes, baggy pants and cap on Bob Brinkerhoff, and there's the perfect Dutch burgomaster. George Jean Nathan is graying, too. Capt. Bob Bartlett and William S. Hart look alike. Park avenue ladies who walk to their cars puffing cigarets.

One word description of Lisle Bell—kewpieish. Roxy, the old fox, is doing a lot of kissing in his stage stunt. Queenie Smith has given sparkle to a half-dozen tawdry plays lately. She deserves a good one. Joe Laurie, Jr., in a Fire Island shack says: "Vacation, my eye! There's no work."

What became of Vicki Baum? Nobody can look so breathless as Lyda Roberti. Or use so many glove-fitting adjectives as Percy Hammond. Something moonlighty about the name Genevieve. I hate to listen to those mnph-de-na-na singers. Broadway after dark—life in broken bits. Sid Solomon doesn't look worried.

New York's greatest cordiality is expressed at filling stations. If I never saw New York again, the thing I would want to remember is the Central Park South skyline in the dusk. Grace Lytell should always wear deep purple. Every artist and cartoonist will mourn Frank De Sales Casey.

One of my favorite people—Ben De Casseres. Daily prayer for a writer: "Save me from ridiculing anyone but myself." And a Shakespeare slogan for the avenue: "Stay, passenger, why goest thou so fast!"

An old-time circus trouper writes me Billie Burke's father, Billy Burke, was the funniest clown of the Forepaugh circus in the late 80s and 90s. Later he went to Europe with a trio billed as Burke, Fresco and Andrus, a donkey, and captivated Germany. He was accompanied by his wife and Billie then in pinafores. In Vienna, Billie made her first stage appearance as a serio-comic. Following this she went to Moscow to appear in Aumont's theater cabaret, receiving 100 rubles a month. From there she went to London to attract the attention of George Edwards, later Charles Frohman and have New York at her feet.

Something about Bryant Park—Arthur Guiterman, I believe, once poetized the idea—draws the defeated. Sandwich men hold nightly conclave in the southeast corner. On a bench there Eugene Walter slept while his hit play was going the theatrical rounds. O. Henry in his low swings preferred it to his favorite Madison Square. In a long jobless upgrade of my own I found solace in its bleak unwritten law: "No questions asked."

Yet one of my most amusing cliches took place in Bryant. Along a path I passed an editor who had jounced me off a magazine. We brushed without speaking and a few steps on, at the precise instant, indulged mutual over shoulder peeks, tripping into running knee falls. Had either any sense we would have dusted ourselves off and swung around for a laugh and a handshake. But it was 15 years before we met one day in Cairo and did.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Most persons who have had serious automobile accidents are careful drivers thereafter.

But this is a high price to pay to learn such a lesson.

Every person who has driven an automobile in all kinds of road conditions should know what is required in order to avoid mishaps.

There are certain precautions which are necessary.

Their violation may not bring serious results for some time, but the law of average works in this as in other things.

And sometimes there will be the accident which comes sooner or later with carelessness.

Excessive speed is dangerous under practically all conditions.

Even if a driver is following every rule he knows for the proper manipulation of his car, another driver may not be doing so.

Because so many feet are covered in a second or two by a fast-moving car, just a moment of hesitation or a slightly unexpected movement on the part of a driver may cause an accident.

The in-and-out drivers not only jeopardize their own lives, but are such road menaces that they should receive more attention from the traffic men.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Have Our Maidens Become Molls?

"Gun Molls"—fascinating, aren't they, in a shuddery sort of way? Bizarre creatures out of another world!

But are they, any longer, so bizarre? And is it "another world?"

Mrs. Belloc Lowndes says they aren't, and it isn't. Mrs. Lowndes recently startled complacent Americans by announcing that she was "convinced that there are thousands of young women who would unhesitatingly COMMIT MURDER but for their fear of being found out, if by so doing they could secure the kind of exciting life which seems to be the only existence they think worth leading."

"Thousands of young women!" But what kind of young women? Gun-molls? Gutter-gals? Weaklings and neurotics?

Not at all, says Mrs. Lowndes. To the contrary, they're the smart, snappy, "average" young women, often from our "best" homes, who set the pace for our modern life. Anything but the criminal type!

But does she mean to say that these charming young creatures would actually DARE to murder "for a good time"? She certainly does! "They'd not only dare—but they do. And are actually admired for doing so! Why? Because all the barriers which used to surround girls have completely broken down. A woman can be as reckless now as she wishes. Public opinion admires a woman who dares!"

Horrid remarks? But they hadn't been quoted an hour before mail sacks were bulging with approval! And Exhibits A! From soured cynics? No! From sensible citizens who say it's all true!

Here, from Los Angeles, comes a red-hot protest from the P. T. A. mother of two sons. And—believe it or not—at least a million puzzled parents will vouch that the contents are Spot News.

"I've had to order the telephone taken out to try and protect the youngest boy against these pleasure-mad girls. He's a freshman in college, and the phone was ringing night and day. He didn't have a chance to study, and naturally didn't want to, with some girl always on the other end of the line, ready with her car to 'go places and do things.'

"Stopping a boy's allowance does no good. The girls are quite willing to pay all expenses. And it's just the same whether it's some rich man's daughter or a working girl.

"From little high school youngsters to bachelor girls with apartments—they're all perfectly brazen about pursuing men. I've seen them sit outside our place in their cars honking for the boy, with the gin all provided for the party! And I could duplicate the story in 50 families in our circle.

"I tell you, our girls are becoming gangster molls!"

And then she proceeds to slam the blame right down where she thinks it belongs—ON THE GADDING MOTHERS OF THESE GANGSTER GIRLS.

"If the mothers weren't pleasure-mad themselves . . . if they'd spend less time loafing and smoking in hotel lobbies trying to start an affair, ogling orchestra leaders, guzzling at cocktail parties, and more time in their homes looking after their daughters—our papers wouldn't be filled with these horrors.

"But these idiot mothers think it's actually amusing when their darlings start a scandal, because it gives them a chance to get into the spotlight, too!"

OUR MAIDENS BECOMING MOLLS! Not so nice when you see it said in cold print, is it? Very thrilling to see some cute little Two-Gun Gertie on the silver screen. Awfully amusing to hear about some smart little scallywag running away with her dad's car, joyriding at 80 miles an hour down Broadway in her undies, wisecracking the cop when he told her "Naughty! Naughty!" But calling them "molls?" Saying they'll "murder!"

No—you can't believe it! I don't blame you. I don't want to either. But—

WHAT ARE WE GOING TO DO ABOUT IT?

MARRY-GO-ROUND

The Most Attractive Age

Somebody is always trying to decide at what age a woman is most attractive. But a man is supposed to be interesting at ALL ages.

And he is—but not to ALL women. Miss Mary Garden finds no man interesting until he is around 50—all the way around! And Miss Sheilah Graham (youthful writer) thinks that all men in their twenties are boring. She would like to set the dead-line at thirty.

Oh, well, by a violent stretch of memory I can recall the time when I thought any man over twenty-five just a dull old fossil. And at "thirty," he was tottering toward the grave! Proving that there are lots of things besides beauty, which are all "in the eye of the beholder."

Young eyes can't find anything "interesting" under hair that is beginning to thin out at the temples and to grow gray above the ears. But more mature eyes perceive nothing but the "great open spaces" under a shock of foot-ball hair. The violin-age thinks the saxophone age pretty raucous and crude; and the saxophone-age finds the violin-age pretty slow and insipid.

The girl who waited on the front stoop for the boy who murmured "A jug of wine, a loaf of bread and THOU!" would hardly appreciate the poetic flights of the young Lothario who sings "You're the cream of my coffee and the mustard on my sandwich!"

In short, a man is most interesting to YOU, when he speaks your language, sings your songs and dances your step!

Still, there IS an age, at which the average man and the average woman are most attractive and most interesting, because they are at the flowering time of life, the High Noon of youth. And that time is the Golden Thirties!

The Golden Thirties—when a woman's mind is ripe and her heart and sympathy are mellow, yet her charms have not begun to fade.

When a woman is sophisticated and poised—but not yet disillusioned.

When a man still has all his enthusiasms—but has parted with his youthful cockiness and swaggering.

When a woman has found herself, and serenity sits upon her brow—but the light of adventure in her eyes is as bright as ever.

When a man has discovered that love is not ALL sex, but something finer and tender and more lasting; and a woman has discovered that love is not "just a game"—but life's carbureter! When we have stopped posing—and begun understanding!

Flaming Youth is too self-conscious—too busy trying to set the world on fire to be "interesting." And this "life-begins-at-forty" stuff is just the bunk. Life begins in the cradle—and ends when your last enthusiasm dies out. But it is brightest and fairest and most INTERESTING at High Noon!

Glad Tides

Do not believe because my words are few
That I have faltered in my heart's devotion.
For I have not one thought but hastes to you.
You are the goal that quickens each emotion.
As tides of sap rush forward in the spring,
They are evoked by but one God, one king:
The sun, illimitably far out yonder.

So all my rising hopes toward you are turned.
And, while by devious ways my life is budding,
You warm my soul; no sun that ever burned
Sent such glad tides through lifted branches flooding.
And though my paths are intricate, involved,
By you the riddle of me must be solved.

American Naval Policy Indorsed by Italy

By James T. Williams, Jr.

ITALY will lay down the keels this year of two giant capital ships of 35,000 tons each, according to an official announcement from Rome.

President Roosevelt has good reason to be gratified by this decision. It is notice to the world that Premier Mussolini shares the belief of President Roosevelt that the capital ship is still the backbone of the fleet, and that the giant capital ship is more effective and more economical for certain nations than the smaller type.

One of the first decisions declared by Mr. Roosevelt after he entered the White House was in favor of the development of naval air force and in favor of the maintenance of our naval strength in capital ships. This decision squared with the unanimous opinion of the general board of the Navy over a long period of years.

What President Roosevelt was quick to see was that because the British navy finds a smaller type of capital ship better suited to its defense plans than the larger type, some Americans had jumped to the conclusion that this country should imitate the British navy, instead of adhering to traditional American policy of building a navy equal to the strongest in every class of combatant ship of the type best suited to American defense.

American Case Presented at Geneva

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE well understood this fact. The delegation which he sent to the Geneva conference of 1927 was headed by a statesman of the Navy who well understood this fact—Admiral Hilary P. Jones. And never was the American case more ably presented at any conference in modern times than this delegation presented it.

It was because President Coolidge refused to surrender the right of the United States, within limitations agreed upon at the Washington conference, to build the type of ships which this country requires instead of the type of ship which the British require, that the Geneva conference failed to force an American surrender.

"The vital necessity in our ships," as Admiral Jones has explained, "is 'power of survival.' This means not only ability to reach, operate in and return from, distant areas, in possibly wounded condition, but also the ability to give and take punishment with a fair chance against the predonderant numbers that may be brought into action by an enemy from his nearby bases or home port.

"Power of survival demands certain major characteristics that must be incorporated into a ship if it is to fulfill its proper function. The finished ship is a compromise of all the weights assigned to each characteristic so that its aggregate weight or standard tonnage shall not exceed the maximum allowed for its particular category. The weights assigned to battery, machinery, armor, fuel, etc., must be so co-ordinated that each will give maximum efficiency without prejudice to the others.

"Each of these should be the maximum possible without undue sacrifice of any of the others, having due regard to the strategetical and tactical functions of each category of vessel."

Better Protected Against Torpedoes

IN DECIDING to build two 35,000-ton capital ships, the Italian government is following the line of reasoning that has long determined American naval policy. In a 35,000-ton ship, which is the maximum tonnage allowed under the Washington treaty, it is possible, due to the width of beam, to have five skins between the outer water and the vitals of the ship, with efficient spacing between skins. With so many water-tight skins, the ship is the better fortified to sustain the explosion of torpedoes or airplane bombs against the underwater body.

Italy, like the United States and unlike Great Britain, has few naval bases. Italy therefore requires as the backbone of her fleet the largest type of capital ship. Premier Mussolini knows what President Roosevelt knows, what Admiral Jones and the general board of the Navy have long contended, that when you reduce the size of a capital ship, you reduce its power of survival. This is why the larger type is so necessary for the United States and Italy and not so necessary for nations like Great Britain "possessing well located bases or home ports close to the areas of operation."

The announcement from Rome may well remind the American people how fortunate they are in having in the White House today a President who knows all about the Navy.

Human Side of the News

Norman Selby, Better Known as Kid McCoy the Pugilist, Is Now Working on One of Henry Ford's Farms

By Edwin C. Hill

A VISITOR to one of Henry Ford's model farms out in the Ford domain adjacent to Detroit came upon a gray-haired man puttering about in fresh soil. There was something oddly familiar about the face of the gray-haired man, something familiar, even, about his carriage, the way he moved about.

And presently recognition flashed upon the visitor and he knew that the gray-haired man was one who had been a hobo, a counter-jumper, jeweler, hotel clerk, cabaret owner, Wall Street broker, soldier in the World War, vaudeville and movie actor and, at the height of his singular career, one of the finest heavyweight boxers who ever tied on a glove—Norman Selby, once of Logansport, Indiana, and much better known as Kid McCoy.

The Kid is 62 and has been working for Henry Ford ever since he was released from San Quentin Prison in California, where he had served eight years for manslaughter, the crime having been the killing of his eighth wife. He works mostly on the Ford model farms and does a bit of physical instructing on the side. And even at 62 the Kid can toss an agile glove and step one or two fast rounds.

It was an ex-boxer and old admirer of Kid McCoy, Harry Bennett, chief of the Ford detectives, who gave the Kid the job when he came out of prison, and there he works now, contentedly, it would seem.

Has Prison Record Without a Blemish

LIFE has its curious ups and downs and its strange twists of fate, and the career of Norman Selby is certainly a case in point. He was sentenced to serve 24 years for killing his sweetheart in a quarrel. But, always as cunning as a fox, he made a spotless prison record. It took him 59 years and cost him at least a million dollars to learn that even a fox can't beat the law. So he turned lamb and won his freedom.

I have known the Kid a long time, as champion boxer, soldier, motion picture actor in Hollywood and a man of many marriages. He never looked like a professional fighter. He used to be slim, smiling and smartly dressed, and roughnecks sometimes made serious errors concerning him.

Three tough-looking customers spotted him one day as he came out of a gymnasium all done up in his fancy clothes, including spats and a cane. One of the three stuck out an ugly jab.

McCoy stopped dead.

"Just repeat that remark," said the Kid gently.

"You heard me," growled the tough, "and I'm going to give you a spanking!"

Five minutes later when all three had picked themselves up from the sidewalk, rubbing their swollen jaws, one of them said to a highly interested newsboy:

The newsie grinned.

"You guys just made a little mistake," said the youngster, "You picked on the fella that knocked out the champeen the other night.

Maher Tricked In Second Bout

SHEER cunning won a lot of fights for the Kid. At the Old Coney Island Athletic Club, in his first fight with Maher, "The Irish Champion," McCoy kept Maher waiting an hour in the ring—in a great barn of a place as cold as Greenland. When McCoy finally showed up, Maher was so stiff with cold that he could scarcely bend his fingers. And McCoy very promptly knocked him out.

Some years later the celebrated Joe Humphreys matched Maher and the Kid for another fight. McCoy knew his best days had departed, so he went to Maher.

"Peter," he said, "I'm sorry about that affair at Coney Island. Let's let bygones be bygones. This bout of ours is for charity, and there's no sense in our pounding the daylights out of each other. Let's just give 'em a first-class exhibition with no hard feelings."

Through the first few minutes of sparring the foxy McCoy kept talking.

Now, Peter," he said, "don't hit too hard. You might cut loose and knock me senseless."

Maher grinned and nodded in his good-natured Irish way.

And then, just before the bell rang, the tricky Kid cut loose with a swing that started back near the entrance of the park and landed flush on Maher's jaw. Old Peter tried to work back to his feet, but he couldn't make the grade. And all the time he kept moaning:

"It's a mortal sin! Oh, it's a dirty crime! The deceitful spalpeen! The double-crossin' 'blayguard!"

They had to carry him out once more as McCoy made himself extremely scarce.
